Persian Balm is irresistibly appealing to all women who appreciate charm and elegance. Its use keeps the complexion always clear and beautiful. Tonic in effect. Stimulates the skin and makes it wonderfully soft-textured. Softens and whitens the hands. Persian Balm is equally invaluable to men as an excellent hair fixative and cooling shaving lotion. Splendid also to protect the tender skin of the child.

When you know a thing, maintain that you know it; when you do not know it, admit the fact — that is wisdom.—Chinese.

Recipe for Iced Tea

Use six heaping teaspoons of "Salada" Tea. Brew same in one pint of freshly boiled water for six minutes. Strain, and pour liquid into a two-quart container. While hot, add 1½ cups of granulated sugar and juice of two lemons. Then shake or stir contents until sugar is fully dissolved. Fill container with cold water—DO NOT ALLOW TEA TO COOL BEFORE ADDING THE COLD WATER; otherwise, liquid will become cloudy. This is now ready to serve in tall glasses with chipped ice or cups. A slice of lemon may be added if desired.

The above will make two quarts of iced tea, or seven tall glasses.

STAGNATION AND MORTIFICATION

Ontario's Liberal leader would cut the cost of government fifty per cent.

A tall order, but quite possible if Mr. Hepburn and his party are prepared to sacrifice progress and give the people of Ontario stagnation and mortification.

To cut his expenditures Ontario's Liberal leader, among other "economies" would wipe out the Ontario Department of Agriculture.

He has placed himself on record to effect this.

The Toronto Globe, in reporting his speech at a banquet in Toronto on December 15, 1932, says:

"The departments of Game and Fisheries, AGRICULTURE, Labour, and Mines, the Motion Picture Bureau, Research Work and Colonization were a few which Mr. Hepburn cited as departments where curtailment or ABANDONMENT of one service could be effected without hurting administration."

WHAT OF THE FARMER?

Possibly administration would not suffer.

But what would happen to the farmer?

Where would he be with his overseas selling agent gone merely to set up a record for low spending?

But it would be true economy to wipe out, at one enthusiastic gesture, the agricultural research which makes available to every farmer, without money and without price, all the resources of science, skill, knowledge and experience for the enlarging of output and the improvement of quality at lower operating costs?

WOULD THESE HELP?

Would it help the farmer to wipe out the department which held, for farmers and farm women, in 1933, a total of 93 courses in agriculture and home economics at as many centres throughout the province?

Would the immediate saving justify the elimination in every county of the trained agricultural representative, the man to whom the farmers look for advice in cases of plant or stock disease?

Through abandonment of the Ontario Department of Agriculture, Ontario's Liberal leader would abandon the Ontario Marketing Board.

Can the Ontario farmer afford to be without this board, or would its abandonment be another of the Costly Economies which Mr. Hepburn proposes.

The Ontario Marketing Board knew that fruit produced in Ontario was good fruit, but it knew also that it was not reaching outside markets in a way which made potential buyers aware of its goodness. Through co-operation with fruit growers, cooling places and a grading system were established.

In 1929, the year this policy was decided on, Ontario sold 65 carloads of apples beyond its own boundaries.

In 1933, the cooling places had been established, sales in Great Britain alone totalled 450,000 barrels, valued at $1,260,000.

In addition to this, there were correspondingly large sales on the continent of Europe and in the Canadian West.

In the same five years the export of pears and plums grew from practically nothing to more than 100,000 packages.

This is one service rendered by the Henry Government which the Ontario Liberal Party would wipe out in its effort to make good on the rash "economy" promise of its leader.

But this is only a small part of what the Ontario Marketing Board, product of the progressive Conservative administration, has done for the farmer.

PRICES WENT UP

In 1932 it saw another opportunity and this year saw Ontario Brewers who had abandoned Ontario barley using 1,000,000 bushels of this Ontario product at a price $150,000 above the current market quotation.

The board turned to the problems of the turnip grower. As a result of its first season's work the board obtained one contract for 1932 for 40,000 bushels and the price obtained now by the farmers is between 50 and 100 per cent. better than before the board became interested in the situation.

Export sales of cattle in 1933 for the whole of Canada totalled 50,217 head, valued at $3,189,194. Aggressive sales methods of the Ontario Marketing Board were responsible for TWO-THIRDS OF THIS TOTAL—31,783 HEAD, VALUED AT $2,014,471—GOING FROM ONTARIO.

What the Ontario Department of Agriculture and its subsidiary, the Ontario Marketing Board—the Department which Liberal Leader Hepburn would wipe out—has done for the bacon industry needs no comment. The figures speak for themselves.

BACON SALES JUMPED

In 1932 Ontario sold thirty million pounds of Bacon in the British Market. In 1933 the figure has grown to 40,000,000 pounds. AND THE FIRST FIVE MONTHS OF 1934 HAVE BROUGHT INCREASED BACON RETURNS OF MORE THAN $15,000,000 TO THE FARMERS OF THIS PROVINCE.

Export of dressed poultry has grown from a negligible figure to a total, in 1933, of $1,226,008.

To improve live stock herds of the province it agreed to pay twenty per cent. of the cost of pure bred sires. In 1932 alone there were 430 applications and $37,000 was paid. In the five years 642 approved herd sires were sent into Northern Ontario. On these the Ontario Government paid 30 per cent. of the cost, plus the freight.

Efforts of the department and co-operation of dairymen have improved the quality of the 86,000,000 pound annual production of Cheddar cheese from 89 per cent. first quality in 1924 to 96 per cent. first quality in 1932 and Ontario Cheddar Cheese now brings a premium of from two to three cents over cheese from other countries.

Ontario is the only province which loans money to farmers on the security of their lands and chattels. In 1933 it loaned in round figures, $6,700,000 to 3,415 applicants.

PLEDGED TO ELIMINATION

This is the department which Mitchell Hepburn, leader of Ontario's Liberal Party, has pledged himself to eliminate.

In one fell swoop he would wipe out a department which has done more than anything else in the Dominion of Canada to see the farmers of this Province through a period of agricultural depression.

Ontario cannot afford the loss of its Department of Agriculture.

Ontario must have construction under the progressive Henry Administration.

Destruction under Liberal leader Hepburn would mean ruin.

Signed: THE LIBERAL-CONSERVATIVE ASSOCIATION OF ONTARIO

YOU HAVE READ OF RUSSIA.

You know what farming in the land of the Soviet has become.

State collectivization with industrialization the supreme goal, has made the farmer little better than the beasts of the field, the hewer of wood and the drawer of water to the more favored classes, those to whom consideration looks for the ultimate success of its state industrialization experiment.

FARMERS MUST BE FREE

Ontario wants no "saving to the left". Its farmers must be left free. The men who, in 1932, produced $226,416,000 of this province's wealth, cannot be made the stepping stone for some radical experiment in state industrialization.

Farmer though he is, Ontario's Liberal leader is prepared to sacrifice his own friends, to betray his fellow workers in the fields in a frantic bid for control of Ontario's vast natural wealth.

By his own confession he "swings well to the left", towards the land where the communists, the socialists and the radicals dwell.

HIS OWN WORDS

Accept his own words to the electors of West York on May 14, 1932.

"I swing well to the left where some Grits do not tread."

Or take his speech to St. Thomas voters on February 11, 1933. Then the C.C.F., its ideals not yet analyzed, its impossible-to-be-achieved dreams still unexploded, had seized briefly on a part of the public imagination. Mr. Hepburn saw in it another opportunity for a bid for power at the expense of the solid, producing classes of the province. So seizing his opportunity, reckless nothing of what such a programme would mean, he said, in all the enthusiasm of his inexperience:

"The C.C.F. is an example of this realignment of political thought. It is the latest move in Radicalism. I sympathize with the people who make up the ranks of the C.C.F. They are trying, at least, to find a 'way out.'"

Estimates of the cost had been prepared by several oiling companies and the estimates were practically the same. In 1922 the work was done at a cost of $2,703, plus the labour. He thought it advisable to construct Simcoe and Donald Streets. The committee got out of this work was $2705.00 additional.

THE GRASSHOPPER CAMPAIGNS

The Canadian Insect Pest Review for May of the Dominion Entomological Branch in the 1933 summary on insect outbreaks of last year states with reference to grasshoppers that control campaigns involving the use of poisoned baits were actively carried out in most areas, and, despite many difficulties, resulted in the destruction of vast numbers of grasshoppers and the material saving of crops. In July and August, extensive dispersal flights of grasshoppers occurred in many parts of the infested region. As a result, practically all of the open prairie land of the three Prairie Provinces is now involved, and the areas of severe infestation have been considerably extended, except in Eastern Manitoba where there was an encouraging reduction. It is expected that during 1934 the outbreak will be even more intense and destructive than that of 1933, and consequently Provincial and Dominion authorities are furnishing a comprehensive campaign to deal with it.

BASEBALL NEWS
By G. E. GIBBARD.

Brighton will play in Napanee this Wednesday and if the contest is anything like the two which took place between this club and the locals last season, it should be a thriller. It will be recalled that both went extra innings and that Brighton played their best ball here. So far this year they have been beaten by Belleville and Picton and are due to win anytime. The Brighton lads like to play in the Napanee park and are confident they can chalk up their first victory.

The game between the A's and B's was rained out Saturday, but it is expected that it will be played on Thursday night.

Saturday, the Kingston Penies return the game which the locals played in Kingston early in the season. The A's have played the Penies in Kingston every year for the last three years and in each case lost out by a close score, late in the game. This is the first time the A's have had a game on the home diamond with last year's finalists, and are ready to give them a real battle.

Belleville Vics trotted out the almost new line-up last Wednesday and have a mighty strong team this year. Almost every player has had senior experience at one time or another. The Vics have had little practice as yet and will take a world of beating as the season rolls on.

Bob Greer of Wellington was suspended for the season by the O. B. A., for signing two certificates. He had been transferred to Belleville last winter and signed a certificate with the Crystalacs. Early in May he returned home and signed again with Picton. This is not the first time that Greer has been in trouble and it will be recalled that he was over irregularities in his certificate that the locals protested last fall, to the O. B. A. A. The executive are fully justified in their drastic action, in view of this second offence and will soon after the first, and it is to be hoped that Mr. Greer will be more careful in future.

Last week's scores:—
Gibbard's 6; Belleville 5.

Picton, 8; Brighton, 5.

Rotarians Meet

Rotary colors. Yellow, which is a part of the Rotary emblem, suggests, sunlight, warmth, youth, joy, health and happiness. Blue, the other color, brings to mind distant cool, blue skies, blue water, snow shadows, peace, quiet, repose and a feeling of dignity.

The two colors have been incorporated in the emblem of Rotary as being significant of the principles of warmth and good fellowship, established on a base of repose and dignity. Governor Allen closed his address on a high note, when he made an earnest plea that Rotarians keep out of the club, the vulgar; follow the lines of dignity and continue to play the game.

Evidence of the high regard in which Governor "Billy" is held and of appreciation for the inspirational address he gave, was shown when the members present rose to their feet and gave prolonged applause, following his address.

Musical entertainment was given by members of the Kingston Gananoque and Smiths Falls clubs.

A large number of Sunday School workers attended the convention of the Richmond Branch of the O. R. E. C., which met at Ebenezer, June 4th.

"Jesus Calls Us O'er the Tumult" appropriately opened the afternoon worship period, conducted by Rev. W. Craig.

The Secretary-Treasurer reported a grand total of 156 teachers and officers and 1283 pupils in the schools of the Township. The reports of the Departmental Superintendents indicated that progress was being made.

The convention caught the enthusiasm of its Secretary of Leadership Training. Dr. Smith is planning a Standard Training School to meet in Napanee this autumn. Meanwhile, he is co-operating with Rev. Mr. Craig in conducting a class to serve the rural districts.

Discussion Period

An interesting Round Table Conference, led by Rev. H. Mellow, of Ivanhoe, among other subjects dealt with:

(1) Summarizing effect of organized class work; an attempt to respond to the natural desires in young people for social and recreational life; a deeper understanding of the pastors of boys and girls, and intelligent effort to link these impulses to noble ideals. We were reminded that Trail Ranger, Tuxis, C. S. E. T. and C. G. I. T. programmes are prepared with an aim to develop the Christ like life.

The County President, Mr. W. H. Mills, spoke feelingly of "The Tewels and Her Task". Mr. Mills believes the Chinese saying that "nothing under heaven is greater than a teacher", especially when applied to Church School teaching. The task of the teacher was presented as: The revelation of the Word of God to her scholars; the leading of boys and girls into a vital personal relationship with Jesus, so that they will accept Him as their Saviour; development in the scholars Christ-like character, and sending them forth to render service to God and man.

It is said that America's greatest peril lies in her spiritual neglect of childhood. Surely there is no higher calling under heaven than that of the Sunday School teacher.

Evening Session

In the evening a short song service conducted by Mr. A. MacGregor, was followed by a devotional period led by Mr. Limbert Graham.

The Nominating Committee named the following officers:

President—Mr. Ronald Baker.

1st Vice Pres.—Mr. Garnet Dupree.

Children's Division—Mrs. A. MacGregor.

Youth Division—Mrs. Bert Elliott.

Boys' Division—Mr. Garnet Dunree.

Young People's Division—Mrs. Geo. Ham.

Assistant—Miss Mae Wilde.

Adult Division—Mr. Geo. Brooks.

Home Department—Mrs. Melville Windover.

Leadership Training—Dr. W. Smith.

Temperance—Mrs. E. Pringle.

Missions—Miss Hazel Baker.

The Resolutions Committee brought in the following resolutions:

1. That a letter of thanks be tendered to the Ebenezer people for their hospitality, and to the ladies for the bountiful supper.

2. That a letter of appreciation for the splendid leadership given during the afternoon session be forwarded to Rev. H. Mellow, Ivanhoe.

3. That a letter of sympathy be sent to Mrs. Geo. Price, who is at present in a Kingston hospital.

The Training Class be arranged to serve the rural districts.

Announcement was made of the first meeting of same, to be held on June 27th, at Sharp's Corners.

After the installation of the officers, Mrs. Bruce President was called upon to make a short address.

Music leaves were thrilled by the beautiful duet rendered by Messrs. Seymour and Barrett, of Napanee.

Rev. R. T. Richards' Address

A splendid climax was Rev. R. T. Richards' address. His subject: "What is Our Task ?", supplemented Mr. Mills' discourse of the afternoon, and embraced not only the teachers, but all Sunday School workers.

Mr. Richards said the aim of the Sunday School was to produce that atmosphere of reverence in which scholars respond to teaching. The Bible, as our text book, has a spiritual significance, dealing with every phase of life, but passages should be always in their own setting, and interpreted according to the development of the minds of the group. Finally, he stressed the far-reaching influence of the personality of the teacher.

We have no need to fear for the future of the Church, while Religious Education connects the life of its boys and girls, with high and lofty ideals.

Enthusiastic Meeting Conservative Women

Hear Most Instructive Address

A largely attended meeting was held on Saturday evening in the Napanee Town Hall, in the interests of Mr. Horace Colliver, the Liberal-Conservative candidate for Prince Edward-Lennox.

The meeting was called a "Women's Meeting", but was attended by a large number of men. It was presided over by Mrs. Grace McTaggart, the President of the Napanee Women's Liberal-Conservative Association.

On the platform with Mrs. McLaughlin were Mrs. Katharine Powell, Mrs. Morden Wesse, Mrs. Ross Bush, Mr. Ward, Mr. Colliver and Brig.-Gen. H. R. Hepburn.

Mrs. Powell, of Napanee, was the first speaker. She referred to Mr. Hepburn's "Liberal Leader" promises of discharging government employees, a thing which could not be done in the wholesale way he proposes. She said the Conservatives were a united party, while the Liberals are made up of several factions. Mr. Hepburn, himself, has a strong leaning to the reds. The Conservatives have a strong, businesslike platform, while as yet, Mr. Hepburn has failed to produce a platform of any sort.

The Candidate Speaks

In his address, Mr. Colliver, the candidate, dealt with the government's expenditures, which have been so much criticized by the Liberals. In 1932 the Henry Government forecasted, and expected, a deficit of two millions. By economy, by cuts in salaries of officials ranging from 10% to 25%, it actually had a surplus of nearly half a million at the end of the fiscal year. Mr. Colliver showed that all the Provinces in Canada under Liberal Governments last year showed deficits. He said the large debt of Ontario is much tallied about. In 1923 the debt stood at 293 millions. It has increased during the Henry administration by 299 millions. Mr. Colliver showed the cause of this increase. The Hydro had been loaned 135 millions, from which the Government gets a revenue of nine millions yearly. Speaking of the Hydro, the speaker showed that the Henry Government had done much for rural users of power. Continuing, he said that the Government had loaned farmers 35 millions and that extra five millions had gone for the purpose of cold storage plants. The rate of interest on farm loans was 5½%, a lower rate than can generally be secured. Through the Farm Loan Board a surplus of one million dollars has been turned back into the general funds of the Government. In addition, the Government had loaned the T. & N. O. Railway 13 millions for development in the northern part of Ontario. Taking the above figures into consideration, Mr. Colliver pointed out that the debt had really only been increased by 24 million dollars.

Mr. Colliver also spoke of the gasoline tax and motor license fees, which, he said, are lower in Ontario than in other Provinces. He showed that in the last seven years Prince Edward County had received back in grants $357,000 more than had been paid in through motor licenses. Lennox had received $417,000 more in grants in the same period.

The speaker also referred to the investment of 123 million dollars in roads, which has revenue only through the increased tourist traffic.

Government Legislation in Interests of Women

Mrs. Morden Wesse, of Prince Edward, dwelt on the benefits that had come to the women of the Province under the Henry Government through public welfare legislation, through furthering the work of Women's Institutes, and by health legislation.

She said there were two chief reasons why women should vote for the Henry Government: (1) Because of the inexperience of the Liberal leader, and (2) Because the Liberal party is divided and is trying to adhere to the principles of five different factions.

Compares the Candidates

Mr. Ward, in making a comparison of the two candidates for election in Prince Edward-Lennox, Mr. Colliver and Mr. Bowerman, said both had many qualities in common. Both are successful business men, but Mr. Colliver has had the advantage over Mr. Bowerman of having had eleven years' experience in Provincial politics, whereas Mr. Bowerman's experience has been confined to municipal life. Mr. Colliver last year served on six select committees in the House, and enjoys a fine reputation among his colleagues. Mr. Ward showed that Mr. Bowman's claim of having increased the County Grant much less than stated last year by 50% was not correct. He referred to Mr. Bowerman as being a political chameleon on the liquor question, a dry to the drys and a wet to the wets.

He considered the Government's attitude on the liquor problem the right one. As a lawyer he had found prosecutions under the Liquor Control Act much less than under the Ontario Temperance Act.

Mr. Ward branded Mr. Mitchell Hepburn as having a strong leaning towards the reds, and ridiculed the wild statements and promises he was making as being impossible of fulfilment.

Concerning the personell of the Henry Cabinet, Mr. Ward stated that in the eleven years of the Conservative administration there had not been one word of personal castigation against any individual member.

Following Mr. Ward, Mrs. Ross Bush and Brigadier General B. R. Hepburn also spoke in the interests of Mr. Colliver.

SUMMER SERIES MEETING W. I. HELD AT NEWBURGH

The summer series meeting of Moscow, Yarker-Colebrook, Camden East and Newburgh branches of the Women's Institute, was held in the Municipal Hall, Newburgh, on May 29th, at eight o'clock in the evening. Mrs. Graham, of 2 North Gore, was the guest speaker.

The meeting was opened by singing the Ode and repeating the creed. Mrs. George Walker, president of the Newburgh branch, presided and invited the presidents of the branches represented to come to the platform. The secretaries of the various branches gave very favourable reports of the work done during the year.

A delightful programme of instrumental and vocal music was given, each Institute contributing its share in making this a very enjoyable part of the meeting. Community singing was enjoyed by all. The speaker Mrs. Graham, gave a splendid and helpful address on canning fruits and vegetables, also some good recipes for soups, and bread making, hand lotion, etc.

Following these practical helps, she gave an interesting talk on the ode, taking each line and commenting on it. She then briefly outlined a musical contest which had been worked out very successfully in her own branch.

A hearty vote of thanks was given Mrs. Graham, and all who had assisted in making this meeting a success.

The hall was beautifully decorated with flowers.

The meeting closed by singing the National Anthem, after which a dainty lunch was served.

SWITZERVILLE MISSION BAND

The June meeting of the "Busy Bee" Mission Band was held at the school, on Wednesday afternoon, June 6th.

The president, Jean Amey, took charge of the meeting and after singing a hymn, the minutes of the last meeting were read and approved. The secretary, Ralph Wilson, then called the roll, to which fourteen members responded.

During the business period it was decided to hold the July meeting at the home of Mrs. Wales, on Friday afternoon, July 6th and also to begin work on picture scrap books the same day.

The Watchtower items on June 3rd were given by Verna Brandon; on Korea, by Doris Vandervoort; on Africa, by Maitland Clark, and on India, by Sally Lees, while Audrey Brandon read a very appropriate poem on temperance.

The call to worship by the president, was responded to in prayer by Roy Clark, and after another hymn the offering was received by Alice Hoerbourn and Mary Vandervoort.

The study period was in charge of Mrs. Wales, who told the story "The Doctor's Way," another story of the missionary doctor and Chinese life. This was followed by prayer, led by Arnold Clark and the allsung a prayer from I Corinthians, 16: 14 (R.V.) was taught by Vivian Craig.

The scripture story "Working together for God's House," was read by Miss Rutherford, after which the meeting was closed by singing a hymn, followed by the Lord's Prayer in unison.

ADOLPHUSTOWN W. M. S.

The June meeting of the W. M. S. of the U. E. L. United Church, was held on Wednesday afternoon, at the manse. There was a good attendance, The president, Miss A. Magee, occupied the chair. The devotional exercises were in charge of Rev. Mr. Saunders, who opened the meeting by the singing of hymn "I hear a Voice," followed by a scripture reading. Mr. Saunders took for his theme "Prayer and Common Worship," and gave us an interesting story of "The Church of the Many Lamps." All joined in repeating the Lord's Prayer after which a hymn was sung.

Tribute was paid to the memory of the late Mrs. Geo. McIlwaine, who passed on last week, and prayers were offered on behalf of her little children, that they might be comforted and sustained. The secretary read the minutes of last meeting, which were adopted. After discussion it was decided to hold the next meeting in the form of a basket picnic, on the grounds of the old Methodist church. A committee was appointed to make arrangements.

Word has been received from the executors of the estate of the late Miss Jennie Clark, that a bequest had been made to our Missionary Society. The treasurer, Mrs. J. Bird, gave her report.

The roll call was responded to by a verse of scripture, mentioning the word "neighbor." After another hymn and the collection was received the meeting closed with prayer. Grace was sung and refreshments were served by the hostess and a pleasant social time was enjoyed.

MAPLE RIDGE W. I.

The June meeting of Maple Ridge Institute was held on Thursday, June 7th, at the home of Mrs. Roy Robertson. The president, Mrs Cook, presided. The meeting opened by singing the ode, followed by the creed. The roll call was answered by "short

NEWS AND INFORMATION FOR THE BUSY FARMER

(Furnished by the Ontario Department of Agriculture)

O. A. C. Farm and Home Week June 20, 21, 22.

It has been found advisable this year, to limit the usual Farm and Home Week program at the O. A. C. to the three days, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday. The College is prepared however, to entertain as many farm guests as usual and all farm folk get away for a day or more will receive the same hearty welcome as usual and will be given as fine an opportunity to look over the buildings and grounds, to inspect special exhibits in the various departments and to get up-to-date information as in previous years.

The whole program will be carried through on Standard Time with the usual cafeteria lunch at noon and good accommodation for those who wish to remain for two or three days. There will also be excellent evening entertainment in Memorial Hall on Wednesday and Thursday evenings for those who remain over.

Light Weight Lambs

The marketing of light lambs at too light weights is a most unfortunate practice, since it incurs a heavy loss for producer and packer and causes a decrease in consumption. In the main, it is quite feasible for the producers to hold back their lambs until the animals have reached around 40 pounds and show reasonably good finish. Thin, underweight spring lambs sell for less than half the price of acceptable weights, well finished.

Beekeepers' Losses Heavy

Reports received from over 350 representative Ontario honey producers indicate that the number of colonies winter-killed was the largest in the experience of many beekeepers. One of them reports a loss of 200 colonies out of an apiary of 400 colonies. It is estimated that 15 percent of the total number of colonies were winter killed, or approximately 20,000 hives. The majority of bee-keepers report the condition of their colonies as being fair, with a few reporting conditions as less than ordinarily. Prospects for food supplies are none too favorable due to the extensive winter-killing of alfalfa and clover fields, the average loss for the province being 29 per cent. The 1932 output of honey had been well-cleared and supplies on hand for sales are generally below normal. From a price standpoint the future holds a possibility of an upward movement.

Current Crop Report

Continued drouth during the month of May in most districts of the province has seriously affected the hay crop. Fall wheat, strawberries, in fact the majority of crops have also suffered from lack of moisture. Frosts occurred in some parts of Ontario, with Grey County reporting a loss of 70,000 tomato plants in the night of May 24th. Grey and Bruce County reports sales of baby chicks by chick hatcheries well up to the average of recent years, with a pronounced drop in chick disease inquiries. 90 per cent of the baby chicks sold there were from blood-tested flocks. Essex has thousands of acres of good alfalfa and red clover, standing thick on the ground, but frosts and dry weather have held these crops back, too. York County estimates a loss of two-thirds of its hay crop. Crops of peas, oats, soy beans and millet are being sown to replace the lost hay crop. Prescott and Russell in Eastern Ontario reports that most of the shrubs, vines and fruit trees were seriously affected by cold weather last winter.

Pasture and Hay Grasses

Such grasses as red top, which have a creeping root system and grow from early spring to late fall, if the weather is favorable, are especially fitted for pasture as they stand trampling and provide green food the whole season. On the other hand, they are not good for hay, as most of the leaves are rather close to the ground. Timothy and similar grasses are less adapted for pasturing, as their bunchy growth and shallow root system make them liable to be uprooted, or at least injured by trampling. But, this type of grass furnishes excellent hay. To obtain a heavy yield it is not sufficient to choose grasses which are heavy producers when grown alone. They must be adapted to the soil and climate and be able to thrive together and make the best possible use of every inch of ground.

Fallows East and West

An excellent method of eradicating weeds is to place the land for one season in summer fallow. In Eastern Canada this method is very rarely employed, but in Western Canada the summer fallow is used not only to destroy weeds but to conserve moisture from one year to another. In Eastern Canada, on the other hand where sufficient moisture is usually available, the summer fallow is rarely used in rotations. Experiments show that, where weeds are not a factor, spring seeded crops do not give any larger yield when following summer fallow than when grown on land which has been cropped the previous year. On some fields, however, where the land is very badly infested with weeds, and where time and labor will not permit the necessary cultivation to handle these weeds in the regular rotation, a summer fallow may be necessary. Under these circumstances, the land should be plowed in the fall if possible, or, if not then, as early in the spring as circumstances permit.

The Farmyard is Quality

"If Canada is going to get its share of the British trade in poultry, in bacon, in live cattle, or in any other of its agricultural products, the value and necessity of doing things better not worse than competitors must be regarded at all Canadian Government Animal Products Trade Commissioner in London, England, during his present visit to the Dominion. "We made a good reputation with our fine packages of turkeys, because the quality was there and they were graded and packed according to government standards. The British trade responds when good done. The value of the market for Canadian poultry and other products and the password is quality.

"The season for exporting poultry to Britain should be designed for the 12 months of the year. Buyers over there do not want to change their source of supply if they can be assured of the demand being met at all times."

"Canada should follow the same policy in connection with the present opportunity open for the exporter of dressed chickens as it has done with turkeys exported to Britain for the 1932 and 1933 Christmas trade. The 1,000,000 pounds of turkeys shipped in 1932 were 100 per cent, as to quality, up to 1933 they were not quite so good as the previous year but this was due to some unusual difficulties associated with the shipping and are surmountable. Turkeys for the British Christmas trade must reach the buyers at least one week before Christmas day."

Drying-off Cows

The most economical period for a cow to be dry is six weeks. Some cows, however, are very persistent milkers and their owners do not like drying them off too suddenly for fear of causine udder trouble. There are three methods commonly used in drying-off cows, namely, (1) incomplete milking, (2) milking less frequently—usually once a day, and (3) ceasing to milk altogether. Experiments have shown that the last method is the best. Cows can be dried off the most rapidly, and without any ill effects to the udder, by ceasing to milk altogether even when there are giving up to 20 pounds of milk per day. Putting cows on dry feeds is a great help in drying them off.

Current Crop Report

Spring seeding is practically completed throughout the province. A large amount of extra work was necessitated in most districts as the result of winter killine of wheat and clover fields. Some County reports that considerable alfalfa seems to be recovering after having been damaged. In Halton the acreage of annual hay and pasture is estimated at three or four times that in any normal year. Crops being used are oats and peas, oats and fall wheat, oats and sweet clover, soybeans, millet and sorghums. In North Simcoe it is found that strawberries, raspberries, apples and other fruit trees and bushes were more seriously affected by winter injury than formerly believed. Lack of moisture during May caused considerable anxiety. In Prescott and Russell the effects of winter injury are more serious inroads upon many crops, with early garden crops being ruined, alfalfa and clover fields severely injured, survive. Essex anticipates the largest corn acreage on record. A total of 125 boys have entered in the boys' corn competition and seven clubs have been organized to date. An extensive hog development program is being planned by the new Swine Producers' Association in Essex. Alsike and red clover fields in Haldimand have suffered very greatly. Lambton reports a 10 per cent. increase in the acreage of sugar beets. More farmers than usual are sowing soybeans in Middlesex. Alfalfa and clover are showing up market improvement in Oxford, but many apple trees there show winter vitality after severe winter injury.

Swine Producers Lennox-Addington County Organize

A meeting of the swine producers of the County was held in the Agricultural Room in Napanee on Wednesday afternoon, June 6th, C. W. Buchanan, Agricultural Representative, acting as Chairman, called the meeting to order and explained the objects of the gathering. In explaining the objects of the organization he stated: "The movement is one that has been started in Western Ontario, and every county in the West to Lennox and Addington is already organized and a representative appointed to the Central Association, which will meet in the near future for the election of the permanent officers. The quality of the hogs in Eastern Ontario has not improved as rapidly as in the Western and Central part of the Province. Last year just about 60% of the hogs in this County were graded as "Selects", and there is need of concerted effort on the part of the hog producers to endeavor to raise the standard of hogs if we are to maintain and to take our place in the export trade".

By having a County organization many things can be done to improve the quality of the hogs by taking advantage of the policies of securing and breeding stock. Clubs of farmers having a total of 25 approved sows will be loaned high quality boars.

Swine Producers Provincial Secretary

Mr. W. P. Watson, Provincial Secretary of the Swine Producers' Association, was then introduced, and gave a very interesting talk to those present. Mr. Watson dealt with three phases of the industry. (1) Improvement of breeding stock; (2) Cost of production; and (3) Marketing. Breeding improvements are planned and many breeders now have their herds in the Advanced Registry. One testing station, similar to the Danish system, has been started near New Hamburgh, in Waterloo County, and it is hoped that a number of others will be started next year. The speaker stated that in Ontario only 25% of the hogs tested graded "Selects", and unless we can improve the quality we will not be able to supply our quota to the British market. We are allowed 280 million pounds, and last year exported only about 70 million of this quota, so that we still have a large margin on this market.

Grading of hogs on the rail was also discussed, and already some of the problems may be eliminated. If a Provincial-wide organization could deal with them.

It is hoped that this organization will receive the support of the swine producers of the County, that it may be a benefit to the men who are raising hogs.

Couch Grass Control

Out of twenty-two methods of eradicating couch grass tested by the Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa, the partial summer-fallow followed by an inter-tilled crop has given the most satisfactory results.

The partial summer fallow is commenced immediately after a crop of hay has been removed. The couch grass area is then ploughed to a depth of four inches and the furrows are worked down with a disk. After the sod has been sufficiently rotted the cultivator is used to bring the couch grass roots to the surface of the ground.

It has been discovered from experiments conducted by the Field Husbandry Division that three or four days' exposure of couch grass roots on the surface of the ground during warm dry weather is sufficient to kill them. For this reason cultivation should be repeated every three or four days during dry weather in order to bring a fresh layer of couch roots to the surface. The area partially summer-fallowed in this way is ploughed again in the fall to a depth of six inches.

In the following spring corn or some other intertilled crop is planted on the summer-fallowed area. The corn receives five cultivations and two hoeings during the growing season to keep down any remaining growth of couch grass. When one does not wish to grow an intertilled crop, a smother crop such as buckwheat may be grown instead.

Spring ploughing will work the previous working on the land, followed by an intertilled crop is a very effective method of controlling couch grass. Fall ploughing, which is the usual practice, is superior to spring ploughing, but it is also very ineffective. The partial summer-fallow by an intertilled crop is decidedly better than either spring or fall ploughing.

CANADIAN POULTRY OPPORTUNITY

The Dominion Department of Agriculture Egg and Poultry Market Review points out that there is an opportunity for both Canadian poultry producers and shippers, which if taken advantage of now, could be made effective for the present year's business. The striking annual Napanee Fair, which features of the market poultry situation is the unusually keen demand for export which has opened up beyond the expectations of even the most sanguine Canadian shippers. This situation has been brought about by two factors: first, the very favourable reception which Canadian chilled poultry shipments of the past two years have received, and, secondly the fact that the British tariff on poultry against foreign countries has directed more attention to Canada for supplies.

Hitherto it has been the impression that there was not very much light weight poultry available in Canada, but when the demand really developed it was surprising how much could be found, as is indicated by the inspection reports coming to hand. While there is undoubtedly a considerable market for the heavier weight chickens, yet it is clear from the information already received that the big demand is for the light and medium weight birds. It would appear, therefore, that both Canadian producers and shippers would be well advised now, early in the production season, to bend their efforts to the situation. It requires initiative and lead, and that lead must come from the shippers and exporters.

Chrysler Airflow Cars Feature Spring Action

Obviously one of the most important factors contributing to comfort in a motor car, is good spring action. In fact, no degree of real comfort is possible until this has been achieved. Chrysler cars have been famous for their easy riding qualities and much of their reputation in this respect has been built on scientific spring treatment.

When the Airflow Chryslers were designed, Chrysler engineers introduced the new element of periodicity corresponding to the natural movements of the human body in walking. "Periodicity" sounds like a formidable word, to be sure, but its application in the Airflow car is really very easily explained—just as the result in terms of improved riding qualities is very easily appreciated.

In plain terms, the new Airflow lowers the front spring periodicity from 120 to 140, as in the conventional car, down to a period of between 90 and 100 cycles a minute. Upon analyzing the natural gait of human beings it was discovered that the natural period of vibration caused by the steps taken in walking is between 90 to 100 cycles per minute. It was perfectly apparent to Chrysler engineers, then, that to produce the most restful car they would have to produce one having the same cycles as the natural walking gait of 2½ miles an hour

With the new Airflow Chrysler, the car body seemingly moves just as fast as the occupant moves. It seems to take the "Carr" if there is any abuse to be taken, and to save the passenger. There is no pitch; that causes fear or alarm and there is no tendency on the part of the occupant to grab for "assist straps" to steady himself. In fact "assist straps" have been eliminated in the new Airflow cars.

In reference to personal comfort it has been experienced that, with this new car a person can put his head back on the cushion, due to the lack of these so-called snappy vibrations, and sleep in comfort. There is no bobbing up and down of the head, nor the pitching that is so common in the conventional car. For this reason, one can read without exertion. One even can study and follow road maps while the car is travelling at high speeds over bumpy roads—something which could be done even in pullman cars in complete comfort. As for writing, that can be done as comfortably as on the desk at home.

APPLE APHIDS AND THEIR CONTROL

Practical information on apple aphids, commonly known as plant lice, and their control is given below by Mr. C. E. Petch, of the Dominion Entomological Laboratory at Hemmingford, Dominion Department of Agriculture. There are three aphids affecting apple trees; green apple bud, and rosy. The green apple aphid spends all its time on the apple; the other two only part of the time. The green and the apple bud aphids attack the terminal buds and suckers; the rosy aphid, the dower buds on the lower part of densely wooded trees. The green apple aphid is green in color; the apple bud aphid is yellowish green with three dark lines on the back and black antennae; the rosy aphid in its wingless form is bluish; the winged females have black thorax, red abdomen and long black honey tubes.

These insects injure the leaves by sucking the juices. If very abundant, they attack the fruit when it is young and cause it to become dwarfed and malformed. Summer infestations of green apple aphids do most damage and may cause a sooty condition of apple by the depdition of honey-dew. Aphids have tremendous powers of reproduction, but their numbers are reduced by natural causes, one of which, temperature, is very important. Aphid outbreaks can not be foretold and early applications of nicotine sulphate will not prevent summer infestations which are the most important. Since aphid outbreaks are not common, especially on bearing trees, any general policy of annual spraying with nicotine sulphate could not be supported. For very important reasons—namely, excess costs for small gains—the spray service should not conduct a special campaign against aphids.

Rosy apple aphids are very largely controlled by proper pruning practices on large bearing trees which are densely wooded. The apple bud aphid depends to the secondary host—grains and grasses —fairly early in the season and is not apt to cause any real injury. The green apple aphid treatment depends upon whether the trees are young or old. If the terminal wood of young trees contains large numbers of eggs, the trees should be sprayed with nicotine sulphate after most of the eggs have been hatched. In cases of heavy summer outbreaks, both bearing and non-bearing trees should be sprayed when the aphids are commencing to go on the apples. Extremely heavy infestations may require one or two additional applications. A spray of nicotine sulphate 1 pint; water 100 gallons; laundry soap 8 lbs. makes a good killing mixture. Soap should be omitted if nicotine sulphate is used with lime sulphur.

Bordeaux Dust

In combating flea beetles, or in treating potatoes for insect enemies, a Bordeaux dust may be used in place of the regular poisoned Bordeaux spray. Such dusts can be purchased from all commercial spray companies, ready mixed, or they may be prepared on the premises, provided a good mixing machine is available. The following is the standard formula for Bordeaux dust: Copper Sulphate (dehydrated, and ground very fine) 12 pounds; hydrated lime, 80 pounds; arsenate of lime, 8 pounds.

Do We Want a Repetition of 1919 to 1923?

After the Ontario general election of 1919, owing to a peculiar series of events, a group of inexperienced politicians acquired the reins of Government. They knew comparatively little of public affairs, and had little or no administrative experience to their credit. The new Ministers took over their portfolios with great zest and with fervent pledges that they would run the country much more honestly and much more effectively than their predecessors. Very little time elapsed, however, before it became apparent that these millennialists possessed weaknesses like other human beings. Owing largely to their lack of experience, they made a sad mess of public business, and when at the next elections they were driven from office, one Cabinet Minister and some others involved with the administration were sent to the penitentiary.

SHANNONVILLE

Shannonville, June 11. — While the members of the household were enjoying the cool evening' breezes on their front verandah, sneak thieves stole two gold rings and other household articles from the home of Fred Buscard early Sunday evening. The loss was reported to the police on Monday morning, who investigated. It was later disclosed that, undoubtedly, transients had taken the articles reported missing, as the kitchen cupboard had also been ransacked and a quantity of groceries and other foodstuffs taken. A man's sweater coat was also reported missing. The thieves also entered the home of Mr. Oren White and took a sum of money.

A new political party has been formed in Cecho-Slovakia—a Debtors' Party. Its promoter says that, as nearly everybody in Carpathian Ruthenia is heavily in debt, his followers ought soon to be the largest political party in the province. There is no news yet of what sort of a shirt the Debtors' Party has selected —something a dun-coloured with a handsome red border of final demand note's would seem to be indicated.

Overdrafts will be worn at all party gatherings, and instead of exploring every avenue and leaving no stone unturned, all speakers will insist on the necessity for barring every door and putting everything behind it in the wife's name. The party's programme will, presumably, demand the immediate abolition of all bills, bailiffs, bankruptcy courts, and bookkeeping by double or any other form of entry. Its grand, rallying point and people's charter will be the slogan: "We can't get blood out of a stone, does one ?" — Miscellany.

Whoever is in a hurry, shows that the thing he is about is too big for him.

SHE LOST 32 lbs.

NEW FROCKS NO LONGER WORRIED HER

"How did she lose that 32 lbs. of fat ?" is what you will be asking. Let her tell you herself :—

"About 18 months ago I weighed 178 lbs. — which I can assure you stinoyed me very much. Everything seemed a worry to me, especially new clothes. Nothing would fit me comfortably, and walking was unbearable. I was advised by a friend to try Kruschen Salts, and I am very glad I did, too. During the first ten months I lost 28 lbs. of fat. Now, for the last six months my weight has been 146 lbs., and I feel much better in health. I have all my weight tickets to substantiate my statements."— (Mrs.) M. P.

Kruschen contains those six mineral salts proportionately balanced, found in the waters of those famous European Spas used by generations of fat people to reduce weight.

Kruschen helps the blood, nerves, glands and body organs to function properly—you gain more strength and energy—feel years younger — look better, work better.

TAMWORTH

Tamworth, June 11. — The business section of the village closed on Wednesday afternoon of last week, for the first half holiday of the season, and will continue to do so during June, July, August and September. Several from the village wended their way to different lakes and streams. Some were successful in securing a good catch of fish, while other suffered severely from mosquitoes and black flies.

Hard times must surely be coming to an end, as we have had two weddings and two births in our vicinity during the past week. On Tuesday morning, Miss Reta Hinch became the bride of Mr Leo Barrett, and on Wednesday morning, Miss Lavinia became the bride of Mr. Ed. Hopkins. Both couples were married at the Church of the Assumption at Erinsville, Rev. Father Powell officiated. The births are to Mr. and Mrs S. Prue, a daughter, and to Mr. and Mrs Randel York, a son. Both babies were born at the Hotel Dieu Hospital, Kingston.

The local softball team journeyed to Newburgh on Monday afternoon and played with the Newburgh team. The local girls brought home the laurels, the score being 11 to 4 for Tamworth.

A large congregation gathered at Christ's Church on Tuesday evening of last week, where a memorial service was held for Rev. J. A. Posten, who passed away at his home near Kingston. Rev. Mr. Posten endeared himself to a great many people while he was at this parish, a short time ago and their sorrowful response to the hurriedly called service, on Tuesday night, showed the esteem in which he was held. Rev. A. Redding conducted the service throughout, which was most impressive.

Mr. William Lott had the misfortune to have his knee injured while working on the highway north of Erinsville.

Mr. G. L. Wagar is improving the appearance of his property, by painting his house. W. G. Richmond is doing the work.

Miss Esther Cournoyea and Miss Marian Richmond have returned to the Ontario Hospital, Kingston, where they are nurses-in-training, after having spent the past eighteen days holidaying at the homes of their parents, here.

Mr. Albert Hasley, who has been working on the highway north of Mellon's Corners, was brought home a few days ago with a badly broken ankle.

The heavy rain of Saturday afternoon and Sunday morning was very much appreciated.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Leslie of Port Colborne, were recent visitors at the home of Mrs. E. M. Pringle, Hazes' Corners.

The Church of the Assumption at Erinsville was the setting for a very pretty early June wedding on Tuesday morning, June 5th, at ten o'clock, when Reta, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Hinch became the bride of Leo Barrett, third son of Mrs. Joseph Barrett and the late Joseph Barrett. Rev. Father Powell officiated and Miss Helen York presided at the organ and played the wedding march.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. IT'S LIVER THAT MAKES YOU FEEL SO WRETCHED

Wake up your Liver Bile

—No Calomel necessary

For you to feel healthy and happy, your liver must pour two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels, every day. Without that bile, trouble starts. Poor digestion. Slow elimination. Poisons in the body. General wretchedness.

How can you expect to clear up a sillsation like that completely with mere bowel-moving salts, oil, mineral water, laxative candy or chewing gum? Calomel? Why, that won't wake up your liver.

You need Carter's Little Liver Pills. Purely vegetable. Act on liver and cure results. Ask for them by name. Refuse substitutes. 25c, at all druggists. 54

Grand Master Attends

The toast to the Grand Lodge was proposed by Bro. Correll, manager of the C. D. S., Napanee. Bro. Correll spoke of his work as an Orangeman and especially in his work in the Orange Association when overseas with the Canadian soldiers.

The toast to the Grand Lodge was replied to by Bro. H. B. Petterley of Belleville, Grand Master of the Orange Association of Eastern Ontario. Mr. Petterley, in his remarks, showed not only the growth that the organization is making, but also some of the splendid things it is doing in these days. He made special reference to the Rahard case in Montreal, and the way in which the Orange Association assisted Mr. Rahard in his court case. Mr. Petterley also spoke of the work in his institution for the deaf, Belleville, of which he is the superintendent.

At the close of the meeting, the chairman thanked the speakers for their inspiring messages, Mr. Scilley who had planned the banquet, the L. O. B. A. who had served such a wonderful repast, and the Centreville Lodge for their very kind and efficient co-operation.

At 11:00 p.m. the meeting was brought to a close by the singing of the National Anthem.

Miss Nolan Attends Telephone Pioneers Meeting

The Charles Fleetford Sise Chapter of the Telephone Pioneers of America is holding its annual convention at Toronto, on Friday and Saturday, June 22nd and 23rd.

The Telephone Pioneers of America was organized in November, 1911, on a continent wide basis, as the name implies. The requirement for membership is 21 years service in the telephone industry, not necessarily confined to the Bell Company. The membership, of course, was small at the beginning, embracing only those who had seen service prior to 1890, but has since grown to an enrolment of thirteen hundred members in Canada.

Outside of the personal association which membership accords, the organization serves the useful purpose of instilling in the present members of the telephone family the traditional spirit that has made the telephone service of this continent the best in the world.

The President of the Charles Fleetford Sise Chapter is Mr. R. C. Douglas of London, and the Vice-President, Mr. D. M. D'Albenas, of Montreal

Miss Mary Nolan, who has had charge of the Napanee office of the Bell Telephone Company for some years is a member of the Chapter. She expects to attend the Convention at Toronto, this week.

Enterprise Won Close Game From Gibbard 'B' Team

Probably the best game of baseball ever played in the village of Enterprise was played, on Saturday afternoon, when the heavy-hitting Gibbard "B" team and the Enterprise team "The Old Gaurd" met in a league fixture. Both teams put up a classy exhibition of the hit and run game, marked by brilliant fielding and sensational pitching by both teams.

Seven innings were required before the deciding run crossed the plate, the score ending Enterprise 2, Gibbard's 1.

Heaving for Enterprise, Spratt bestrode the mound like a colossus, striking out twelve men, allowing seven scattered hits and gave one base on balls. He used his famous fade-away ball and at times his speed was terrific.

Card, for Napanee, pitched a very masterly game, giving eight hits, two bases on balls and struck out ten batters.

Gibbard's scored their lone tally in the first frame. "The Guards" failed to score until the eighth, when Deverde Wagar singled and scored the lying centre on Glen Wagar's double to deep centre. Again in the tenth the Wagar Brothers came into the limelight when Deverde singled and scored the winning run on Glen's tremendous wallop to centre garden.

Milo Jackson had a great day in the field, taking in five putouts, four of them at centre for Napanee, made a wonderful catch while running at great speed. A neat double play was pulled off in the seventh when D. Wagar took in a high fly at deep centre and made a great peg to second, cutting off the runner by inches.

Up until the eighth inning, it looked as if Napanee were going home with a 1 to 0 victory stowed away in their clubhouse. The fans failed to lose heart. But Capt Wagar reminded them that the "Guards" never quit. He then went in and tied the score, and in the tenth, won the game, after making his third hit of the game.

Commemorative Service Held at Adolphustown

A special service commemorating the Fiftieth Anniversary of the laying of the corner stone of the Centennial U. E. L. Church at Adolphustown and also the 150th anniversary of the landing of the Loyalists at Adolphustown, on June 16, 1784, was held in the Centennial U. E. L. Church, Sunday evening, June 17th.

The speaker for the occasion was the Rev. R. A. Whattam, of Toronto, who spoke very effectively on the vital religious experience and steadfast devotion of the founders and pioneers. Speaking from the Scripture of Psalm 48, 11-13, Mr. Whattam drew forceful comparisons in relation to the homeland of the Loyalists' faith.

A large congregation assembled for this occasion, and the pastor, Rev. Harold Sanders, who was in charge, called the honor roll of those who were members of the church at its building, fifty years ago, and who still worship with us. These were:—Mrs. Richard Carr, Mrs. Robert Cousins, Miss Amanda Hart, Miss Deborah Hawley, Mrs. Ryckerson Hawley, Mr. Joseph B. Allison, Mr. John Hunterley.

An interesting fact of the evening's programme was the acceptance of the minister of the first work done by the Ladies' Aid in support of the building fund of the church. This is a beautiful piece work autograph quilt, presented to the parsonage, by Mrs. Cole, and to be cherished by succeeding ministers, as a token of the loving support of the women of the congregation.

DEMOCRACY AT WORK

There was no mistaking the temper of the people in Ontario yesterday. The overwhelming victory of the Liberal Party is a vindication of our democratic machinery. It affords the only means whereby the average citizen may express his opinion on public matters. The swing of the pendulum from one extreme to the other, however, will place a severe strain on the courage and restraint of the New Premier as it did on that of the present Leader. Undoubtedly, one of the underlying causes for the defeat of the Henry Government was the great majority it held in the House. A strong, vigorous constructive Opposition is the surest safeguard of good government.

There are many contributing factors in the present reversal of public opinion. One of them was the general unrest of the time. The economic situation the world over is disturbed, and in a state of uncertainty. Men are out of work; wages when earned are inadequate; the price of farm produce is pitiably low; the taxes are high. Under those circumstances there is no way in which the man on the street may express his dissatisfaction, save through the ballot. Naturally, when he has the opportunity he votes against the party in power. There is no one else whom the average man can blame for the hard times, except the Government. And he registers that blame by his ballot.

In addition to that, many people who regularly support the Conservative Government, turned against it because of its attitude on beer and wine. When Hon. Howard Ferguson deliberately made a political issue of the liquor question, he gained a temporary success, but paved the way for the defeat of his successor. There is a Nemesis which dogs the footsteps of every political party which tampers with the traffic.

The charge of extravagance, made so persistently and so continuously throughout the campaign, had a wide appeal to men and women who are having a hard time to make ends meet. To be sure the Government of Ontario overbuilt its roads. But every other institution in Canada was doing likewise in those halcyon days of 1926 - 1929. The Banks overbuilt, the Churches overbuilt, Railroads overbuilt, office buildings and apartment houses overbuilt. The Government, in its over-expansion, merely reflected the mood of the times. Neither the Government nor private enterprise anticipated the depression.

The New Government will have an unprecedented opportunity and a grave and heavy responsibility. They come into office with no mistakes to live down, no unhappy history to forget. Much of its success will depend on the character of the men who will constitute the New Cabinet. Mr. Hepburn, in the midst of his campaign, has made many hasty threats and rash promises. As he assumes responsibility for governing the Province, many of those threats and promises will be modified. For nothing has so sobering an effect as the responsibilities of office.

Never, in recent years, has the Province witnessed so bitter and strenuous a campaign. But now Ontario has spoken and as the tumult and the shouting dies, much that was bitter and partisan will be forgotten; nerves that have been frayed will be rested; friendships temporarily broken will be renewed, and the work of governing this great banner Province will proceed. Business, naturally disturbed by the uncertainty of the campaign, will prepare to take advantage of the upswing, which is already visible on the horizon.

NEWSPAPERS, REFORMERS, AND CONSISTENCY

Confistency is often misunderstood by those who have not thought deeply enough into what is involved in being consistent. Tens of thousands of people, for example, might be charged with inconsistency because they preach one thing and practice another. There is a sense in which that is inevitable. There is a sense in which every idealist must, as well, be a realist, simply because he lives in a certain historical situation, at a definite period of time. For example, we may protest against the conditions under which the cotton pickers of the south, labor; we may protest against the injustice under which the cotton mill operatives work; we may protest against the long hours of the girls in the shirt industry. But we must wear shirts. Our law insists that we must wear clothing or languish in jail, even though we are moved to tears by the mass buying which forces men and women to live on unbelievably low wages.

Reformers may protest against the present marketing system which sets the price of wheat at such a low rate, that the farmer is reduced to penury and near slavery. But, we must eat bread. We can quite consistently fight against the price fixing which the Stevens Committee has shown, controls the price of beef and hogs, but even as we protest, we must eat meat.

In like manner, we may raise our voices against a monetary system which is not meeting the needs of the days, and even make suggestions as to its improvement, but in the meantime, we have to use dollar bills, if we can get hold of them.

The whole point of this editorial is, to maintain that consistency does not and cannot in the nature of things, mean that men, newspapers and institutions which suggest changes and improvements in any area, should refuse to use the prevailing system until that for which they plead is established. To so interpret consistency would rule out all the great reformers who have ever lived.

We have repeatedly maintained in these columns our belief that the unrestricted competitive system of the present day has failed miserably. In the meantime, bills have to be met, wages have to be paid, goods have to be bought if we are to continue in business at all. There is nothing inconsistent in that.

Probably, no man in all the world more nearly approcahes the ideal of a self-sacrificing reformer than Kagawa, of Japan. And yet, Kagawa receives gifts of money from friends in America in order that he may carry out his work of service to the dwellers in the slums of Osaka and Kobe. This money is made under a system against which Kagawa is continually protesting. Surely there is nothing inconsistent in that.

Gandhi can spin his own loin cloth and raise his own goats. That is possible in India, where weather conditions permit. But if Gandhi had been in Napanee last February when the temperature was 50 below, he would have had to live in a heated house. The coal he burned would have been mined by men who work at starvation wages, and the lumber would have been cut in camps where men work for a mere pittance. When Gandhi travels he goes in a car. The car is manufactured under conditions against which Ghandi's whole life is a protest. But Gandhi has to travel.

If a person is to work for a change in the social and economic conditions so as to increase the welfare and happiness of the world the first necessity is that he must live, and in order to live, he must exist under the very conditions against which he must strongly protests. Of course, there can be nothing inconsistent in that.

THE MOVIES UNDER FIRE

For several years the great Protestant bodies, particularly of the United States, have given a great deal of thought and study to the effect of the movies on the youth. Valuable research work has been done by Fred Eastman of Chicago, and by the Federal Council of Churches of America. But research and the appeal to conscience has been slow to change the practices of the Hollywood producers, who are more interested in box office receipts than they are in the effect on character, of their pictures.

Now, the Roman Catholics, with characteristic energy and definiteness, have taken up the cudgel. They are approaching the matter in a more direct way, that the result cannot fail to make the producers take cognisance of the wide spread dissatisfaction with the modern movie producers. Over a million persons have already signed the following pledge of decency sponsored by the Roman Catholic Church in the United States:

"I wish to join the Legion of Decency, which condemns vile and unwholesome moving pictures. I unite with all who protest against them, as a grave menace to youth, to home, to life, to country, and to religion.

"I condemn, absolutely, those salacious pictures, which with other degrading agencies, are corrupting public morals and promoting a sex mania, in our land.

"I shall do all that I can to arouse public opinion against the portrayal of vice as a normal condition of affairs, and against depicting criminals in any class, as heroes and heroines, presenting their filthy philosophy of life as something acceptable to decent men and women.

"I unite with all who condemn the display of suggestive advertisements on bill-boards, at theatre entrances and in newspapers, and favorable reviews often given to immoral motion pictures, in the daily press.

"Considering these evils, I hereby promise to remain away from all motion pictures except those which do not offend decency and Christian morality. I promise, further, to secure as many members as possible for the Legion of Decency.

"I make this protest in a spirit of self respect and with the convictionis that the American public does not demand filthy pictures, but clean entertainment and educational features."

While we, in Ontario, have a Board of Censors who scrutinize all films and remove many objectionable features, yet the movement such as that sponsored by the Catholic Church, will be welcomed by all lovers of true entertainment and interesting pictures. The ready response of all creeds to this appeal of the Catholic Church, shows how public opinion has been misjudged by the great producers, whose plea has always been that they have had to give the people what they demanded. It is estimated that within a few months, ten million people will have signed this protest. Then, perhaps, we shall see the movie industry producing better and more interesting films for the amusement and instructioni of the travelling public.

MRS. F. F. MILLER WRITES FROM INDIA

Srinagar, Kashmir,
May 13th, 1934

Dear Mrs. Templeton :—

Many thanks for your nice long letter which arrived April 9th. In all the rush of getting ready to come up here, I seem to have mislaid it. Hope it will turn up in a day or so, so I can answer any questions you may have asked.

The last month in Peshawar was particularly gay.—Everyone seemed determined to have a clean slate so far as entertaining went, before going on leave either to England or on short leave to one or another of the hill stations. There were dinners, luncheons, cocktail parties galore. Col. Pollard, from Rawalpindi (mindi for short) was with us for a few days and there was a constant round of entertaining or being entertained. There were three "Ayah" garden parties within ten days, as well as the golf and polo finals to go to.

We left Peshawar the second of May and unless our places are changed, will not go back until the middle of October. Last year we went down the last of September and it was very hot the first week in Rawalpindi. David and I led the wilted, and believe me, when it is hot in India it is H-O-T.

Miles and his wife came back from Bengasi on April 4th, just in time for David's birthday party on the 6th. He is two years old and talks a steady stream, puts sentences together—so one can understand him.

I had such a nice Australian girl with me for a few days. The friends with whom she expected to stay had unexpected visitors for a few days, so I volunteered to take her camping with me. She had such a funny name —Dea, de-Hoedt—Her father runs a very large sheep ranch, about sixty or seventy thousand sheep. She is her father's assistant on the ranch. I was sorry when she left, I liked her so much. While she was with me we went to Peshawar City one morning and were fortunate enough to find the native mission church open. There were many interesting things to see. A very large white marble font at one side, raised about a foot above the floor had six steps leading down to a small platform. This is used, in the warm weather, for immersions. I'd never seen one like it even in a Baptist church. The altar rail, choir stalls and pulpit are of beautifully carved wood and a wonderfully carved screen is at the back of the altar. About twenty white marble memorial tablets are around the walls, some for very prominent English people who lived in Peshawar years ago, others for natives. One tablet was in memory of an Afghan robber who had become a Christian and later was clergyman. His son happened to be in the church with the native clergyman we were introduced to him. He was very good looking and spoke very good English. The head Padre is an Englishman, and his family live near us in Peshawar. We spent about an hour and a half in the church, there was so much to see.

A few Sundays later I was invited by the English Padre and his wife, to go with them to 8 morning service. The church was almost full, it seemed so full, all but ourselves being Indian. It is an Anglican church and the service was a communion service, so I could follow it very well though it was all in Indian. The sermon I could not understand at all. The tunes of the hymns were very familiar, but, of course, the words were strange to me. After the service, friends of ours who are friends of the Padre, had their wee son, Christened. That service was, of course, in English. There are, I was told, about two thousand members of the church, men and women. Altogether it was a very interesting morning. Later I told the Padre I had enjoyed the service very much but was afraid I had "rubbered" more than I had prayed.

The following Sunday we were invited to Barra Port, which is seven miles out of Peshawar, to watch the Royal Anthem, the flag was raised. Half way up it seemed to stick for a second and everyone gasped as it was supposed to be bad luck for it to stick on the way; but it was hardly noticeable and before we knew it it was at the top. After more drinks and ice cream and cake, instead of soup, we said good-bye to Col. and Mrs. Rim—the former is in command of the Fort and they live in Peshawar.

We left for the Peshawar Club where we were the guests of Capt. and Mrs. Scott at tiffin. Sunday tiffin is supposed to be something special at the Club, but that day it was absolutely "punk". We would have had better at home. Col. Pollard, of Rawalpindi, was our guest for several days and thoroughly enjoyed all the doings. Capt. Scott is one of Miles' junior officers.

Col. Pollard, Miles and I went to a betrothal Purdah party one afternoon, to meet the Postmaster General of the frontier, and his wife. Of course, Miles and Col. Pollard, the guest of honor, and about a dozen other men had their tea with the host in a tent in one garden, while the Postmaster General's wife and about ten purdah ladies had tea in another garden, surrounded by a high wall. There were several beautiful saris and there being no men present none of them wore their purdah veils. Two sisters of our hostess had recently become engaged but will not be married for some time. I do hope we will be invited to the wedding. I'm very anxious to attend one. Our hostess was a very pretty young woman. It was rather an uncomfortable party for only one lady beside Mrs. Angela and I spoke English; she spoke very little Hindustanese and I, none at all. The tea itself was very ordinary, sandwiches and Indian cakes, which are never very good, and tea.

While Miles and his wife were in Belgaum, the chauffeur whom they had had so long turned very tricky and quarrelled with all the servants there as well as Miles' own, and they had to let him go. He accused Miles' bearer and the "dusi-bearer of carrying tales and said if they came to Peshawar, he would kill them. He's a Pelan, one of the fiercest tribes of the frontier, who think no more of killing a man than we do of killing a fly. They refused to come to Peshawar, not belonging to the fighting class. So now, the orderly (we call him "Betty," for he has been promoted and now drives "the Duchess.") And is he proud ! Being an orderly, Sepoy, he is above the rest of the servants and his people are quite well to do. His one ambition is to be a soldier and to drive a car, either privately or in the army.

We left Peshawar at noon on May 2nd, by car with our luggage. The servants having left a few hours earlier. Nancy's pony also came in the lorry with the syce. The Ayah came with us in the big car. We did not have nearly as much luggage or as many servants as last year. We are not going on a house-boat this year but are renting a garden cottage with boy, David, is altogether too strenuous and would either have to be watched every minute or be tied up. Also Miles and his wife will not be here the best part of the summer. They are going to Bombay, next week, and from there are taking the S. S. "Mutan" to Australia. They will be away a little over two months, joining us then in Gulmarg. We will go to Gulmarg as soon as it gets really hot here, which will likely be sometime in July. We had a very delightful trip here, just warm enough for comfort and not too sunny. All the canyons on the way were huge fields of ripening grain, etc. The rice sections (one cannot call them fields), had already been planted and were filled with water—the rice grows best that way and as rice is one of the principle native foods, there are hundreds and hundreds of sections. There are many different qualities of rice, and of a different shade of green, making a very artistic showing, later on. I always remember the words "Paddy green" referred to Ireland, but the green of rice is much more vivid, and referred to the green of the rice growing in India. We brought our own drinking tiffin baskets with us and had tiffin on the way, near Attock and reached Mansera in time for tea. We stopped at the Dak Bungalow for dinner, the night and breakfast and the first glimpse of the view of the Himalaya Mountains all around us was glorious,—the nearer mountains being tipped with snow, those farther away completely covered. The sun shining on them was a lovely sight. We left soon after breakfast and, for miles, rode parallel to the Jhelum river, hundreds of feet below us. The road we were on was quite wide and we climbed steadily for hours.

CANCER'S INCREASING DEATH TOLL

One person out of every 855 living in Ontario will die of cancer this year if the present rate is maintained. The Toronto statistics are even more startling. In the provincial capital this one disease will claim one out of every 680 inhabitants. Dr. J. W. Mitchell, who has given much progressive figures as to the increase of deaths from cancer in the province. By five-year periods the number of deaths and the rate per 100,000 has been as follows :

Year	Deaths	Rate
1912.....	1,778	69.3
1922.....	2,666	93.1
1932.....	3,825	110.0

Dr. McCullough indicated that the mortality rate made a further rise to 113 in 1933. The Toronto rate topped 147. Medical science has done great work in curing such diseases as syphoid fever, smallpox, tuberculosis, diphtheria and diabetes. But the cancer problem remains still to be solved. The extent of that problem is indicated by the figures given. — Toronto Star.

HOW PROSPERITY AIDS JAPAN

While statistics have been available in abundance to show how prosperity is returning to various countries on both sides of the Atlantic, we have not concerned ourselves at all as to the effect that the slow passing of depression is having upon the Orient, and upon Japan in particular. Yet a consideration of available data provides some significant facts.

The Trans-Pacific of Tokio has published a brief survey of the operations of 1,350 joint-stock Japanese concerns for the second half of 1933, which shows that these companies made a total 65 per cent. of all the paid-up capital of joint-stock companies in Japan, made a bigger profit for that period than for any half-year since the first six months of 1930. Of the total, only 92 showed losses. The others all recorded profits, averaging 9.4 per cent. on the total paid-up capital.

These figures constitute an increase of 14.2 per cent. on the first half of 1933 and 33.8 per cent. on 1932. All reporting industries showed prosperity. No business group recorded any loss as a whole. The greatest activity was revealed in spinning, rayon, weaving, and woollen textiles. The profits in rayon were amazingly large, averaging 24.4 per cent., over eight companies. Evidently Japan is moving swiftly on the upgrade today. — Montreal Daily Star.

INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON, JUNE 24TH, 1934

REVIEW.

During the quarter we have been studying the last few months of Jesus' life. The lessons led us into a deeper investigation of His ministry with its many-sided appeals. To review even the main points in these lessons would require more than one Sunday. But, by the use of careful discrimination, certain general ideas may emerge, around which the whole gospel story may be focused. Three of these may be considered. "The Fatherhood of God," "The Value of Human Personality," "The Kingdom of God."

Jesus set out to create a new order of society on earth, which he called the Kingdom of God. While He never defines the term, yet in His parables, he constantly describes its characteristics. It is to grow slowly. It is to be all-embracing, it is to be permanent. It is to contain the inherent power of its own growth. The ideals of its members to each other will be those of the best family life where the strong bear the burdens of the weak, where mutual love and trust, prevail

Membership in the Kingdom was absolutely open to any race or creed, color, or privilege, but solely on the basis of human need, human rights, and human aspirations. Human personality for Jesus was a sacred thing. Children who had received recognition in the old Jewish dispensation were of infinite value. Jesus began with a gift of old water unto the least of these, my children, has done it unto me." It were better that a mill stone should be hung around a man's neck and he be cast into the sea, than that the least of God's children should be hurt.

Indeed, entrance into the Kingdom of God was, for Jesus, only possible for those of childlike qualities of heart and conscience. Women and the outcasts, those other members of society who were looked down and degraded in the civilization, likewise, were of infinite value to God. They had been created in His image, with a Divine life, Divine possibilities and Divine potentialities.

This view of the worth of human personality has had far reaching effects. It has gradually entered men's hearts and consciences of Christiandom, until now in our most well organized state, there is accepted corporate responsibility for the weak, the handicapped, the under-privileged, the invalid and the unemployed. As Jesus taught it, every individual, no matter the race or color, or condition, is of equal value in God's sight. Anything which crushes that personality or damages it is contrary to God's will. Underneath these two great practical aspects of Jesus' teaching, was His undying faith in God as a Father, as one whose care and interest was for each of His children. Nothing approaching this, appears anywhere in previous religious thought. Undoubtedly, the prophets had prepared the way for it. But in no sense had they been equal to the heights of His views. Dr. Montefiore, a note Jewish scholar, says this: "We certainly do not get, in the Hebrew Bible, any teacher speaking of God as my Father, your Father our Father, like the Jesus of Matthew."

For these great principles and their establishment in human society, Jesus went to the Cross, which at once becomes the symbol of sacrificial love, His living spirit, acting in the hearts of devoted followers, is working as He foresaw, as the leaven, ever touching new areas of life and new conditions, breaking down old superstitions, and humanizing and Christianizing all the varied relationships of life.

Guard Against The Cut - Worm
The local Agricultural Representative, Mr. C. W. Buchanan, states :
"This is the season when cutworms are doing a great deal of damage and causing a lot of trouble in vegetable gardens. These insects are general feeders, attacking all kinds of garden plants, particularly those that are young and tender; tomatoes, cabbage, cauliflower and even beets, carrots and beans. Flowers, too, are often subject to the attacks of this insect. The poisoned bran mixture, which follows, is the remedy which is now used most extensively :
Bran, 20 pounds, Paris Green, half a pound, Molasses, one quart, Water two to three gallons.
In gardens containing rows of vegetables the mixture should be scattered thinly along the rows on either side, as soon as cutworm injury is noticed. Flowering plants may be protected by placing a small quantity of the poisoned bran around, but not touching, each plant. It is important that the poisoned bran be scattered after sundown so that it will be in the very best condition to attract the cutworms when they come out to feed at night.
In small gardens, as soon as cutworm injury is noticed, the culprit can, as a rule, be easily located in the soil, about an inch or so beneath the surface, and within a few days of a few inches of the plant, and destroyed by hand."

EAGLES NOT DESTRUCTIVE

In the London Advertiser for December 27th, 1930, interviews with three farmers of the Lake Erie region were printed in the regular nature items written by Mr. W. E. Saunders, the Dean of Ontario Naturalists. Mr. Saunders account of the interviews, is as follows :—
"The farmers have solved the owners of two eagles' nests and one of the neighbours. All of the men were absolutely. Each is more than 40 years old and has lived on the same farm all his life. Each is sure that the eagles' nest has been there, and for how long previously no one can say. In all the time none of these three farmers has lost a single chicken, duck or lamb, nor have any of them found young feathers or remains of any farm stock whatever under the nest. One man has found rabbit fur, but the other two have never found anything but the remains of fish. It would appear, therefore, that we owe this bird quite a debt of gratitude for keeping the shores of our lakes clear of decaying fish."

"Every misery that I miss is a new mercy; and therefore let us be thankful."—Izaak Walton.

The Late Mrs C. H. Boyes

News of the death of Mrs. C. H. Boyes, of Kingston, was heard with sincere regret in a wide circle of friends in Napanee and district. Her death occurred suddenly on Wednesday morning. Mrs. Boyes was in ill-health, but on the evening previous to her passing she was able to go for a motor drive.

For the past nine years Mrs. Boyes had been afflicted with blindness, but her life was a triumph over her affliction. Her's was a disposition of natural sweetness, which even physical handicaps failed to alter. Wherever she made contacts she made friends, who sincerely mourn her loss.

Mrs. Boyes, who was Anetta Cheevers, was born in Belleville. For some years a young woman, she lived in Napanee with her mother, where she married Mr. Charles H. Boyes, who survived her. For about thirty-two years, with her husband, she had resided in Kingston.

The funeral was held at her late residence in Kingston, on Friday afternoon with Rev. Harry R Clark of Sydenham St. Church in charge. Interment was made at Riverside Cemetery in Napanee, in the Boyes Plot.

The Late Vincent Kouber

On Monday evening, June 18th, the death occurred at his home, corner of Bridge and Mill Streets, of Mr. Vincent Kouber, one of Napanee's oldest residents.

The late Mr. Kouber was in his 90th year. He was born in Bohemia and came to Canada with his parents and other members of the family when eight years of age. Until grown up he lived in Hamilton, Ontario. Later, he spent a short time in Detroit and Belleville and came to Napanee in 1863.

He established a monument works in Napanee, which he carried on until 1923, when he sold out his interests to the late William Howitt. He was a skilled artisan, who served the community for many years and established a prosperous business. He was a man of keen intellect, interested in public affairs and one who had many friends throughout the countryside.

Mr. Kouber was twice married. His first wife, Mary J. Thompson, whom he married at Belleville, died 38 years ago, leaving two children, Mrs. Bert McMullen of Virginia, Minnesota and Vincent, who died in Chicago about thirty years ago. In 1906, Mr. Kouber married Mary A. Hughes, who survives him and who, throughout the years of his old age, has given him every attention and care.

Mr. Kouber was a member of St. Patrick's Roman Catholic Church, and from there his mass will be sung for the repose of his soul, on Thursday morning.

The Late Mrs. M. J. Thompson

The death occurred early Tuesday morning of Mrs. Margaret J. Thompson, at the home of her son, Alonzo Thompson, Water Street.

Mrs. Thompson had been in ill-health for many months, following a paralytic stroke. She was the widow of the late Andrew Thompson, who predeceased her in 1919.

She was formerly Margaret J. Clark and was born nearly 80 years ago in Kennebec Township, Frontenac county. About thirty years ago, with her husband and family, she came to Napanee to reside.

She is survived by two sons and two daughters, Alonzo Thompson, with whom she resided; Reuben Thompson, Gilbert Avenue; and Mrs. Arthur Babcock, all of Napanee. Two other sons, Murney and Amos, died some years ago.

The funeral is being held Thursday afternoon, at 2:30 o'clock, at the house. It will be conducted by Mrs. Thompson's pastor, Rev. Andrew Morgan, of the Methodist Assembly.

He was one of seven brothers, of whom two only are left, Rev. P. A. Scott and Fred S. Scott, of Napanee. Another brother, John, and a daughter were, Wilmot, who died in Spokane, Wash., Jessina, who passed away a few years ago at Kingston; Pratt, who lived at Campbellford and died there years ago, and Elisha W., who died in Napanee.

The late Lester Scott had carried on a barber business in Napanee for five years, most of which were spent in the one place in the Campbell House block. He commenced with Mr. Pringle, in 1876. For a short time he was in partnership with Lovelace and in Campbellford, and in 1878, came back to Napanee and opened a shop in the place now occupied by Luckin's. The funeral was held at his late residence, West Street, on Friday afternoon, with Rev. R. T. Richards of Grace United Church, in charge.

Following the service at the house, the Oddfellows conducted their burial service and interment took place at Riverside Cemetery.

The Late Alfred George Palmer

Alfred George Palmer, of Thornhill, who died in the General Hospital, Toronto, on June 6th, 1934, was a former resident of Napanee. He had been ill since before Christmas and on May 22nd, went through a serious operation, from which he did not recover. Some years ago he worked in Napanee, under Joseph Deshane, on the Canadian National Railway.

His funeral was conducted on Saturday, June 9th, at Hopkins and Holden's funeral parlors in Toronto with interment following in the Veterans' Plot at Prospect Cemetery, where the last post was sounded. He was wounded in France and returned to England, where he remained until the close of the war. He returned to Canada in September, 1919, when the last transport left England. Since that time until his death he was connected with the Queen's Own Rifles, at Toronto.

OBITUARY

JAMES SKINNER, J. P.

There entered into rest at his home in Camden East, early Sunday morning, June 10th, James Skinner, following a brief illness. Although in failing health for some time due to heart trouble, his sudden passing came as a great shock to the immediate family and his wide circle of friends, near and far.

Deceased was a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. John L. Skinner and was born on January 23rd, 1859, in the west end of the village, where he continued to reside during his childhood. He was educated in the public school where his commercial penmanship was established, and throughout the years he continued to retain this skill. In early life he served his apprenticeship with his father, who was the village blacksmith. Mr. Skinner continued with this trade over a period of nearly 40 years, after which the business was taken over by his son, Lesley, who is still in the business. He also conducted a hardware and furniture business until retiring, about two years ago.

On May 3rd, 1883, he was united in marriage to Catherine Gallagher, of Portland, whose passing only fourteen months ago, came as a great loss. In early life, Mr. Skinner was united with the Methodist (now United) Church and, in which he served faithfully. He was a Bible class teacher, a trustee and for a period of thirty-two years, he was secretary of the trustee board, as well as holding various other offices. Deceased was a staunch Conservative in politics, and also was appointed Justice of Peace a few years ago. He was a member of L. O. L. No. 28 and the United Workman, now the I.O.O.F. and capably fulfilled various offices.

The funeral service was largely attended by a wide circle of relatives and friends who gathered to pay their last respects and was held at his late residence at 2:30 p.m. Tuesday, June 12th. The impressive service was conducted by Rev. C. B. Brethen, pastor of the United Church, a close friend and relative. Rev. Brethen gave a very comforting message and spoke very feelingly of the deceased's outstanding patience and admirable character. The hymns used were "Forever with the Lord," and "Rock of Ages," while Mrs. Joe Lewis sang a solo "Peace, Perfect Peace." The remains were interred in the family plot in the United Church Cemetery, beside his wife. The casket was, banked with beautiful floral offerings, a silent but fine tribute. The pall-bearers were Messrs. Alex. Dickson, Delbert Sexsmith, Archie Alkenbrack, Will Cohan, Alva Emberley and Bert Yeomans.

Those left to mourn his passing are two sons, Lesley of Camden East, and Clifford of Toronto, and a daughter, Mrs. Goodwin, of Toronto; one daughter predeceased him a few years of age. He is also survived by a niece, Grace Gallagher, who has resided with him since infancy. Ten grandchildren survive, nine of whom were present at the funeral. Three are two sisters, Mrs. Charles Dayfoot, Winnipeg; and Mrs. Cyrus Edgar, Parker, and a brother, Mr. W. Skinner, of Brownville, N.Y., who has been an invalid for over thirty years. Two brothers, William and Joseph Skinner, predeceased him several years ago.

Avenue would be built at no cost to the town. Recently he had been given to understand that the road would be commenced after the 20th of June.

Deputy Reeve Wilson said that at the last meeting of the County Special Roads Committee, Mr. Muir was present and recommended that the road be built at an estimated cost of $3,500, of which the Government would pay $2,000 and the County $1,500. He understood that the committee had the matter was to be reported at County Council for consideration, but that the Roads Committee did not intend to recommend the work to be done.

Following further discussion, Reeve Hughson said: "I intend to get that road built."

Town to Protect Interests In Schermerhorn Trust

Deputy Reeve Wilson reported that he was chairman of the committee of the County Council to deal with the Schermerhorn Trust Fund, he had been informed that the executors intended to distribute the money in the fund, and that it would likely go to the Provincial Hospital. He moved that to the County of Lennox and Addington. As there is some money also in the fund from the Wright estate, in which the town has a special interest, he thought the town should take any necessary steps to protect its interests.

It was moved by Messrs. Hughson and Cowling, and carried, that the matter of the Schermerhorn and Wright Trust Funds, be referred to the Finance Committee to supply the necessary information to the Town Solicitor and authorize him to protect the town's interests.

After the passing of accounts, the Council adjourned.

Hon. Harry Nixon Addresses Liberals At Driving Park

On Thursday afternoon a large number of Liberals of the county attended a rally at the Napanee Driving Park in the interests of the Liberal candidate for Prince Edward-Lennox, Mr. A. E. Bowerman.

Dr. H. S. Roblin was chairman and with him on the platform besides the speaker, were members of the county executive. Loud speakers were arranged and the speakers' voices carried perfectly from the platform to the crowd seated in the grandstand.

The first speaker was Mrs Wesse, daughter of the candidate, who proved herself an eloquent and able supporter. Mr. W. S. Herrington, the next speaker, a former Conservative, gave his reasons for supporting Mr. Bowerman.

Mr. Bowerman, the candidate, was a speaker of ability. He refuted statements concerning his administration as Warden of Prince Edward. He attacked the Hydro administration and the expenditures of the Henry Government.

Hon. Harry Nixon, the Progressive leader in the last legislature, was the chief speaker of the afternoon. He predicted that the present Government would not have over 25 seats in the new parliament. He promised a new deal for Ontario with Hepburn as premier and declared himself not a foe of Hydro, as is charged against him. He said the foes of Hydro were within the organization itself. He severely criticized the alleged injustice to the people as the result of what he claimed was improper administration of Hydro.

BASEBALL NEWS

BY G.E.GIBBARD.

Kingston Ponies were unable to play the game in Napanee last Saturday, as arranged, due to a change in their schedule, but are coming up this week for sure. The game will be played at 2:30 p.m. Standard Time.

Wednesday's game between the B's and Enterprise, should be a thriller. Enterprise took both of their home games from the "B's" and are now leading the league with two wins over the Napanee entry. The "B's" will have to take both of their home games from Enterprise in order to tie the leadership of the league and then both of them win all their remaining games. If either of these clubs drops a game to any of the outside teams, they will just be out of luck. Saturday's game in Enterprise, which ended in the tenth innings with the score standing 2 to 1 in favour of the home team, was a thriller and it is doubtful that a better ball game has been seen in Enterprise for some time. The "B's" are in there fighting and promised to give Enterprise the battle of their lives on Wednesday.

Last Thursday's game between the "A's" and the "B's" proved to be as exciting as we predicted. Both clubs were on edge and the remarks exchanged between the clubs were not always of the most complimentary nature. However, after the game it was all forgotten and that is as it should be. It is nice to see the boys take their ball seriously on the field, but after all, they must remember that they are clubmates and that three games are played mainly to give both clubs practice.

The fans were again, of course, all pulling for the B's and many thought they should have won, but the figures show that the A's had the edge in every department. Another series will be started shortly between the two clubs, since the B's still think they can tage the Athletics.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Marlbank, Ont.,
June 18th, 1934

Dear Mr. Editor :—

With election nearly over, I feel I may safely claim a bit of space. It is as usual, about baseball, the champion Forest Mills game in particular, which was most unsatisfactorily called off. We understand that Enterprise claims the game unless protested, but why should anyone bother to protest a game illegally called off.

Forest Mills were at bat, so it was found guilty of not stopping at the scene of an accident. He was ordered to pay costs of the court and damages to the car which was struck.

David J. McKenna of Toronto, the driver of the car which struck the truck of Charles Strong on the highway, was charged with reckless driving. He appeared before Magistrate Graham and was released on $1,000 bail, and will appear in court on Wednesday, June 27th.

..GIANT SIZE KRUSCHEN SALTS (with the extra free package) — 69c AT WALLACE'S.

Judging from the way things were moving when it was called off, Forest Mills would surely have tied the score for won the game.

Thank you,

"ONLOOKER."

In Loving Memory

THOMPSON — In loving memory of our dear son and brother, Clarence Thompson, accidentally drowned at Napanee, June 19th, 1932.

In Riverview, softly sleeping
Where the gentle breezes wave,
Lies the one we loved so dearly,
The one we could not save.
Then his days seemed brightest,
Just when his hopes seemed best,
God called him from among us
To the home of eternal rest.
Ever remembered by,
MOTHER, SISTER and DAD.

He never quite leaves us, although he has passed.
Through the shadows of death to the sunshine above;
A thousand sweet memories are holding him fast.
In the home that he blessed with his presence and love,
Ever remembered by,

HERBIE and FAMILY.

Wedding Bells

JACKSON—CLANCEY

The Enterprise United Church was the scene of a very pretty wedding on Tuesday morning, June 12th, at 9:00 o'clock, when Vivian Estelle, daughter of Mr and Mrs. Bingley A. Clancey, became the bride of Mr. Harry Donald Jackson, son of Mrs. Harry Jackson and the late Mr. Jackson. The church was beautifully decorated with peonies, roses, ferns and foliage plants. The Rev. D. M. Stinson, B.A., M.A., officiated.

At the appointed hour, the bride groom and his groomsman, Mr. Ronald Jackson, took their places at the altar. As the strains of the bridal chorus from Lohengrin, played by Mrs. William Jackson, echoed through the church, the bride came slowly up the aisle on the arm of her father. She was preceded by her sister, Thelma as bridesmaid, who was becomingly gowned in white flowered triple sheer with white accesories and carried an old-fashioned nosegay of sea roses, sweet peas and ferns.

The youthful fair-haired bride was daintily attired in a gown of white peau d'ange lace with a large model stitched taffets hat and white accessories, and she carried a shower bouquet of Johanna Hill roses, lilies of the valley and ferns.

During the signing of the register, Mr. Karl Sexsmith, cousin of the bride, sang sweetly "I love you truly." The ushers were Mr. Eryel Loucks cousin of the bride and Mr. William Jackson.

Following the ceremony a wedding luncheon was held at the La Salle Hotel, Kingston. During the luncheon a telegram of congratulations was received from Mr. and Mrs. J. Bates, Middlesbere, Mass., uncle and aunt of the groom. Later the bride and groom left amid showers of confetti for Quebec. The bride travelled in navy and white with navy accessories. On their return they will reside in Enterprise.

The out-of-town guests were Mr. and Mrs. A. S. Hamilton, Mrs. P. Laughlin, Mr. Eryel Loucks, Napanee; Mr. and Mrs. Chari Bruton, Kingston; Mr. and Mrs. O. Williams, Mrs. Karl Sexsmith, Gosport; Mr. and Mrs. Walter Bruton, Boston, Mass.

SWINDEN—McINTOSH

The marriage took place in Calvin Presbyterian Church, Delaware Avenue, on Friday afternoon, June 15th, of Janet Jean Lilias, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John McDonald McIntosh, to James Nasmyth Swindin, son of Mrs. A. I. Swindin, of Toronto, and the late Joseph Wasson, minister of Calvin Presbyterian Church, officiated by the Rev. A. J. Wilson, of St. Andrew's Church, Napanee.

The church was decorated in pink and white spring flowers and the wedding music was played by Mr. James H. Walley, organist of the church. The bride was given in marriage by her father, and she wore a gown of satin Imperator and Alencon lace made on Princess lines, the train forming part of the dress. Her veil was tulle and lace, held to the back of the head by a bandeau of orange blossoms. She carried a bouquet of Butterfly roses and lily-of-the-valley. She was attended by her sister, Miss Dorothy McIntosh, as maid of honor, who wore a frock of turquoise marquisette over white with hat to match. She carried a bouquet of Talisman roses. Little Miss Mary Kathrine Murray acted as flower girl, and wore a Kate Greenaway frock of the same shade as that of the maid of honor. The groomsman was Mr. Joseph S. Atkinson, and the ushers were Mr. Clare Swinden and Mr. Cyril Bowman.

During the signing of the register, Miss Mary Daly of Napanee sang most effectively the solo "Because."

After the ceremony a reception was held at the Granite Club, where the bride's mother received, wearing a gown of crepe marocain in lotus shades with matching hat. She carried a bouquet of orchids. The groom's mother, who also received, wore a gown of blue lace, with matching hat and carried a bouquet of Talisman roses.

Later the bride and groom left for Quebec. For travelling the bride wore a yellow linen ensemble with hat to match, and white accessories.—The Toronto Globe

Still More New Books At The Napanee Public Library

A much needed and up-to-date atlas, containing 140 maps and an index to 30,000 names has been placed in the reference library.

HITLER OVER EUROPE ? — by Ernst Henri. Written by a German author who had exceptional opportunities for gathering material relating to this subject, this book differs from most of other books about Hitlerism, in that it contains authoritative information new and detailed information about the rise of the Nazi party, the development of the Nan state, the Hitlerism foreign policy, avowed and secret, and the underground revolutionary agitation which is now at work in Germany.

THE CHEERY KITCHEN — by Laura Lee Hope. A book filled with charm the hearts of the little mothers will find it a volume deeply entertaining for their children.

THE LOST MINE OF THE AMAZONS — by Hugh Lloyd. Lost in the wilds of the Amazon country—at the mercy of the stalking, fierce beasts of the jungle! Racked by hunger and thirst—and rescued from that fate only to be doomed to death by a tribe of savage Indians, is the main theme of this book.

EY THE LIGHT OF THE STUDY LAMP — by Carolyn Keene. A sto'en study lamp, a fortune teller, and a distressed schoolmate provide the setting of excitement for the Dana girls before they locate the persons responsible and the mystery-filled happenings. Another mystery story exciting and interesting.

HONEYMOON MOUNTAIN — by Frances Shelley Wees. Here is purest romance, the story of Deborah, sweet as a hyacinth in a spring garden, who was brought up in seclusion and suddenly thrown into contact with a group of lively young moderns.

MARY JANE IN ITALY — by Clara Ingram Judson. An excellent book for young girls. They will find Mary Jane a charming travelling companion.

THE DOOM OF STARK HOUSE — by Hush Lloyd. A swiftly moving mysterious drama. The scene is laid in the wilderness above Quebec.

JERRY TODD AND THE FLYING FLAPDOODLE — by Leo Edwards. Belt-bursting giggles, creepy chills, hilarious boyish adventures — all packed together in one of the finest books for boys and girls that Leo Edwards has written.

DON STURDY LOST IN GLACIER BAY — by Victor Appleton. In company with his uncles, one a mighty hunter and the other a noted scientist, Don Sturdy travels far and wide, gaining much useful knowledge and meeting many thrilling adventures. The boys will want to sit up late to read this book.

MEMORIES OF A SPY—by Nicholas Snowdon. An unsurpassed picture of war on the eastern front, of espionage with all its thrills and perils.

BRUSHING THE MOUNTAIN TOP — by Franklin W. Dixon. Boys in search of thrilling adventures in an aeroplane will find plenty of them in this volume.

KABLUK OF THE ESKIMOS — by Lowell Thomas. Here the boys will find the radio news announcer in a new role. In this book he tells the story of his adventures, of how they hunted the walrus, armed only with spears, of how they tracked down the great polar bear and killed him with bows and arrows, of the long hunt for the caribou, of a primitive life that depends upon the skill of the hunter for food and clothing.

TOM SWIFT AND HIS OCEAN AIRPORT — by Victor Appleton.

FLYING BLACK-BIRDS — by Thomson Burtels.

DON STURDY TRAPPED IN THE FLAMING WILDERNESS — by Victor Appleton. These three books and several others in the foregoing list are placed in the library to meet the demand for well written and interesting books for juvenile readers.

NAPANEE WOMEN'S INSTITUTE

"Grandmother's Day" was observed by the Women's Institute at their regular meeting on Tuesday, June 12.

Mrs. James Douglas, president, presided and the meeting opened with the ode. The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved.

Mrs. Kathryn Powell was convener of the programme, and she, in a few well chosen words introduced the speaker, Mr. W. S. Herrington, K.C., who gave a most interesting talk on "Queen Mary as a Grandmother."

Mr. Herrington spoke of Queen Mary and the wonderful work she did during the World War. She had, under her personal guidance, a needlework guild in making garments etc., for the hospitals. Mr. Herrington also spoke of the trip which he and Past Grand Master Rowland, made to London and Ridley a year ago last summer.

Reading were given by Mrs. Powell and Mrs. Shore Loynes. The roll call was answered by an anecdote by our Grandmother which was very well responded to.

The meeting closed with all repeating the creed and the singing of "God Save the King." Refreshments were served at the close by the losing side.

MOUNT PLEASANT PIONEER W. I.

The May meeting of Mount Pleasant Pioneer Womens Institute met at the hall, with Mrs. H. Putman, president, presiding. The meeting opened by singing the ode and all repeating the Lord's Prayer. The roll call was answered by an exchange of flowers and slips. The business was transacted and it was decided to hold a play in the last week of May. The date of the meetings were changed and will take place first Thursday in each month, instead of first Friday. Committees were appointed and delegates were named for the District Annual, to be held at Bath, June 13th. Mrs. T. Murphy being unable to be present, sent instruction on canning pork and beans, and it was given by Mrs. Frank Sexsmith. Readings were given by Mrs. Putman and Mrs. J. Henderson. The meeting closed by singing God Save the King. Deseronto Young People presented their play in the hall which was well received.

The June meeting of the Mount Pleasant Pioneer Women's Institute was held at the hall on June 8, with Mrs. Gordon Toppings president, as owing to sickness in the family of the president, Mrs. H. Putman was not present. The meeting opened with the ode, followed by the Lord's Prayer, repeated in unison. The roll call was answered, by say, sing, or pay, and quite a number sang while others gave very interesting recipes. The minutes were read and approved. Business was discussed and the treasurer gave her monthly report. It was decided to hold the picnic at Oak Lake on Saturday, July 7th. Account of the summer speaker meeting was given by Mrs. F. Henderson, also a paper on gardens, insects and their control. The meeting closed by singing the National Anthem.

CAMDEN EAST W. I.

The regular monthly meeting of the Camden East Women's Institute was held at the home of Mrs. Percy Scott on Wednesday, June 6. After the usual opening exercises, the roll call was called by the secretary, Mrs. T. Allore and was answered by a proverb or gems of thought. There were fifteen members and ten visitors present. Current events were given by each member. A paper was read, "The Life of the King," by the president, Mrs. Acton Robinson, after which the National Anthem was sung.

It was moved by Mrs. A. Lewis, seconded by Mrs. Percy Scott, that Mrs. George Scott and Mrs. H. Walkworth be delegates for the district annual, which is to be held in Moscow, June 13th, with Mrs. Percy Scott and Mrs. Will Dunn as alternates. Moved by Mrs. E. Hamilton and seconded by Mrs. Joseph Lewis, that Mrs. B. Yeomans give a two-minute discussion on the Institute's greatest problem, after which Miss Mabel Tomkin gave a talk on high school curriculum, followed by a solo by Mrs. Joseph Lewis, accompanied at the piano by Mrs. Hilton Robinson. A splendid address was then given by Mr. Donald Paul on "Landscape Gardening," which was enjoyed by all.

It was decided to hold our annual picnic along the Bay Shore on July 4th. A demonstration was given by Mrs. Percy Scott, "a simple summer dessert," after which dainty refreshments were served by the committee in charge. A hearty vote of thanks was tendered to the hostess, also to Mr. Donald Paul for his splendid talk.

WESLEY W. M. S.

The June meeting of Wesley W.M.S. was held in the church on Thursday afternoon, June 7th, with a good attendance. A number of the Centreville W. M. S. members joined in the meeting with us. The president, Mrs. Rogers, had charge of the programme, which opened by singing a hymn, Mr. Mc Allister's prayer was present, led in prayer. Business followed and it was decided to make a quilt, the blocks to be brought in at the July meeting, which is to be held at the home of Mrs. Robert Cook. Mrs. Robert Nugent and Mrs. Harold Nugent were appointed to prepare the programme. The scripture lesson was taken from Matt 26, 17-30 and was read by Mrs. Walter Paul. The devotional leaflet, "At the Memorial Tab'e," was given by Miss Helen Paul. Mrs. Campbell and her daughter, Verene, sang a pleasing duet, accompanied by Miss Daisy Moore. Mrs. Roy McGill and Miss J. Lochhead, led in prayer, following which Mrs. Albert Lewis of Camden East gave an inspiring address, the theme of which was "Unselfishness" and based her thoughts on "Home Missionary Work Pay." All joined in singing a hymn, after which Mrs. Breault gave an account of an incident in Saskatchewan where relief was extremely needed and help was received through the efforts which the people of the East had put forth to assist those in the dried-out area. Mrs. Joe. Lewis of Camden sang a beautiful solo, and Mr. Anderson gave some encouraging missionary facts. The study leaflet "The Chinese in Canada" was given by the president, Mrs. Harold Nugent, Mrs. Percy Yeomans and Mrs. Ross Hanna. The meeting closed with a hymn, and refreshments were served and a social half-hour spent.

VIOLET-SWITZERVILLE W. I.

The members of Violet - Switzerville Institute and several visitors, attended in goodly numbers, the meeting held at the home of Mrs. Rae Brown, on Wednesday, June 6, to welcome the District President, Mrs. Shore Loynes. The roll call which was answered by a famous Canadian woman and her work, was well responded to. The minutes of the last meeting were read and the business disposed of.

The meeting was held along educational lines. Mrs. Alfred Hogeboom's paper on the motto, "There is nothing so harmful as a bad book," was very fittingly applied. Books are a builder of character, good books are an education, bad books leave a dark blot on the mind.

Mrs. Loynes, whom we all looked forward to hearing, opened her address by telling the story behind that beautiful poem "The House by the side of the Road," and how the author was so inspired by the kind deeds of the two aged people, who gave a helping hand to tired, dusty travellers, singing in the deep sleep hill by the side of which their home was situated, by placing signs that they might come in and drink and refresh themselves with fresh fruit placed in a basket nearby. This was their way of doing good to mankind. So much did the author think of this, that when he arrived home he wrote that lovely poem. Why can we not help in a similar way. Probably we have not fruit trees and a spring, but we can look around and see what we have, or what we can do to make other people happy. There are many who are in the same position as this aged couple. We have not a great deal of money, but we can give of ourselves.

Mrs. William Sager, convener of education, gave a splendid paper, on its meaning and relation to humanity. In her discourse, Mrs. Sager said: "Education does not mean just to go to school and study from books, but to educate ourselves to thoroughly understand the part we have to play in the drama of life, as poor players are we, if we do not understand its meaning. So speaks the immortal Bard: "All the world's a stage, men and women merely players."

Mrs. Andrew Moore, with a few well chosen words, moved a vote of thanks to Mrs. Brown, for so kindly opening her home. She also conveyed the appreciation of the audience to Mrs. Loynes and the members on the program for helping to make the afternoon an educational one, as well as pleasant.

The meeting was closed with the Mizpah benediction, after which everyone enjoyed a social half hour over friendly tea-cups.

SILLSVILLE-CONWAY W.M.S.

The Sillsville-Conway Women's Missionary Society met at Sillsville United Church on June 7th, with five members present. With the president, Mrs. H. Hough, in the chair, the meeting opened in the usual way followed with prayer by the president and the Lords Prayer repeated in unison.

It was moved by Mrs. Merritt and seconded by Mrs. Martin Hough, that we hold a thanksgiving service on the 8th of July at the old U. E. L. Church, to hear Mrs. Smart, of Bath.

Mrs. R. Merritt reported on temperance.

Rev. Sanders gave a talk on common worship and told a story of a man who only missed one Sunday, attending Sunday School for fifty-one years.

The offering amounted to sixty cents. After a hymn was sung, Rev. Sanders closed the meeting with prayer.

NEWS AND INFORMATION FOR THE BUSY FARMER

(Furnished by the Ontario Department of Agriculture)

Culling the Flock

Culling of the flock need not be left for any particular season. There should really be a constant culling out of inferior off-type, non-productive hens. It does not require an expert to take out some of the hens but, to pick out those that are not laying and are not likely to lay for some time requires a little experience. One of the losses on the farm comes from those who get rid of birds or animals that are not paying for their feed. They are carried on in the hope they will do better. However, one is better to get the market value for such individuals rather than crowding up the pens and making it more difficult for the really good birds to show a profit.

At the end of the breeding season the cockerels should be marketed. They are of no further use until the next breeding season, and it is only common best that it would pay to carry over to use as two-year-olds. At the price of cockerels in the fall it scarcely pays to carry over the average male bird for the second breeding season.

Cultivation of Soybeans

Soybens respond readily to cultivation. Growers of this crop will find that when soybeans are to be harvested with a binder the crop should be planted in rows sufficiently far apart to permit cultivation during the summer. Rows 30 inches apart have given good results at the Dominion Experimental Station, Harrow, Ont., but somewhat closer planting may also be found satisfactory. The principal object of cultivation is to keep down weed growth which is impossible with the broadcast method of planting since the weeds get started ahead of the soybeans. The additional work involved in cultivating will be well repaid in an increased yield of good quality beans. The control of weeds is always to be desired and where this can be done with the soybean crop by regulating the distance of planting advantage should be taken of the opportunity offered.

When soybeans are planted either in rows or broadcast, it has been found advisable to give the field a light stroke with the harrow soon after the beans are up. If the oil has a tendency to puddle or crust after a rain this should be done sooner to allow the beans to get through the hard crust. This harrowing is best done either straight or diagonally across the rows. The results of this practice are the loosening of the soil to allow the beans to get up, the control of weeds which may have started, and the thinning of the stand of plants to normal which is 2½ to 3 inches apart. The early harrowing, followed by three or four cultivations between the plants while the plants grow, will be found extremely valuable in producing a good crop of soybeans.

Milk Board Functioning

The Ontario Milk Board is now well started on its work and organization is progressing. According to Hon. T. L. Kennedy, preliminary studies of production and marketing have revealed many disturbing conditions and it might be a year before the board would be in complete operation.

Organization is only partly completed, and the permanent chairman will not be appointed until after the election. At present J. B. Fairbairn, Deputy Minister of Agriculture, is acting head of the board.

Meanwhile, first regulations issued by the board set the nominal license fee of $1 for distributors, and require of them the proof of financial responsibility in a sum not less than $500. Licenses expire at the end of each year, but will be issued for 1934 to distributors now in business before May 1. The financial responsibility clause requires also that proof be furnished in a sum not less than the value of the milk received from producers during the minimum period of thirty days. If a distributor is accustomed to pay producers monthly, the amount is based on an average forty-five days' supply calculated from receipts during the past six months. Provision is made for furnishing of proof of bond bank guarantee, or cash or security deposit.

The board has the power to grant, refuse, suspend and cancel licenses, and provision is made for hearing of appeals from the board's decision.

Weekly Crop Report

Reports received from agricultural representatives the first week in June indicated an unusual lack of rainfall throughout the province, the situation in many counties being termed very serious. A small hay crop was considered inevitable, while the dryup-up of pastures has caused alarm in many counties. Effects of the severe winter weather upon orchards is becoming more apparent. In Brace County it is reported that two-thirds of the apple crop was killed by winter injury, while in Norfolk much damage is revealed. Pastures are as dry as in August, according to reports from Dufferin and Peel Counties. Winter injury to trees of the apple trees in Simcoe County show little promise. Brant County has a large increase in acreage of corn planted. The strawberry crop in southern Ontario will be very light owing to unfavorable weather conditions of the past year. Lincoln County looks to alfalfa as a life-saver as far as hay is concerned. In Wentworth, owing to the drouth, farmers are trying to carry their cattle over lower with surplus feed from the barn. Dundas reports a splendid stand of sweet clover and a considerable increase in acreage. The season there has been ideal for bees and other insects to work among the apple trees. Prontenac looks for a great reduction in value of cheese manufactured owing to the fact that many farmers are separating and selling cream, while the cheese factories are running considerably less milk than in former years. Alfalfa is a good crop in Renfrew County. Even the Thunder Bay district reported crops suffering from lack of moisture.

Buckwheat

Buckwheat usually is a very useful and profitable crop. It can also be very damaging.

Buckwheat is one of the most effective and economical means of checking weeds and at the same time it produces a profitable each crop. As a controller of weeds it can be sown after an extensive period of summer fallow during the first week of July and any weeds that remain will be effectively smothered by the rapid growth of the crop. The market has improved recently also and buckwheat, particularly the variety Silver Hill, is finding a good demand in European countries. Yousth or rye buckwheat may be slightly heavier yielder but should not be grown for export.

If sown too early buckwheat has a very damaging effect on the light honey crop. Thousands of beekeepers in this province have experienced the effect of an early buckwheat honey flow. What would otherwise have been good light honey of clover or other superior flavors, only too often has been spoiled through the influence of even a slight amount of buckwheat.

Buckwheat gives just as good returns as a grain crop and is more effective as a weed destroyer, if sown after the first of July. At the same time it permits the field honey crop to be safely removed before the buckwheat flow and thus especially in a naturally fine buckwheat honey in the less valuable. This results in greatly increased profits to the beekeepers.

The apiary with its millions of bees is a valuable asset to any farm. The apiary owner should be encouraged to maintain his beyard in any satisfactory location and the best and most practical method of encouragement is to discontinue the practice of early sowing of buckwheat.

Powerful Medicine. The healing properties in six cc. Minol oils are concentrated in every bottle of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil, forming one of the most beneficial liniments ever offered to the use of man. Many can testify as to its power in allaying pain and many more can attest to the good they owe their health to it. Its wonderful power is not expressed by the small price at which it sells.

PERSECUTED GIPSIES

Impressed by Nazi laws for sterilizing the unfit, the police authorities in Czecho-Slovakia are reported to advocate similar measures against gipsies, whom they regard as "past all hope of redemption," but even so drastic a measure would be less inhumane compared with the methods of elimination employed against the nomads in half the countries of Europe until little more than a century ago. In the Middle Ages the gipsy was almost everywhere liable to be hanged on sight, and in sixteenth-century England anyone found consorting with them was in danger of the same penalty. In the records of Heston, Middlesex, in 1594, it was noted that "five men, all late of London," were arrested and tried on the charge that "they were then and found in the society of vagrants, commonly called Egyptians, and that they called themselves Egyptians and remained to remain with them in the same county for the space of one month." For which offence three of the accused were sentenced to death.

SCARRED for life! Perhaps blinded! How memory must haunt some guilty driver's mind! And the records show that there were thousands of guilty drivers in Ontario last year.

This message is not for the habitually reckless, callous motorist. His license can be cancelled—and will be! This appeal is to the usually thoughtful driver who takes a chance only now and then. Death and injury to 8,280 men, women and children on Ontario highways in one year clearly indicate that now and then is too often!

This tide of needless bereavement and suffering must be turned! You, the decent, law-abiding, self-respecting citizen can help.

Will you not do your share? Will you not drive carefully, safely . . . always?*

Canada Leads In the Use of Telephones

Canada is maintaining its position of world leadership in the matter of telephone usage. This is only one of the evidences of this country's prominence in the field of communication, as revealed by the statistical record just published by the Bell system. It deals with electrical communication throughout the world, and the figures are as of January 1, 1933.

Canadians make more use of the telephone than any comparable figure of 205.8 and the United States with 204.6, were the only other countries in which telephone talks per person exceeded the 200 mark. Denmark led Europe in this connection with 151.8 followed by Sweden with 137.6. Canadians made almost seven times more use of the telephone than the British, who reported 33.0 calls per capita, the same figure as given by Germany and more than eleven times more than the people of France who made 20.5 calls per capita.

21 Telephone Per 100 People

With 21.03 telephones per 100 population in cities of 30,000 and over, Canada is second in this regard only to Sweden with 22.45. The United States ranks third with 18.52 while the smaller towns and villages, Canada retains third position with 7.99 telephones per 100 inhabitants. The United States is first with 10.17 and New Zealand follows with 8.23 based on statistics compiled up to and including March 31, 1933. The ranking in this regard emphasizes that residents of our cities and towns of less than 30,000 people are better equipped with telephones and their associated apparatus than are inhabitants of most of the world's largest and more important centres.

Canada, with 1,261,345, ranks fifth in absolute number of telephones and is led by the United States, Germany, Great Britain (including Northern Ireland) and France, in that order. But in telephones per 100 population, Canada has 11.98 which is second only to 13.94 in the United States, while Great Britain, Germany and France have only 4.62, 4.51 and 3.07 respectively. Some 83 per cent of Canada's total telephones and all of the telephones in the United States are under private ownership and operation. In Germany, France and Great Britain, all telephones are operated by their respective governments. Argentina leads South America in telephone development with 174 per 100 population. Japan easily leads the Asiatic countries but shows a figure of only 1.44 up to and including March 31st, last year.

LATE HATCHES NOT PROFITABLE

There is generally a tendency at this season of the year, to continue hatching operations, especially if the early hatches have been disappointing. Although it is not always the case, generally speaking it is not advisable to continue hatching heavy breeds after April and the lighter breeds about the middle of May, if they are to be brought into production by October—the most desirable month to insure a good yield during the season of peak prices.

If the stock cockerels are now to be removed from the mating pens—and this practice is most desirable when the eggs are to be marketed—then they should be fed sparingly a normal ration not too rich in animal feed. They will be kept in better condition if they can be given the liberty of a grass range some distance away from the hens, and fed a limited quantity of grain and a light dry mash in which the meat meals should not exceed ten per cent.

Cannibalism is rampant at this time of the year in some flocks of chickens. Although this trouble is usually the result of injudicious feeding, it is frequently caused by overcrowding the brooder, lack of feeding hopper space, or poor ventilation in the brooder. The remedy is the correction of one or all of these faults.

S. S. Convention Ernesttown Twp. O. R. E. Council

The annual convention of the Ernestown Religious Education Council was held in the Switzerville United Church on Thursday, June 7th, with afternoon and evening sessions. There was a good attendance at both sessions and delegates were present from practically all the Sunday Schools in the township.

The opening devotional exercises were conducted by Rev. A. R. Oliver, pastor of the Switzerville appointment, and immediately following the president, Mr. W. H. Mills, of Centreville, gave a brief address, outlining the aims of the convention.

The secretary, Miss Gladys Wallace, read the report of the schools based on the standard set by the O. R. E. C. and the work pointed of the various schools were discussed. Mrs. James Robson of the Fourth Line School, then favoured the gathering with a vocal solo entitled "Pass it On," which was greatly appreciated.

Every departmental superintendent had a complete report of the years activities to present, and the reports were most encouraging, and as they were given they showed the great interest that is being taken in the work.

Rev. J. E. Beckel, of the Bay Circuit, gave the address at the afternoon session, taking as his topic, "Enlargement." He spoke on the value of the contest in setting more to work to increase attendance, which called for a survey of the situation so that a greater interest is taken by a larger number of people, relieving the minister of some of the responsibilities, at the same time getting the individual to work. The danger of working just to win the contest was stressed by the speaker, as this would only cause a falling off in attendance when the contest closed. The value of the contest was to gain ground and then hold the advantage gained by careful and systematic follow-up work.

Mr. W. H. Mills, who was appointed county president, last year, was then called on to speak in his official capacity, and gave a very inspiring address on the "Teachers and their Task," contrasting the day school and the Sunday school teacher's task in moulding lives. The aim of the Sabbath school teacher should be to reveal the word of God to scholars, to lead them and girls into a true relationship with Christ, to develop Christian character and prepare their pupils for service for God and man. The round table conference was conducted by Rev. Dr. Fletcher, and many interesting discussions resulted. After the nominating and resolution committees had been appointed Rev. Stinson closed the afternoon session with prayer.

Evening Session

The evening session was lead in the worship period by Mr. W. J. Vrooman, of Odessa school, and the gathering was inspired by the male chorus exercises. Miss Gladys Wallace played a beautiful instrumental selection and Miss Helen Babcock and Rev. Fletcher sang a delightful duet. The resolution committee brought in the following report which was endorsed by the convention:

"That we express our thanks to the Switzerville pastor and officials for the use of the church, and to the ladies for their splendid refreshments, and to the speakers and singers and to all who have in any way helped to make this convention a success.

That we suggest to the County Executive that we have night of second full week in June would be better for our Township Convention so as many of our pupils are out of their pupils on the first Sunday of June, that we express the belief that a County Girls' Camp and a County Boys' Camp be held this summer and if it be not possible, that a Township Girls' Camp and a Township Boys' Camp be held.

That we urge our parents and Sunday Schools to carry on intelligent and aggressive temperance instruction in our homes and in the Sunday schools.

That we express our thanks to Mr. W. H. Mills for his loyal and efficient leadership as President of this township association during these twelve years of service and express the hope that he may be blessed and be a blessing in his new responsibilities as County president.

The Nominating Committee then brought in the following list of officers for 1934-35 —

President— James M. Baines.
Vice-Presidents— Rev. Craig.
Secretary—Miss Gladys Wallace.
Children's Dept.—Miss Greta Asselstine.

Girls' Division — Miss Willanna Clark.
Boys' Department— Russell Craig.
Young People's Division — Miss Kenna Babcock.
Adult Division—Mrs. Byron Jackson.
Home Religion—Mrs. Ernest Clark.
Teachers' Training — Rev. W. P. Fletcher.
Missionary Dept. — Miss Grace Peters.
Temperance Dept.—Mr. W. J. Vrooman.

Rev. Stinson installed the new officers impressing upon them the importance of the job in which they were called.

The new president then took over the meeting, and in a few words expressed his regret at the resignation of Mr. Mills, and hoped that he would still assist with the work in the township. Mr. Baines asked for the support of every individual in order that the efforts of the executive might meet with success, and that a successful year be experienced.

The Switzerville choir then rendered a very appropriate musical number, after which the evening speaker was introduced by the president, Rev. R. T. Richards of Napanee, was the guest speaker and he gave some very important pointers on successful

South Fredericksburgh Adolphustown Twps. O.R.E.C. Convention

The Annual Convention of the South Fredericksburgh and Adolphustown Religious Education Council was held in the United Church on Sunday afternoon and evening. There was a good attendance at both sessions and delegates were present from Sunday Schools in the township.

The opening exercises of the morning were in charge of Sillsville, conducted by Mr. Arthur Mellow. Following the president's address, in which he stressed the importance of the work, and pointed out the necessity of taking time for the Lord's work if we would expect a blessing, came the report of the Secretary, Mrs. H. M. Hough.

The various township superintendents gave reports of the work done by the various departments over which they had been placed, teachers' training, boys' work and girls' work being the only departments in which no direct, active work had been accomplished, the work of the latter two being done during mid-week activities and Sunday school classes.

The County President, Mr. W. H. Mills, then gave an instructive address on the methods of creating a proper teaching atmosphere. This was followed by an interesting discussion after which Rev. H. Sanders and Mrs. Sanders delighted the audience with a beautiful duet. Rev. J. E. Beckel then took charge of the session with a half-hour's round table conference.

Afternoon Session

In the afternoon Hawley Sunday school had charge of the devotional exercises, conducted by Rev. W. S. Smart, following which Rev. H. B. Sanders introduced Mr. Clarence Plested, who gave an interesting explanation of the High School Student Movement, its inception and development.

Mrs. W. S. Smart gave an address on Missionary Education. It was an impressive plea for Sunday Schools to train the missionary mind of the children who are at the most impressionable age and to develop the spirit of world friendship. Many practical and helpful missionary methods were suggested by her, and free discussion following.

The Nomination Committee reported as follows, the report being adopted, the officers being installed by Rev. W. S. Smart:—

President— Mr. Floyd Vanneel.
Vice-President—Mr. Arthur Mellow
Secy.-Treas.—Mrs. H. M. Hough.
Children's Division — Mrs. Robert Merritt.

Girls' Work—Miss Marjorie Keyes.
Boys' Work—Mr. Fred Creighton.
Young People's—Miss Vera Whyte.
Adult Division—Mrs. F. McIlroy.
Home Department — Miss Lillian Carr.
Teacher Training—Rev. H. B. Sanders.
Missionary Department—Miss Hattie Magee.
Temperance Dept. — Miss Annabelle Hough.

A motion song "Building for Eternity" was sung by the Sillsville Sunday School children and was followed by an interesting demonstration by Mrs. E. A. Hough and Mrs. Mellow, of a place of dramatization in worship. She demonstrated how Sunday School hymns could be made more appealing and worship more beautiful by dramatizing the hymn, "It Came upon the Midnight Clear," and with the assistance of four ladies dramatized the following hymns: "In Christ there is no east or west."

The session was concluded by a brief exercise, "The Meaning of Joy," by the Sillsville Sunday School. The thanks of the gathering were conveyed by the President to all who had contributed to the success of the convention and to the Ladies' Aid of Sillsville Church, for the bountiful noon repast.

The session was closed with the benediction being pronounced by Rev. H. B. Sanders and the convention adjourned to meet in Hawley United Church in June, 1935.

THAT "LIKE THE DICKENS" FEELING IS LIVER

Wake Up Your Liver Bile. Feel Fit. You Needn't use Calomel To Do It.

It's your liver, failing to pour out the vital bile flood, that makes you feel "dickensy." That makes you feel so sad-sodden.

Bile is Nature's own laxative. Food stays too long in your bowels and decays. Gas bloats you. Your head aches. You're sour, sick, headachy, pain heartburn. You need a mighty good bile flow to make you feel right and bowels move regularly. Your whole system is poisoned. Then you feel rotten.

How can you reasonably expect to clear up a common liver condition with mere bowel and stomach washes, purges, or flushings? Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets were made to get at the cause. Carter's Little Liver Pills are good, but Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are better in a very short time. Test them. See how much better you feel. Be definite. Ask for Carter's by name—and get them. 25c a box. Same. Carter's, or up to you. 25c at all druggists. 49

S. S. Convention,, Sheffield and Camden Twps.

The annual convention of Sunday Schools of Camden and Sheffield townships was held at Yarker United church, Wednesday, June 6th, President, Mr. Edward Purcell; secretary-treasurer, Mr. E. Bell.

Morning Session

The morning session was opened with hymn 30, followed by prayer by Rev. Mr. McKenzie. The Bible reading was taken from James, chapter 1. Hymn 239 was then sung after which Mr. McKenzie extended the greetings in the absence of Mr. Donald Martin, who was detained through illness of a friend. Mr. McKenzie spoke firmly on the attitude, in these days, of depression, and hoped we might have a larger feeling toward our church work and get rid of the feeling that church work is not just what it used to be. Let us get in the class of James, who said: "hold fast," and Gideon said: "put someone else," I cannot do it. That attitude is no good. It is not numbers that count. It's the spirit in which the work is done, for God shall be done on earth as it is in heaven. The Sunday school is the great feeding ground of the church.

At this point, Mr. E. Bell moved and Mrs. E. Purcell seconded, that Mrs. Alice Clarke, Colebrook, be press reporter.

Mr. Edward Purcell, president of the convention, then took charge, Mr. Purcell thanked the delegates and all who were out early and on time. He said punctuality counted a great deal. Moved by Mrs. E. Purcell, seconded by Mrs. Arlie Clarke, that all ministers and superintendents form the resolution and nominating committee this year. One executive meeting was reported during the year. The school enrolment was then given, after which followed a violin selection by Mrs. Fairburn, accompanied by Miss Helen Williams of Camden East. A report by the departmental superintendent was to have been given by Rev. T. H. P. Anderson of Newburgh, but owing to illness, he was detained.

Miss Williams, superintendent of the children's division reported five schools without cradle rolls. It was thoroughly emphasized that all primary classes should use low chairs and tables and have curtains, if possible. Miss Hannah reported for the girls' division. Mr. McKenzie, who reported for the young people's division, suggested a young people's rally to be held in October, and that something should be done to encourage the attendance at the young people's meetings. Mrs. S. M. Wilson reported for the adult division, and Mr. Richmond did not send in a report for the home department. D. M. Stinson, superintendent of teachers' training had nothing to report. On account of Mrs. P. Asselstine's absence Miss K. Baker reported for the missionary department. In giving her report on temperance Mrs. Bell was led to stress the signing of pledges.

At this time, Mr. Andrews sang sweetly, "Make Somebody Happy To-day."

Evening Session

Devotional exercises were led by Mr. M. Jackson and the Bible reading taken from the 12th chapter of Ecclesiastes. Hymn 240 was sung. Mrs. Mills, Wilton. After a hymn, the roll call was taken as follows: Five eight; Centreville, none; Desmond, none; Yarker, sixteen; Mosscow, two; Odessa, two; Harlowe, two, Strathcona, four; Camden East, five; Wesley, one, Reidville, one, Newburgh, one; Bethel, one and none.

Mrs. Andrews, by request, favored the meeting with the solo entitled "Can the World see Jesus in You."

The report of the resolution committee was given by Mr. T. H. P. Kenzie. The committee resolved to send a letter of sympathy to Mr. and Mrs. T. H. P. Anderson in their hour of affliction. It was also resolved to thank those who had help to make the convention a success; to the Yarker ladies who served a most delicious meal, and to the trustee board.

The convention will be held at Desmond or Centreville, next year.

Mr. M. R. Brown then gave a very interesting talk on "Boys' Problems."

Officers Elected

The following officers were elected for the ensuing year:—

President, Rev. T. H. P. Stinson.
1st Vice-Pres.—Mrs. T. M. Wilson.
Sec.-Treas.—Mrs. E. Bell.
Girls' Dept.—Mrs. Ross Hannah.
Boys' Dept.— Mrs. E. Galbraith.
Adults' Dept.—Mrs. E. Purcell.
Home Dept.—Mr. E. Purcell.
Missionary—Mrs. P. Asselstine.
Temperance—Mrs. E. Bell.
Young People's— Mr. McKenzie.
Mr. Scanlon, Yarker, elected pianist in charge of the installation of officers.

The newly elected president then introduced the next speaker.

Rev. Mr. Sexsmith spoke very strongly on our responsibility to the young people. Teach the Bible to your boys and girls at home, if you can remember and teach it only at random. Train your child so that he will be at home with Jesus. After the singing of hymn, and a short executive meeting was held, a most profitable convention was brought to a close.

FRUIT HEALTH CERTIFICATE

When making "agreements of sale", Canadian exporters of fruit to the United States and Canada are requested to ascertain from importers if special certificates of health, and of what nature, are required by the authorities of the importing countries. During the past shipping season, exporters applied for certificates of health which have not been required by the importing country but had been included as a necessary document in the "agreement of sale". In order that these contracts could be fulfilled, the Dominion Department of Agriculture, through its Administrative Insect and Pest Act Advisory Board, co-operated with fruit exporters and arranged for the inspection and certification or the shipments. Fruit exporters therefore are requested to keep in mind that the Department is authorized to issue these certificates of agreement freedom from insect pests and plant diseases only if these certificates are demanded by the importing authorities and not because the exporter agreed to furnish one as a condition of sale.

LIGHT POULTRY WANTED BY UNITED KINGDOM

How Canada Can Compete in the British Market

"One of the largest drawbacks against the Canadian chicken in the British market is the difference in that country has always been on the heavy side—about 4 to 5 lbs., and if there was only produce a chicken from, say, 30 lbs. a box (that is, chicken averaging 2½ lbs. each and packed as we have a market here that can absorb any quantity."

The above paragraph from the United Kingdom is quoted by the Dominion Department of Agriculture Egg and Poultry Market Review which points out that a similar significance is the reference to weight. All poultry producers realize the value of the correct weight of Russian chickens, one of the most popular varieties in England, is about 2½ lbs. dressed, which suggests the possibilities of something being done in Canada with Leghorn cockerels. Heretofore, the practice has been to market these as broilers, with the result that during the past year or two the local market has become quite congested. It is comparatively easy by proper crate feeding to add another half or three-quarters of a pound to broiler weight and thus bringing them within the range of weights desired on the British market.

Points in Rose Planting

When new rose plants are received, it is important that the roots should not be allowed to dry out under any circumstance. It is a good practice when opening the parcel of rose plants to plunge the roots into water and leave them there for several hours, or to bury the plants, roots and branches, in moist soil for a few days. Either of these practices will restore the moisture in the stems that has been lost during the winter season.

Hybrid tea roses should be planted about 18 inches apart; hybrid perpetuals, two and a half to three feet; and the rugosa hybrids, the most roses, and other large-growing hardy sorts about four feet apart. It is necessary to prune back severely, and the bushes should be planted deep enough so that the point of the union between stock and scion is from two to three inches below the surface of the ground. This is important, because, if the union is at or very near the surface, the sun shining on it hardens the wood and prevents a free circulation of sap, which is not desirable as a vigorous growth is necessary for best results. Roses need an abundance of moisture and the surface of the soil should be kept loose from spring until midsummer. After each rain the rose bed should be hoed or raked, leaving a rather loose surface, or during a dry time, it is necessary to water the roots and the soil should be loosened after watering. It is better to water roses thoroughly occasionally, than to give them a light watering frequently.

Modesty is the only sure bait when you angle for praise . . . Whatever real merit you have, other people will discover; and people always magnify their own discoveries, as they lessen those of others.

Rheumatism Got Him

80-YEARS-OLD PIANIST IS RELIEVED BY KRUSCHEN

Although old age has not yet kept this man from his occupation as a pianist, rheumatism did threaten to do so recently.

"Two years ago," he writes, "I was suddenly taken with rheumatism, all down my left arm. I tried many things—all to no purpose. I then commenced taking a half-teaspoonful of Kruschen Salts every morning, and soon felt benefit. My arm, which was painful and nearly useless, to my astonishment is now, after a few weeks' treatment, quite better. I am more than pleased, as I am a pianist, I am just entering my 80th year, and am in good health."—G. L. A.

The six mineral salts of Kruschen have a direct effect upon the whole bloodstream, neutralling uric acid, which is the recognized cause of rheumatism. They also restore the eliminating organs to proper working order, and so prevent constipation, thereby checking the further formation of uric acid and other body poisons which undermine the health.

SPRING WORK WITH BEES

Reports to date indicate a great variation in the condition of bees following their winter confinement. In some instances winter losses were nil while in other the colony loss was very heavy. In many cases where the colonies did survive a general weakening of colony strength was distinctly noticeable. The spring season is the most critical period in the life of a colony, because its numerical force is then at its lowest point. The bees are old and low in vitality, and the stores are usually exhausted, yet at the same time the greatest strain of brood rearing is placed upon the colony in order to rear bees in time for the harvest. The bees will need the following assistance to overcome the handicap (1) a prolific queen at the head of each colony, (2) a sufficient food supply to feed the oncoming generation, (3) a certain amount of protection against changeable weather conditions. Replace all weak and failing queens as soon as possible. Do not rely upon the early spring flowers to supply sufficient food, feed the bees. Do not unpack outdoor wintered bees too early and give protection to those brought out from cellars.

Women's Institutes District Annuals Held At Bath and Moscow

Delegates Review Year's Work

On Thursday, June 14th, seven branches of the Women's Institute of South Addington met at Moscow United Church for their District Annual Convention.

Registration of the delegates began shortly after 9:00 o'clock. By 9:30 a splendid representation of the branches had assembled in this old stone church, which was very tastefully decorated with Iris and potted plants.

Mrs. Redden, District President, presided over the convention, which opened with the singing of the Ode, with Mrs. W. C. Shangraw at the piano. This was followed by the repeating of the Creed in unison, and community singing.

Upon motion of Mrs. N. Boyce and Mrs. Shangraw, Mrs. E. W. Boyce was appointed Press Reporter.

The minutes of the last District Annual were read by the Secretary, and approved.

Reports Received

The financial reports from the various branches were given by the Secretaries, showing that a keen interest is being taken in W. I. work throughout the district. The District Secretary, Mrs. Allore, then gave her report.

At this time, Mrs. Percy Galbraith gave a reading in her usual splendid manner.

Reports from conveners of Standing Committees were presented, and work of each discussed.

Mrs. Bradshaw, of Tamworth, in absence of Miss Reid, gave a report on relief, which proved the wonderful assistance given the W. I. in the work to relieve distress and suffering.

The work on Legislation was read by Mrs. Redden, for Mrs. Doupe, and it was brought out that the Canadian women are now eligible for the Senate.

The report on Agriculture showed that the usual work in that line had been carried on.

Miss Cameron, of Nelleyp, in submitting the report on Home Economics, stressed the thought of teaching the young the principles of home making.

The health project had been ably carried on during the year by Mrs. F. D. O'Connor, and her report showed that much had been done, such as inoculation of school children. Health is the first essential in life, and during the discussion, which followed, it was brought out that, generally speaking, the clothing of the young people today is more wholesome than that of the young people of a century ago. So is it very important, as regards our health, to have good warm footwear during damp and cold weather.

Mrs. E. W. Boyce, in reporting on Publicity, told of the publicity of everyone from the day one is born until he is laid to his last resting place. Every branch was helping its work before the public in several ways, such as reports of meetings and printing and distributing of programmes.

Immigration, now to be known as Canadianization, was dealt with by Mrs. H. Robinson.

In the report of Community Activities, Mrs. Scanlin told of one branch having a cupboard built in their hall and intend to place dishes therein for community use.

Historical Research is always a very interesting phase of the work, and during the year papers and demonstrations were given on making of hooked mats, candle dips, and other pioneer work. The data for this work will not always be available and there is a pressing need for these things to be collected and kept, possibly, in form of a scrap book, to be handed down to the coming generation.

Terms of the Wills

Mrs. Donald Hannah, on Education, stressed the idea that life was a school, and not books, but supplemented by things necessary to carry one through life. The Institute is doing this through its Short Courses, its meetings and the contact with others.

Canadian Industries proved to be none the less interesting than the other phases of W. I. work, for Mrs. Martin reported addresses and papers given on several subjects under this head.

Presidents Address

Mrs. Redden, the President, addressed the meeting, telling what the W. I. has meant to her. In short, it consisted of self control, self respect, self reliance and tolerance. We may differ in little things, but in the larger things we are one. The W. I. stands for kindliness, consideration of others, equality of rights, and the meeting of others on common ground, without class or creed, and with one aim and object in view: the training and utilisation of each to its fullest science. The Institute teaches us to guard against indifference, lack of interest, undue criticism, jealousy, envy, and strife. These are the disturbing influences which blight and wither the God given power, the human intellect, and hinder the application of the Golden Rule: "Do unto others that which you would

Local Masons Attend Divine Service at Trinity Church

At the regular morning service of Trinity United Church, the Masons of Napanee and the surrounding district were in attendance. The occasion was the annual church parade, in celebration of the Festival of St. John the Baptist.

Rev. Harry Pawson, minister of the church, preached the sermon. The choir, under the leadership of W. R. Gray, sang an anthem, in which Mrs. F. B. Mills and Mrs. H. B. Kirby took the solo parts. Following the offertory, Mr. E. B. Weiss sang a solo, "There is a City."

Mr. Pawson took as his text the sixth verse of the first chapter of John's gospel: "There was a man sent from God, whose name was John." He spoke of some of the aspects of the work of John the Baptist. His was a ministry attended by an almost incredible success. It was a success attested to by the phenomenal number who followed him. Numbers, however, are not the test which can be applied to the work of every man and every institution. Mr. Pawson contrasted the work of John and of Jesus. He showed that John's work was to throw down, but our work, following the example of Jesus, is to build up. We are at one and the same time, the builders and the building material. Masons, following the ideals and aims of their order, are pre-eminently in the class of builders.

The success of John's preaching was founded on the belief of men that there was reality in it. Everything about John indicated that he believed "that man does not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God." He dispensed with all the graces of oratory and preached repentance. We should covet for ourselves that which made John's ministry a success — reality.

Mr. Pawson continued by saying there is a growing demand, to-day, for reality in men and institutions accompanied by a lively protest against insincerity. He showed instances of unreality in art, movies, the press, science, politics and religion, and made a plea for greater sincerity in these phases of our life.

In closing, Mr. Pawson spoke of the slogans and aims of various service clubs, fraternal societies and other welfare institutions. He said there was a demand, to-day, for a greater thoroughness in the work and slogans with actual practice, in other words, a demand for greater reality.

V. O. N. Garden Party At the Home of W.S. Herrington

The lawns and gardens of Mr. W. S. Herrington's home, on Piety Hill, presented a charming picture on Thursday afternoon of last week, when they were opened to the Napanee Branch of the Victorian Order of Nurses, for the June Tea.

Miss Nora Herrington, president of the branch, received the guests on the verandah. With her were, her guest, Miss Milne of Toronto, and the first vice-president, Mrs. E. J. Pollard. Mrs. Haycock acted as treasurer and Mrs. Moffatt and Mrs. Maybee sold tickets on the basket of groceries, donated by Mr. W. V. Webster and a cup and saucer given by Mrs. T. B. Wallace.

Many guests arrived between the hours of three and six. After strolling through the gardens, fragrant with June blossoms, the guests were invited to tea in the dining-room. A silver bowl of lovely-shaded rose peonies made a colorful centre for the tea table. Silver candle sticks and silver tea services, completed the attractive arrangement of the lovely tea covered table. Mrs. George Switzer, Mrs. George Thompson and Mrs. D. MacNaughton poured tea and iced punch. They were assisted in serving by the Misses Mary Galbraith; Dorothy Wilson, Helen Grange Gerow Scott, Jean and Helen Lanfraser, Mary Lailey and Gussie Boyce.

The members of the V. O. N. feel they cannot be too grateful to Mr. Herrington, for his continued kindness and interest. He has generously allowed the branch to use his beautiful garden each year, to help increase the funds, which are generally put at this season.

Congratulations are to be extended to Miss Herrington on her success as president and the great interest she has shown in this worthy work.

County Makes Plans For House of Refuge

Committee to Seek Available Property

The matter of building a House of Refuge for the County of Lennox and Addington, was a question of much importance, considered at the last session of the County Council, held last week. A definite step toward this end was taken.

The question has been under consideration for many years. The establishment of such an institution has been made possible by the bequests of the late R. D. Schermerhorn and R. J. Wright, which have been held in a fund by the Trusts and Guarantee Company of Toronto, for some years .To-day the amount of money available from these funds is about $33,000.

Terms of the Wills

According to the terms of the will of the late R. D. Schermerhorn, the money left by him was to be used for the establishment of a House of Refuge or a similar institution within the county or if not so used, to be paid over to the Kingston General Hospital. By the terms of the will the county was given three years in which to accept the money and apply it to the use designated. It was accepted in 1918, but by agreement with the executors, extension of time has been granted for five year periods, on several occasions. The last of these extensions runs out in 1935.

The Wright bequest was for the purpose of establishing an aged persons' home, in Napanee. By agreement with the executors of the two estates, the two bequests have been combined and have been steadily growing in amount, awaiting the selection of the county for the site.

Recently, Mr. T. B. German and Mr. T. A. Martin, executors of the estate of the late R. D. Schermerhorn, notified the county that the bequest would be turned over to the Kingston General Hospital, a step they would take as they had full power to do so under the residuary clause of the will left by Mr. Schermerhorn. A hearing of the question will be held at Osgoode Hall on Wednesday, June 27th, at which time a decision is expected to be made.

Two Courses Open To Council

At a previous meeting of the Council, a special committee, composed of the Warden, JamesW. Clark and F. C. Wilson, was named to deal with the matter. The committee reported that there were only two courses open for the county to pursue:

(a) To proceed to establish a House of Refuge in this county—

(b) To resist an application made by executors of the late Schermerhorn and Wright estates to divert the funds to any institution outside of the county.

Following the report of the special committee, the Council in session passed a motion, moved by Dr. F. C. Wilson and seconded by James W. Clark, that this county proceed to establish a House of Refuge in this county and to that end the special committee in connection with the Schermerhorn and Wright estates, be authorized to confer with the executors and solicitor concerned in these estates with a view to obtaining a satisfactory building or building site, to be used for a House of Refuge in this county, in accordance with the terms of the donations as accepted by by-laws Nos. 347 and 352.

County Solicitor To Represent County

It was moved by Mr. Clark and seconded by Dr. Wilson, that the County Solicitor, Mr. J. M. Simpson, K.C., be and he is hereby instructed to appear as counsel for this corporation at the hearing of motion or motion served by the solicitor for the estate of R. D. Schermerhorn and R. J. Wright, to be heard at Osgoode Hall on June 27th, 1934.

He is also instructed to oppose application of counsel on behalf of said estates to have the trust funds now held in trust by the Trust and Guarantee Company, for the purpose of establishing and maintaining a House of Refuge in this county, diverted to any other use, and that all matters in this connection be referred to the special committee dealing with this matter, with power to act.

INDIFFERENCE

Affection can withstand very severe storms of rigor, but not a long polar frost of downright indifference. Love will subsist on wonderfully little hope but not altogether without it.

THE NEW ORDER OF THINGS

As the days pass, Ontario realizes that in Mr. Hepburn, the Province has a new type of leader. During the campaign his statements were not taken any too seriously. He impressed us as a man with a ready tongue and a sharp repartee, who was allowing his wit to run off with his balanced judgment. Since the election, which would have sobered most people, Mr. Hepburn has given numerous interviews in quite the strain of his platform utterances. He jokes with his interviewers, and amuses them by his facetious remarks about the campaign. He never tires of saying he intends to implement all the promises he made during the campaign. He intends, he says, to fire Mr. Gaby, to cut down the personnel of the various commissions, and to offer for sale by public auction, the cars which were used by the cabinet ministers. These, more or less spectacular moves, will be popular with the electorate who will be shown some tangible instances of economy.

Beneath the jovial exterior of Mr. Hepburn's manner, there may or may not be real qualities of statemanship. For these, an anxious province will watch with real concern and expectancy. The test is a two-fold one, which will try his mettle to the core. In the first place, he has to choose a cabinet from rather untried material—and there are many ready and eager to serve. The power to read character and estimate the future value of men, is one mark of a statesman. If Mr. Hepburn can choose wisely and well, he will have surmounted the immediate hurdle. He has already announced five of his cabinet. We are of the opinion he has made his easiest choice first. On two points the Leader will be judged in selecting a cabinet. Mr. Sinclair, the former leader of the Liberal Party, holds the affection and respect of the whole Province and should not be overlooked; and then in the Department of Education, a real educator is needed. An administrator may suffice in some cabinet offices, but in the Department of Education, an expert is needed. It is to be hoped one may be found who could carry forward the work of education with knowledge of modern problems and all the needs of which have arisen as a result of the increasing leisure of our day.

The second test will be Mr. Hepburn's ability to withstand the pressure of special interests. For a long time the Liberal workers have been holding the fort, and now their party is in power, great efforts will be put forth to secure positions of one kind and another for them. It will take real courage and moral stamina to withstand these insistent appeals. To the extent in which Mr. Hepburn is able to stall them off he will win the confidence of the Province. It will be unfortunate, indeed, if anything like the spoils system, so widespread in the United States, should prevail here. Those government appointees who have, throughout the province, rendered faithful and unbiased service, ought to be assured, at once, of the security of their position.

During the week end Mr. Hepburn was in Ottawa, consulting Mr. MacKenzie King. It is to be hoped that does not become a habit; nothing would, so soon, crush the youthful ardor and enthusiasm of the new premier, as such visits.

DICTATORSHIP

There has been a tendency, of late, on the part of many people who have become discouraged with the national life, to express the belief in some form of dictatorship. We have heard a good deal of the failure of democracy and the need of a strong man. The ability, however, of a democracy to weather the storm of economic depression is most evident in nations which have had the longest experience with popular governments, and have, therefore, a firmer trust in their effectiveness. In England, democratic machinery has enabled the nation to meet changed conditions with the full support of the whole nation. That is true, as well of the United States, where a great popular vote enabled President Roosevelt to reorganize the whole national life with the consent of the governed.

Apart from Russia which, even yet, is an unknown quantity, Italy has, in recent times, had the longest experiment with a dictator. Mussolini seized the power in 1922. Since then we have heard glowing accounts of the rebirth of Italy. It is true that, at least, an element of stability has been injected into the nation. But the following figures, compiled by one of the most reliable sources, tells the real tale:

"The monthly average of bankruptcies in 1922, the last year on non-Fascist rule, was 221. In 1928, after six years of Fascism, it was 970; in 1932, after ten years of Fascism, it was 2,003. The total bankruteies in 1921 was 1,896; in 1933 21,308. Wages, in Italy today, stand at 35 to 50 per cent below the rates for 1921. Comparing Italy with England in this respect, wages in Italy have dropped fourteen index points, between 1928 and 1933, while British wages rose fifteen points. The total public debt amounts to 98,029,000,000 lira, which is almost a quarter of the whole private wealth of the country, and taxation has increased fifty per cent since the Fascists came to power."

It is well, when making statements re dictators, to face situation realistically and note these facts which give the true picture of conditions under a modern dictatorship.

GERMANY

All is not well in the Nazi Camp. Vice-Chancellor Von Papen has made an open onslaught on certain policies of his Leader, Hitler. This required courage, and could not have been done unless he was representing a certain influential body of public opinion. In addition to that, the Protestant Churches are not submitting—mildly—as Hitler hoped they would, to the plan of German nationalization of the churches. The wave of anti-semitism which marked the first days of the Hitler regime, is losing some of its fascination. This is due, in large measure, to the effect which the German boycott has on their external trade. Statistics of the amount of falling-off in trade returns, reveal the effectiveness of this form of economic retaliation. Germany which usually has an export balance, is showing a steadily rising import surplus. This is due, not to external borrowing but to the falling-off in exports. This constitutes the seriousness of the situation. It will be recalled that it was the paralyzing of German trade which played a decisive part in the Great War. No nation can afford to have imposed on it an economic boycott and hope to survive. That there is little hope of the boycott against German goods being lifted is evident from the statement made, last week, by Rabbi Wise. Speaking to the Central Conference of American Rabbis, Prof. Henry J. Cadbury urged the Jews to withdraw their boycott from Hitler, on the grounds that it was economic warfare. Rabbi Wise, answering, said: "I object, in the name of the Jewish People, to any man alive . . . . . to come to us Rabbis who are the servants of the Jewish People and tell us to substitute good will for hatred—I am a pacifist and opposed to war, but the boycott is not a war. It is a moral and economical weapon of self-defence."

These are evidences of the difficulty which the Hitler regime is facing from within its own ranks and from the great mass of public opinion outside, which has been outraged by the way in which men and women of Jewish birth and lineage, have been maltreated and abused by the German Nazis.

MRS. F. F. MILLER WRITES FROM INDIA

May 12th, 1934.

Dear Mrs. Templeton,—

At Daniel which is the cutoms station between the Punjab and Kashmir, while Mike was looking after the necessary papers, I walked over to where about a dozen Persian men and women were shopping to find if they had something particularly odd to sell. But they had come on their way to Mecca or coming back from there and had only clothing in the numerous bundles they carried. There were four women in the party, two were of high caste the other two servants. They were all dressed very like the women of Peshawar City, but instead of wearing the purdah gown they wore odd caps with veils about a yard long and half a yard wide, hanging over their faces; ladies wore white veils, the servants, black ones.

We had lunch at Uri, where there is an extra good Dak bungalow and reached Srinagar in time for afternoon tea. We are paying guests at Miss O'Connor's, who has a very large house and three smaller bungalows, which, originally were private houses, each with a separate garden, flowers in front and vegetables at the back. We are at one of the smaller houses, which is a duplex, without a kitchen or dining room and have the upper flat. There are two very large bedrooms, each with a bathroom; a large sitting-room well furnished with a large verandah across the front and one side of the living-room. The children sleep out on the side verandah and use their bedroom as a nursery. The Ayah sleeps on the floor of the verandah, beside the kitchen. The living-room and my bed-room have large open fireplaces for wood, which is very plentiful and cheap; electric light in every room. The big house is directly across the road where one walks through a lovely garden to the house where one goes for meals. I go over for every meal except afternoon tea, which is served by my bearer in the living-room here.

Visiting the Shops

Going to the back, one goes up about a dozen steps to the bund, which corresponds to the Mall or walk of Atlantic City. No cars or vehicles of any kind are allowed. From the bund, one can take a shikara and go to the other end of the bund, which is where most of the shops are. These shops are distinct from those in the bazaar, which are in another direction altogether, but one can take a tonga from the front of the big house or our bungalow and go by a different road to the shops. As a rule I walk one way and take the tonga back. It is over a two-mile drive and I pay the tongi man the munificent sum of six annas, about ten cents. The Tourist Bureau Office are also on the bund. The tongas is a jaw breaking affair with the seats back to back; the horse is generally a flea-bitten animal which looks as if it might fall dead any minute, but surprises one by going very fast, when one has a hold on for dear life. I hated them at first but am getting quite used to them now. I generally have the same man, whose horse is a lamb. I took a strange tonga the other day and the horse shied at the first motor we met and ran up on the sidewalk when the second car met us. I got out quickly and took another one and the horse was alright.

Miles and his wife only stayed two days and then motored back to Peshawar. We are staying at Miss O'Connor's.

Rumors of War

The rumors of war at the frontier are not as strong as they were, and unless a war starts in August, Miles will join us at Gulmarg. My daughter-in-law will be with us in any case. Miles lost a month's leave, last year, because of the Mohammedan war and hopes to get an extra month this year. Every officer gets two months leave during the summer.

A few nights before we left Peshawar, Miles was called, about ten o'clock. There was trouble threatening at Peshawar city and several units, Mile's among them, were told to stand-by." However, the Indian constabulary were able to cope with the trouble. True, one man was killed and several were injured, so the report said; but what is one murder more or less in a city that has an average of nine murders in twenty-four hours. It was feared the city people would crash the wires, so to speak, and invade Peshawar cantonment. All has been quiet since, though one never knows, from hour to hour, just when some tribe from the frontier will break loose.

Attends a Benefit Party

In the opposite direction along the bund from the shops, are several houseboats owned by the Maharaja. His guests are sent to either one of these or to one of his guest houses, one of which, near Srinagar. At present, the son of the Maharajh of Hyderabad and his wife, are on one of the boats. His Highness of Hyderabad is the world's worst miser, although he is said to be the richest man in India, if not in the world. His daughter-in-law is a daughter of the Sultan of Turkey, and spends money like water. H. H. is worrying his head off because of her extravagance. They say His Highness counts his annas as we would our pennies. The Prince has three motor boats and runs in front of our bungalow and the most wonderful cars pass by, constantly. I saw several of the women walking the other day. They weren't in Purdah and had on wonderful saris. As a rule these women are very pretty when young; not too dark and very good features. Yesterday afternoon the children and I, with Ayah in attendance went to the Palace to have been a children's garden party at the home of Rev. and Mrs. Tyndall-Bristow's. It rained all morning and though it cleared at noon the ground was still too wet for the fete held indoors. The Palace has a very large mission school and has been out sere doing that work for nearly fifty years, with wonderful results. When he first came, no native would bathe in the river or lake, and the water was only to drink or to wash their face and hands in before starting their devotions .Now he has them swimming and they have rowing and sailing races, the student is urged to become a Christian, but they do so from their example set them. About three weeks ago seven of the men teachers in his shchool went sailing on Volar Lake, which is very treacherous .A squall came up and upset the boat and all seven were drowned. It is thought they became entangled in the sails. The party yesterday was a benefit affair for the families of those drowned. The house was packed. Animals, etc, carved out of wood, such as monkeys, canes, papier-mache boxes, etc., were for sale. Though the uncertain weather kept quite a few away, there were was good results. It is a boys' school and all the work was done by them. We went and came back in a tonga, about three miles each way—the man used to bring us back and his charge was equal to about 40 cents.

Excellent Servants

Walking on the Bund, one day, an Indian stopped and asked me if I wanted a Durzi He said he'd worked for us last year and produced a note from Mrs. Miller. Jr., it was a very good recommendation of the work he had done last year. It is truly wonderful how they remember faces and names, considering the number of people we come from the plains all over, every year. I was really wanting a Durzi to alter some of the children's things so he is coming with his little sewing machine tomorrow. They are so clever in some ways and absolutely stupid in others. We hadn't been here an hour when about a dozen boy-scouts arrived with all sorts of things to sell. The next morning the owner of the Palace Hotel-boat we had last year arrived with an enormous tray full of the loveliest fresh cherries, figs and walnuts. He hadn't rented the flitt as yet and hoped Miles would know of someone who would want a boat, later. I hope one of the people, whose names Miles gave him, will take the boat. He was such a good Maungi, so anxious to please. As a matter of fact every Indian I've had, he produced the most wonderful strawberry shortcake loaded with cream—and numerous one. There was not a crum left when tiffin was over. We praised it very highly, and when the time came for the grandest twin brother and it also was quickly demolished. I'm afraid I'm going to be most comming with his little sewing machine tomorrow. They are so clever in some ways and absolutely stupid in others. Ontario Salad Week

Streaming rains of the past two weeks, accompanied by the finest brand of June sunshine, have given a cheerful appearance to the garden crops throughout Ontario. So much so that the growers are up-to-day faced with their annual problem—the disposal of great quantities of perishable green crops—lettuce, cabbage, green onions, green beans, radish, etc.

This year, an organized effort is being made to move the early green crops into quick consumption by staging Ontario Salad Week June 25th to 30th. During the week, Ontario's housewives are urged to "serve a salad every day"—made of course, from the succulent products of Ontario's gardens.

Ontario Salad Week has the hearty endorsement and cooperation of the Provincial Department of Agriculture and of the Ontario Growers Markets Council, and with wholesale dealers, both wholesale and retail, are joining in planning displays of local green vegetables and suitable salad accessories, also advertising Salad Week to their customers.

Ontario-grown hothouse tomatoes and cucumbers, will also share in the displays. Dominion Day picnickers are urged to include the old-fashioned salad bowl in their preparations, for with a supply of fresh vegetables and prepared dressing, it is easy to prepare a crisp, tasty salad right when the sandwiches are unpacked.

Free Shots on Local Sport

Word has just been received that the Belleville Victorias are thinking of dropping out of the Bay of Quinte League. It appears that the boys cannot give up their softball to practice baseball, and are just not showing the interest they should in their team, so Mr. B. A. Fanning is seriously contemplating throwing up the sponge. It is to be hoped, however, that the situation can still be saved and that the Vics will be in there to finish out the schedule. They will play their regular engagement with the Gibbard Athletics on Wednesday, June 27th. This game is being played in Napanee, as is the custom with Belleville's home games. However, an announcement is expected shortly, and what will happen if they drop out no one knows as yet. A meeting of the League will be called and several propositions will be thoroughly discussed.

On Saturday, George Dickson's Hayburn club will transfer their home game with the B's to Napanee and this will give another opportunity for the A's to play the B's in a doubleheader. The first game will start at 1.30 and be the Hayburn vs. B's game. The second game between the A's and the B's will start about 3.30. Admission, of course.

On Dominion Day, July 2nd, the Siberry Club, of Toronto, will play the Athletics two games, one at 10 o'clock in the morning, and the other at 3 o'clock in the afternoon. The morning game is arranged so that those who wish to attend the races in the afternoon may still have an opportunity of seeing this club in action. Since the games are being played in the one day, the price of grandstand seats is reduced to 25c and the general admission to 15c. Tickets are being sold and a gate prize of an occasional chair will be drawn for at the seventh innings of the second game.

The management of the local club have been trying for some time to bring one of the good Toronto teams here and are very fortunate in being able to make satisfactory arrangements with the fast travelling Siberry Club. At present this club is leading the Senior Toronto City and is being picked by many to win the championship of the city this year. It is a youthful club with plenty of pep, and will give local fans a chance to size up the difference between ball in Eastern Ontario and in Toronto.

Saturday's game with the Kingston Ponies was a good one for the A's to get out of their system. The A's had not been beaten since the Ponies defeated them on May 24th, having won nine straight. Only one run was scored against them in their last four games, while the A's scored 31 runs against their opponents. So the boys were just about due for a loss, and it is better that such reverses should come during exhibition games than in a regular league fixture. The field was exceedingly bad after the recent rain and both teams were guilty of mishaps. A tricky wind did not help any and the wet weather recently has kept both nines out of their respective diamonds for practice.

However, the Ponies would have won despite the errors on the part of the locals, but had both teams witnessed a close battle throughout. The Ponies will be back again before the season is over, and it is also expected that Belleville and Peterborough will play here before long.

IMPERIAL TOBACCO COMPANY OF CANADA, LIMITED, SIGNS TOBACCO GROWERS AGREEMENT

Montreal, Que., June 18. — Gray Miller, President of the Imperial Tobacco Company of Canada, Limited, states that "The Ontario flue cured tobacco growers are now practically sure for 1934 a price based on 27c per lb., for an average crop. Although we are still without any assurance that other manufacturers will follow our lead, we have now agreed to meet the request of the growers for a 27c average price, and we have given them our definite undertaking in writing to adhere to that basis for the 1934 crop, provided they can secure an agreement from the other manufacturers to pay the same price."

HUSBAND PERSUADED HER TO TAKE KRUSCHEN

By following her husband's advice, this woman made a tremendous improvement in her appearance — she actually took off 32 lbs. of her excess fat. Telling of her experience, she writes:—

"A year ago, I was troubled with rheumatism, nervousness and other complaints. And I got so fat that I was ashamed of my figure. I was persuaded by my husband to take Kruschen Salts. Before I began, I weighed 161 lbs. After taking Kruschen for a short time the rheumatism was less painful, my nerves got stronger, and my step lighter. Then I knew that Kruschen was doing me good, so I persevered with it and got my weight down to 129 lbs., a reduction of 32 lbs. of unwanted fat. I am not boasting when I say that I feel younger and more active, have a much better figure, and am healthier than I have been for years."—Mrs. J. S.

Kruschen is a blend of six mineral salts which assists the internal organs to throw off each day those waste products that would otherwise accumulate in the form of fatty tissue.

OBITUARY

EDITH MAY PERRY

Following an illness of several months duration, there passed away at the home of her son, Ray F. Perry, Morven, on Sunday morning, May 27th, one of the best known and highly esteemed residents of this district, in the person of Mrs. Edith May Perry, wife of Mr. A. B. Perry in her 69th year. Throughout the several months of her illness, she was tenderly cared for by her family. Her life partner has also been in ill-health for several months.

A daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Parks, deceased was born at Hay Bay where she spent her early years. There she took an active interest in the work of the church and when she left her home district, was greatly missed. In 1890 she was united in marriage to Mr. Perry a well-known farmer of the Hay Bay district. In 1908 they left Hay Bay and moved to Morven district, where they continued farming. Retiring from the active duties of the farm, they moved to Napanee in 1919, where Mr. Perry went in the coal business and with the exception of the past several months, Napanee had been their home since that time.

Mrs. Perry, although of a retiring disposition, had a splendid personality and her friends were many.

Besides her husband, she leaves to mourn her loss, two sons, Ray F. Perry and Morley Perry, one daughter, Mrs. Sperry Fraser. There is also one brother, Newton Parks, and two sisters, Mrs William Gambly and Mrs. J. N. Hambly.

The funeral service was held on Tuesday, May 29th, from the residence of her son, Ray, and was conducted by Rev. Mr. Oliver of Morven. Interment took place in the Morven Cemetery. Pall-bearers were Mr. W. J. Tremouth, Mr. W. R. Scott, Capt. A. S. Hughson, Mr. W. B. Cummings, Mr. A. N. Fraser and Mr. A. G. Curle.

The Late Mr. Joseph Clark

Mr. Joseph Clarke, who died on Sunday, June 24th, at his home at Bethany, was a son of the late Ephraim and Sarah Clark. He was born at Huff's Dock in Adolphustown a short distance from his late home. Sixty-four years ago this September he married Anne Goodfellow, of Peterborough, and four years ago they celebrated their golden wedding anniversary. He was in his 74th year, and until the last few years has been a very active, ambitious, hard working man. He spent some years in Deseronto, though most of his life was spent on the farm at Bethany.

The late Mr. Clark was a very well-known resident of North Fredericksburg and had always taken an active interest in community affairs. He was a member of Bay View L.O.L. and the Bethany United Church. He was a successful farmer and business man and anything he attempted to do, he put his best into it. He was a good neighbour, a kind husband and an affectionate father, and an active Christian gentleman.

The funeral service was held on Tuesday afternoon in Bethany United Church and was conducted by his minister, Rev. J. E. Beckel. The choir sang two of his favorite hymns, "The Old Rugged Cross," and "Face to Face." The large congregation present showed the esteem in which he was held by the entire community.

Interment was made in Bethany Cemetery. The Bay View L. O. L. under the direction of Bro. Charles Sills, W. M., had charge of the service at the grave. Many visiting brethren assisted in the beautiful Orange burial service.

There is left to mourn his loss his widow, two daughters, Mrs. J. Keech and Mrs. E. Bartley, Bethany; and one son, Frank, on the homestead. One daughter, the late Mrs. William Joyce, died a number of years ago.

NEWS AND INFORMATION FOR THE BUSY FARMER

(Furnished by the Ontario Department of Agriculture)

Poultry Exports

Since the first of April, 240,000 lbs. of Canadian dressed poultry have been exported from Montreal to London and other overseas points. In the corresponding period last year there were no similar shipments. Demand is active and every sign points to a record year.

Flax Shortage

Reports to the Ontario Marketing Board would indicate a definite shortage in flax in 1934. This points to an opportunity for Canadian flax growers. Last year, Canada's acreage to flax was approximately 343,600 with production some 632,000 bushels, this being far below consumption. Elsewhere in the United States amounted to 25,000,000.

Livestock Thefts

The number of thefts by truckers, reported to receivers of livestock on the Union Stock Yards and at the plants, is definitely increasing, according to investigation by the Ontario Marketing Board.

Such losses could be avoided if shippers would demand the bill of lading for their shipments by truck be made under a bill of lading.

The Ontario Department of Agriculture provided the bill of lading with the express purpose of avoiding such losses. Therefore it would seem that the shipper who is not availing himself of the protection afforded by this measure, or reporting his losses to the proper authorities, is unwittingly condoning these thefts. In other words, he is neither helping himself or those who are anxious to lighten his burden.

Weed Spraying

A new phase of weed control is the use of chemicals of which several have proved to be effective. On roadsides, along railway tracks and for small patches on farms the method is recommended though the expense is usually too high to warrant application on fields generally.

Norfolk County in 1923 sprayed its entire county road system, 218 miles, with excellent results. Not a weed ripened seed on the Norfolk County roadsides last year, and in addition to the number of weeds destroyed, less costs of spraying will also be reduced.

Lincoln County has sprayed as much as 40 miles of roadsides in one season. Oxford County is spraying 10 miles of county roads this year. Kent County used well over a carload of 15,000 pounds in fighting "Sow Thistle."

The chemical should be sprayed on the weeds, under pressure. A knapsack sprayer may be used for small patches and a power sprayer such as those used in orchards may be used for larger areas. Generally speaking, the spray solution should be mixed at the rate of 1 pound per gallon of water per 100 square feet of weeds.

Besides the weed killers specially prepared for that purpose, there are other materials such as salt, old motor oil, coal oil and gasoline that give good results.

Late Vegetable Crops

Quite a few of the vegetable crops lend themselves to late sowing for the production of fine quality vegetables for winter use. Beets, carrots and swede turnips may be sown as late as the middle of June and have time to develop to a desirable size for winter use. The land should be finely prepared and rich in plant food. Should dry conditions prevail it is well to sow the seed on the level rather than on ridges.

United Kingdom Exports

Show Definite Increase

Exports of apples from Ontario to the United Kingdom have expanded greatly since the establishment of a special sales representative, in London, to handle fruit consigned by Ontario shippers. During the 1930 apple crop season, Ontario shipped 153,000 barrels; in 1931, 136,000 barrels in 1932, 209,000 barrels; and from the crop harvested last fall over 467,000 barrels were exported, reports the Ontario Marketing Board.

Wellington Hog Club

Organization of county groups in the Ontario Swine Producers' Association in older Ontario is nearing completion. Following a preliminary meeting at Arthur, a well-attended gathering at Fergus decided to bring Wellington County into line. The situation with regard to the marketing of hogs in Ontario and Canada was fully explained by W. P. Watson of the Provincial Live Stock Branch, and a hearty discussion on methods of improvement in the swine industry followed his remarks.

Mr. Watson gave the interesting information that Wellington county ships around 75,000 hogs a year with ninety per cent. of them in the two top grades. This record is not equalled by any county shipping such a large number of hogs. It is surpassed by some counties with comparatively small shipments of hogs.

The general feeling of the meeting was that quite considerable work could be done to improve both the production and marketing conditions under which the swine industry operates.

It was agreed to join hands with the provincial organization and organize Wellington county. Twelve township directors were named.

Conferences In Toronto

Prices Being Arranged

Following a resolution presented by a joint committee of Canners and Growers to Hon. Thomas L. Kennedy, urging that something should be done to increase prices of tomato growers for the coming season, conversations have been held between the Ministers of Ontario and Quebec, under the auspices of the Federal Minister of Agriculture, Hon. Mr. Weir.

As a result of these conversations it has been announced that the Canners of Ontario and Quebec call a conference for the purpose of arriving at an agreement on the matters under discussion and make possible an increase in prices to the tomato growers over and above the Ontario Canners' contracts already made, ranging from 25c to 27½ cents per bushel, that the three governments, on invitation, will send representatives to the meeting with a view to discussing ways and means of making any such agreement effective.

Word just been received from Mr. J. A. Grenier, Deputy-Minister of Agriculture, for Quebec, that the canned goods manufacturers of that province have agreed to attend such a meeting and it is expected that the canning companies of Ontario will take immediate steps to arrange the conference af an early date.

Current Crop Report

Rain in the majority of districts of Ontario has greatly brightened the crop outlook, according to reports received from agricultural representatives during the past two weeks. Coming at a time when drought was a serious limit, the showers have proved of tremendous value to crops of all kinds which were practically at a standstill. Such crops as hay and strawberries will be decidedly short, but the moisture has changed the outlook for a majority of other crops. An improvement is noted in pastures which will bring relief to the critical livestock situation. An increased acreage of corn is reported from many counties and the crop is looking well. Essex reports 100,000 acres of corn, Kent having wintered well and promising an average of a 30-bushel crop over the whole county. Sweet clover is reported to have wintered well in Dufferin County, where early potatoes and cereal grains are also looking fine. McIntosh and Wealthies are heavily laden in the orchards of Dundas County, but it is doubtful if many of the Pumeuse trees will recover from winter injury. Glengarry reports widespread interest in the seeding of millet, sorgum, etc., and more of these crops will be sown there.

Notes From The Agricultural Office

COACHING CLASSES:—

Final arrangements have been made this week, in connection with coaching classes to be held as follows:

Roblin, Thursday and Friday, July 5th and 6th.

Newburgh, Friday and Saturday, July 6th and 7th.

Napanee, Monday and Tuesday, July 9th and 10th.

Odessa, Friday and Saturday, July 13th and 14th.

A day and a half will be devoted to each class and the work will be in charge of Miss Helen Baycroft, of Aurora. The information gathered at these classes should be of value to all the girls in the community and it is hoped every girl will take advantage of this opportunity. The final competition will be held in the Agricultural boardrooms on Monday, July 16th, when teams will be chosen composed of the high girls in this competition to represent the county in the Inter-County Household Science Judging Competition at the Central Canada Exhibition, Ottawa, and the Canadian National Exhibition, Toronto. The teams will each consist of three members.

FERTILIZER DEMONSTRATION PLOTS:-

The fertilizer plots with oats on the farm of Mr. J. B. Elliott, on the Hamburg Road, are coming on nicely. The plot with the 2-12-6 fertilizer is making a wonderful showing and has made rapid gains in growth over the check plot. The plot of 0-12-6 is also much better than the check. The public are invited to drop in and see these fields and we are sure everyone will be interested in watching the results. The fertilizer was applied at the rate of 375 lbs. per acre. This demonstration is under the direction of the local Agricultural Office and the Chemistry Department, Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph.

The Soybean plots, on the farm of Mr. E. W. Morton, at Conway, are away to a good start, one acre being planted for hay at the rate of 100 lbs. per acre; the other acre being sown in drills at the rate of 45 lbs. per acre for seed. The farmers in this district are invited to watch the results of these experiments. These plots are under the direction of the Field Husbandry Department, Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph, and the local Agricultural Office.

The Potato plots, on the farm of Mr. Joseph Foster, Moscow, should be worthwhile to the people in that district. Three varieties of Certified Potatoes, Irish Cobblers, Green Mountains and Dookeys have been planted with three kinds of fertilizer. One lot with 4-8-10; one with 2-8-10 and one with 2-12-6. The fertilizer was applied at the rate of 750 lbs. per acre. This is a dual purpose demonstration and will give some valuable information, not only on the use of different strengths of fertilizer but also a variety test of potatoes. Also at Mr. Foster's, Millets and Sudan Grass are being tested out as well as three varieties of turnips; three varieties of Soybeans and five varieties of Mangels. These plots are all away to a very good start and the public are asked to visit the plots and watch these experiments. It is hoped, through the assistance of the Chemistry Department, Agricultural College, Guelph, to have a demonstration Field Day that the results of fertilizer on potatoes may be discussed.

The Field Day will be held on the farm of Mr. Joseph Foster, Moscow, but the date has not yet been set.

ERNESTTOWN W. I.

The June meetine of the Ernesttown Women's Institute was held in the hall. There was a good attendance of members and visitors. The President, Mrs. Clarence Thompson, took charge of the meeting which opened by singing the ode, followed by the Lord's Prayer in unison. The minutes of the May meeting were read and approved. The roll call was answered by my favorite bridal bouquet. Miss Mona Thompson gave a splendid paper on "Bridal Customs in other Lands." She chose China. It would seem strange to us to know that out of four million people in China there are only one hundred family names. No two people of the same name can marry. The young man sends a messenger to the girl's parents and the plans are made for the wedding. The day following the wedding the bridegroom comes followed by 200 men servants, carrying sweets to the bride. At the door of the bride's new home a pan of fire burns briskly. The bride is lifted over the fire and if the fire does not go out it is a sign no evil spirits could get her. The day after the wedding the bride must cook her husband's rice or must light the fire from wood which is a part of her trousseau, as she is supposed to have everything ready for her new home.

The correspondence was then dealt with, letters from Mrs. Geo. Spring, Mrs. Robert Wood and Mrs. A. Flowe thanking the Institute for flowers sent during illness and death. A nice letter of thanks from Miss Hoffman, of McIntyre's School, acknowledging the book and supplies for the first aid kit.

Three new members were added to the list. Community singing was enjoyed by all, after which all present took part in a "Flower Contest." The prize was won by Mrs. Fraser Thompson. Mrs. Gordon Young, in her usual pleasing manner, demonstrated a summer salad. The proof of its goodness was in the eating, for it surely was delicious.

Mrs. Young was then asked to come to the front, and she was presented with a handsome silver sandwich plate, for her services as President of the W. I. for the past two years.

Dainty refreshments were served by the hostesses, Mrs. Anthony Hagerman, Mrs. Fred Hamm and Mrs. Edgar Thompson, with a collection of $1.40.

The July meeting will be at "Cedar Nook Camp", Bath. Everybody welcome.

WEED KILLERS —

There are now many chemical weed killers on the market, which have proved very successful in wiping out small plots and for cleaning up driveways and paths. For poison ivy, one application any time during the growing season is effective. Other weeds eliminated in this way are oxeye daisy, blind weed, Canada thistle, and most of these things like dandelions which make so many lawns unsightly.

THIS WEDDING SLIGHTLY MIXED

An Auction Sale, A Marriage Ceremony and a Confused Editor

A rattle-brained editor, who was full of hard cider, got a sale list and a marriage ceremony badly mixed up. A description of the wedding ran as follows:—

William Smith, only son of Mr. and Mrs. Josiah Smith, was disposed of at a Public Auction to Lucy Anderson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Saul Anderson on my farm in the presence of 79 guests, including the following chattels, viz.: — 2 mules, 12 head of cattle, Rev. C. W. Jackson, auctioneer, tied the nuptial knot, averaging 1,200 lbs. on the hoof.

The beautiful home of the bride was tastefully decorated with 20 cream cans, 1 milky rake, 1 feed grinder, 1 set of harness, nearly new, and just before the ceremony was commenced Mendelsohn's inspiring wedding march was softly given by one milch cow, 5 years old, 1 Jersey cow, carrying a bouquet of flowers flowers in her hand and looked charming in a gown of light spring wagon, 6 boxes of apples, 2 stacks of hay, 1 grindstone and mouseline de laine trimmed with about 100 bushels of spuds.

The groom is a well-known and popular young man and has always stood high in society circles of 12 Berkshire hogs, about 100 pounds, while the bride is an accomplished talented teacher of a splendid flock of Leicester sheep, pedigree furnished if desired.

The bridal couple left immediately for an extended trip of twelve months on approved joint notes, otherwise cash. Lunch will be served at the sale. After this, Mr. and Mrs. Smith will take up housekeeping in a cozy 7 tons of good clover hay at the corner of Saxaponla township. Sale at 1 o'clock sharp. No reserve, as pepper and salt has sold his farm to the cute little flower girl. Mr. R. Wise, Auctioneer

Tested Recipes

NOTE:— The Beaver would be glad to receive contributions of tested recipes from any of the women of the district who care to contribute them.

The recipe for jam, given below was sent us by a lady of Napanee, who has used it for some years and can vouch for its deliciousness.

It was thought that in a season when strawberries are not plentiful it would be particularly useful.

4 lbs. Strawberries.
3 lbs. Rhubarb.
5½ lbs. sugar.

Peel and cut the rhubarb and cover with half the sugar and let stand over night. Boil, slowly, in the morning for 20 minutes. Remove from fire and let get nearly cold before adding berries and the rest of the sugar. Bring slowly to boil and allow to boil half an hour, stirring frequently.

Persian Palm is a sheer delight to use. Cools and relieves irritations caused by weather conditions. Imparts a rare charm and beauty to the complexion. Fragrant and velvety smooth. Never leaves a vestige of stickiness. Swiftly absorbed by the tissues and stimulates the skin. Persian Balm is the peerless toilet requisite. Every woman will appreciate the subtly distinctive charm achieved by the use of this magical lotion.

they should do unto you". The Institute is essentially a neighborhood club, where neighbor women meet and become better friends, and, with their united efforts, improve home conditions, hospitality, generosity of service, and kindness. In closing Mrs. Redden quoted "The best of whatever you are".

Community singing, and discussion of Nominating Committee brought the morning session to a close.

The Noon Hour

At the noon hour, the Moscow ladies of the W. I. served a delicious luncheon to about one hundred guests.

At the close of this part of the programme, Miss Patterson graciously welcomed each and every one. She compared each branch to a ship returning from a year's cruise, bringing a report of victory and success. In closing, she particularly greeted Mrs. Redden, Mrs. Stewart, Pedertided member, and Mrs. Macoun, the guest speaker.

To this very kind welcome, Mrs. Lewis ably responded in her genial manner, drawing particular attention to the various churches represented—some six or seven in all—to an organization 71,000 members strong, all working together for the common weal. This is the only organization in the world where all work as one, the true member of the W. I. living up to the Creed and Ode.

Afternoon Session

The afternoon session opened at 1.30 p.m., with Community singing, Mrs. Rogers at the piano.

The report from the O. E. A. was given by Mrs. C. W. Amey, who said that she went as a delegate in place of Mrs. Proste, who should have gone. She said that the first session of the Trustees and Ratepayers' Association met at 8.30 on April 3rd in Convocation Hall. The President, Rev. C. R. Durrant, of Walkerville, addressed the meeting, saying that great strides had been made in education during the last one hundred years. Due to lack of funds, several H. S. schools were closed, but in Ontario, at least, this had not happened. He said that when church and schools were closed, morals soon deteriorated, and that obtaining a teacher with a personality and high ideals was more important than heating systems, but even then the parents' co-operation was essential for success.

Address of Mrs. Davidson

In the afternoon, Mrs. Davidson, President of the Rural Trustees' Section, gave an address, in which she said 95% of our children leave school at 16 years of age. She stressed the importance of medical inspection, so that defects could be remedied in early life, and of music, which helps maintain discipline and overcome timidity in children. Afterwards a joint session, with that of Inspectors, was held, and a spirited discussion was entered upon regarding Consolidated Schools. It was shown that where the consolidation of seven-room schools into one area, costs had been cut down appreciably. On Wednesday the convention was addressed by Dr. Silcox, Principal of Stratford Normal School, who defended the two-year Normal Course, because teaching was a most important profession and demanded proper training. Premier Henry addressed the meeting during the afternoon, saying that he was sorry that Easterners were cut, but hoped to see them restored in the near future. He also brought forth the idea that agriculture be given a wider space on the school curriculum, thereby encouraging the bright pupils to remain on the farm.

The Public Speaking Contest was very interesting, as this was a Provincial contest—five boys and one girl taking part.

A vocal solo by Mrs. Finney was much enjoyed at this time.

Mrs. Stewart, of Harrowsmith, our representative on the Provincial Board in Toronto, congratulated the branches on their work. She explained Federation, and said that it links up the country, local homes and co-operates with all departments of the government. The people must depend on themselves, overcome narrowness, and work for common help. The Standing Committees should be the channels for doing effective work, covering similar work as I. C. D. E. and Local Council of Women. The work should be done locally; we must not get stagnated, because the W. I. is not the oldest organization, but take advantage of the fact that we are 71,000 strong.

Several spreads and a splendid display of bed jackets proved that the result that Mrs. Asselstine, of Moscow, received the prize for the largest, and Mrs. G. Walker, of Newburgh, for the bed jacket.

The Convenors of the Standing Committees are as follows:

A very cleverly arranged skit, portraying "Introductions Properly Done", was put on by several of the Camden East members, and in her usual fine voice, Mrs. Bruce Finlay sang a delightful solo, accompanied at the piano by Mrs. W. Wilson.

The Guest Speaker

The guest speaker, Mrs. Macoun of Campbellford, was introduced, and she expressed the idea that she came as Mr. Putnam's proxy, not to give advice, but to get help. She said, "There are two of the greatest professions the world has ever known recognized from the time of creation, and without them neither the world nor christianity could exist, namely, Agriculture and—Home Making. Agriculture is the basic industry; it even existed before the arrival of the pioneer white men and women. Although the industries contribute to the national wealth, the bulk of it comes from the top six inches of the soil. Why should the people who produce cheese, bacon, grain, etc., forsake the land? Because farmers are faced every day with bigger problems and financial conditions cannot be compared with the present. Now we have too much overhead expenses. It is necessary that we do intensive farming: specialize in certain lines by putting on a good heartigle, whether it be cattle, hens, etc., grade them and cut unnecessary things. The young people are not content to start on a small scale today, but demand large things. Several of these couples have gone on living in one room in the city in order to have the so called pleasures; might better be on a small lot, in the country, where they could at least raise their living. We should be proud of our home, even it were a shack, and we can do much to make it a home to be proud of by the use of flowers and by using it for the benefit of our children." Then, in summary, she suggested we read the daily paper, be true to our opportunities, our Institute, and our natural life. Do all the good we can as we travel down life's road, and, if people forget us, they'll not forget our works.

Mrs. Marlin favored the gathering with a reading.

Discussion Period

A discussion by one member of each branch took place on "Each Institute's Biggest Problem", and as each branch presented their problem it seemed as if it were quite a common one,—that of getting officers. It is a problem which has concerned Institute heads than most of us with no better result.

In honor and reverence of the late Mr. A. E. Huffman, the gathering stood with bowed heads for one minute. Mr. Huffman was a ready and willing helper, thus enabling Mrs. Huffman to be present at the Institute functions.

Mrs. Redden thanked all who had contributed towards the day's programme and for the excellent refreshments served by the Moscow branch.

An invitation to hold the 1935 District Annual at Yarker was accepted and the meeting closed with the singing of the National Anthem, thus ending an interesting and helpful convention.

REPORT ANNUAL CONVENTION OF LENNOX DISTRICT WOMEN'S INST TUTE

The annual convention of Lennox District Women's Institute was held in the Masonic Hall, Bath, on Friday, June 15th. The meeting opened with the usual Lord's Prayer, followed by community singing, while the delegates were registering. The address of welcome was given by Mrs. Collins of Bath, who gave a short history of the village and said that they were, that day, celebrating the sixth anniversary of the founding of their institute. Mrs. E. McMullen of Stella, replied expressing the pleasure we all felt in being invited to meet in the historic village.

The President, Mrs. Shore Loynes, then addressed the meeting, thanking the branches for the loyalty and co-operation she had received during her two years as president. She dealt with the Institute motto "Home and Country," and the aim of the Women's Institute, Service"; also the need of planning and persistent effort if worthwhile things are to be accomplished. The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved by Mrs. Kidney, secretary. Mrs. Young, gave a detailed statement of the district finances. The reports of the standing committees were all exceptionally good, giving details of what has been taken up in the various branches, and furnishing many new ideas for community service.

Mrs. H. Kirby then delighted with a solo, after which Mrs. C. Stewart of Harrowsmith, spoke on "Federation." In union is strength and by working together, results are achieved which otherwise would be impossible. Her experience as a school trustee showed what could be done by a live organization.

A piano duet by Mrs. Sexsmith and Mrs. Stevenson, was greatly enjoyed, which brought the morning session to a close.

An excellent dinner was served to over 150 people by the Bath Institute ladies.

During the noon hour the delegates inspected the seventeen beautiful home-made rugs which were exhibited around the platform.

Afternoon Session

Mr. G. Hawley, Warden of Lennox and Addington, opened the afternoon programme with a short and humorous address, after which Mrs. Macoun, Campbellford, took charge of the election of officers.

The delegates seemed well pleased with the excellent services rendered by the officers of last year and showed this by re-electing them. Mrs. Wright was elected as Federated Representative, and Mrs. W. Pelky, as District Representative, with Mrs. Snider to substitute in case of either being unable to attend the annual area convention at Kingston. Mrs. Loynes now took charge of the meeting, thanking the delegates for re-electing her as President and promising to do her best for the coming year.

Mrs. W. O. Fritts and Mrs. Isaac Asselstine sang a humorous duet by request, which was much enjoyed, and was encored.

The Departmental Speaker, Mrs. McNonn, now gave an address on the work of the Institute, stressing the high standard of Institute women, the dignity of woman for the home, that God entrusted to her, has made the Institute what it is. The Women's Institute is the greatest university that the world has ever known. The growth of Stella Institute, Mrs. McMullen, invited the District Institute Convention to be held at Amherst Island, in 1935, and the invitation was accepted.

Mrs. Stewart now took up the question box. It was suggested that each delegate wear a card bearing name and name of branch instituted at the next annual convention.

A resolution was read, asking the President and members of his cabinet to give their sincere deliberation to the licensing of public places for the sale of beer and wine. It was moved and seconded, and carried, that the resolution be sent to the Kingston area convention.

Miss Clark tendered a vote of thanks to the ladies of the Bath Institute for their kind hospitality.

The meeting closed with the National Anthem.

MORVEN

Morven, June 25. — The patriotic service on Sunday morning was a splendid success. The church, being appropriately decorated with flags and maple leaves, helped one to enter into the spirit of the day. Splendid addresses were given by three of the young men, while several of the younger boys gave recitations. The singing was led by a choir of ten male voices, and all felt it was time well spent to be present.

A very pretty wedding took place in the United Church last Wednesday, when Ora Maud, youngest daughter of Mrs. Mabel York, and Amos Beavis Reavie were united in the holy bonds of matrimony. Rev. W. A. Edwards officiated, assisted by Rev. M. Price, of Actinolite. The church was decorated with flowers and ferns, and the wedding music was played by Miss Ina Davison. The bride was given in marriage by her brother, Mr. Arnold York, of Harlowe, and wore a gown of white flat crepe trimmed with white lace. Her veil was of white embroidered net, held in place by a band of orange blossoms. She carried a bouquet of Talisman roses with lily of the valley. She was attended by Miss Ena Wagner, who wore a frock of yellow shadow organdy trimmed with mauve and lust to match. The groomsman was Mr. Harold York, brother of the bride. After the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's mother. The bride, after sitting down to the wedding supper, the bride's niece, Elaine Shirley Jan York, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alex. York, was christened. The wedding dance was held at the home of the groom, Mrs. Neil Reavie, where a large platform had been built beside the house. Belleville Victorias Out Bay of Quinte League

Belleville Victorias have dropped out of the Bay of Quinte Intermediate "A" League. Ken. Colling writes of the situation as follows :—

"Well, after some differences and variations, the fate of the Belleville Victorias has at last been decided. Manager Fanning decided to give up the ghost over the week end and we now find the local Crystalacs taking over the remainder of the Victorias' schedule. The hand writing was on the wall as the majority of the Victoria players seemed to think more of softball than they did of baseball, therein lies the answer to the disbanding of the 1931 intermediate semi-finalists.

"Wednesday the Crystalacs played their first game in a higher category in Napanee, when they took on the league leading Gibbard A. C., but not before they had the assurance of Ernie Gibbard, local O.B.A.A. executive member, that all games participated in by the Crystalacs in the Bay of Quinte loop are exhibition games insofar as the local kids are concerned. The games can count as wins or losses for the remaining three intermediate clubs to keep up the interest in the league, but, as Manager Young is only taking over the franchise in order to keep the local intermediate loop intact, he naturally will have to have some assurance that his junior players will not be jeopardized in regards to their junior O.B.A.A. standing.

Manager Young was, it known that all games insofar as his team is concerned, are exhibition games, but, as the games are to count as wins and losses for Picton, Napanee and Brighton, he gives fair warning that his Crystalacs will make matters more interesting for those concerned."—Picton Gazette.

Two - Days Camp For Boy Scouts

For two days this week, the Boy Scouts were in camp under the supervision of District Leader, Capt. H. L. Babcock. Col. Babcock was assisted by Lorden Giroux and George Vankughnet. Twenty - two boys of the local scout troop were in attendance.

The camp was held near Adolphustown on the Bay of Quinte, at one of the most attractive points on the Bay. On Sunday, the boys spent a quiet day and devoted part of their time to Bible study.

On Monday, sports of all kinds and scout work were carried on. Later Monday evening, the group returned to their homes in Napanee.

Conservative Party Consider New Leader

Several Names Suggested for Post

J. Earl Lawson, K.C., M.P., for West York, will, it is expected, be the next leader of the Liberal-Conservative party in the province of Ontario.

Party workers who look for Premier Henry's retirement from public life, after piloting his remnant following through the next Winter session of legislature are at present said to be definitely urging that Mr. Lawson, on the ground that in the general reorganization, a leader should be selected from ranks now outside the House.

Hon. Leopold Macaulay, minister of highways in the Henry administration, and Earl Rowe, M.P., Dufferin-Simcoe, are two other young men whose qualifications for opposition leadership must be considered, and who, undoubtedly, would command plenty of support at any convention before which they might permit their candidatures to be tested. Mr. Macaulay, however, has been re-elected to the new legislature, and Mr. Rowe, as far as can be ascertained has indicated no particular desire to desert the Ottawa field and return to his one-time provincial stamping ground.

That the Conservative party intends a complete overhauling of the old machinery is evident. But that overhauling will not be rushed at the expense of thoroughness. No Summer School, it was authoritatively learned, will e conducted this year, as was the case in 1933. There is very little likelihood either, of a party convention being called. Present plans are that Mr. Henry will lead the opposition in any special session that Prime Minister-elect Hepburn may order and later, in the first regular January-April session of the House. After that likely he will step down and out of the picture insofar as Queen's Park is concerned, although rumor has it that his long and envied career as a public servant is to be topped with a senate appointment from Ottawa.

Ont. Historical Society Addressed By Mrs. H. File

GAVE PAPER ON MOLLY BRANT

On Saturday last Mrs. Herbert File, English and History specialist at the Napanee Collegiate Institute, gave a paper on Molly Brant, before the Ontario Historical Society, in session at Kingston.

Mrs. File's paper was received with considerable acclaim by the assembled historians. The information gathered by Mrs. File, concerning the noted Indian character of early days, is looked upon as a valuable addition to historical knowledge.

Unanimous Choice For Rotary Head

Robert L. Hill Picked by Delegates Meeting at Detroit

Detroit, June 27.—Rotary International elected Robert L. Hill, University Extension Director of Columbia, Mo., President by acclamation; heard Postmaster-General James A. Farley and critics of the Roosevelt recovery programme, and found time to discuss how Rotary can help give the youth of the world a better start in life.

After the rules had been suspended to make unanimous the election of Hill, the only nominee, the same procedure was followed to retain Rufus F. Chaplin, Chicago, to office as Director.

Lyman M. Davis Burned, Toronto, Last Week End

To a fresh-water Davy Jones' locker the Lyman M. Davis, last of the Great Lakes schooners, sank early on Saturday morning last after silent thousands had watched her burn as an amusement park attraction stunt.

For a couple of hours before she was fired last on Friday night, the ancient ship was towed back and forth along the waterfront as a huge crowd roamed—Mostly—Mostly—looted horns and there was a great noise until the final flames showed in the vessel at midnight.

A sudden silence seized the crowd as the schooner gradually became a furnace on the water. Her tall masts stood stark and black against the glare of the flames and for the showed as the fire burned the planks away.

Then she hauled her out into the lake. A little yacht with a shrill whistle gave her a salute, three long and two short blasts, and every ship within hailing distance joined with a chorus of wails.

Five miles offshore five charges of dynamite below her waterline were touched off and the burning hulk, minus masts and upper works, filled and dropped from sight.

Total Tory Vote Greater on 19th Than in 1929 Poll

Although the Conservative Party was defeated in the Ontario elections eleven days ago, the popular vote for Conservative candidates was greater than in the 1929 elections, an unofficial Canadian Press survey shows. Final returns completed indicate however, that the popular vote of the victorious Liberal Party more than doubled the 1929 Liberal Poll.

Out of a record total of 1,493,007 votes, the Liberals were accorded nearly half, or 717,055. The Conservatives, who won only 17 out of 90 seats, actually polled 595,133 votes, compared to 586,246 in 1929. The increase of almost half a million votes in the total was largely to the benefit of the Liberals, an analysis of the returns showed.

The Co-operative Commonwealth Federation, however, running in Ontario for the first time, also took a good proportion of the increased vote, getting a popular total of 98,489 although only one of their candidates was elected.

Tabulated Vote

The popular vote in the last three elections follows :—

	1926	1929	1934
Cons.	647,377	586,246	595,133
Lib.	224,951	323,509	717,055
Prog.	88,269	37,903
C. C. F.			98,489
Others	185,024	64,222	83,03[illegible]
Total	1,146,521	1,011,880	1,493,007

Analysis of the returns disclosed that in the sixty-five seats which they won out of ninety, the Liberals had an aggregate majority of 167,523 votes. This approached the aggregate majority of 168,387 for the Conservatives in the eighty-four seats which they successfully contested four years previously. The total number of seats was reduced from 112 to 90 by redistribution.

Minister and Family Suffer Injuries In Car Wreck

Rev. J. A. Plant and his family, of Bayside, formerly of Adolphustown, were participants in a serious motor accident on Tuesday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Plant and daughter, Vera, were on their way to spend their holidays at Renfrew. As they were making the turn at Calarmont, their car, which was heavily loaded on the left side with luggage, turned over. All three occupants were injured and taken to Kingston General Hospital, where it was found that Mr. and Mrs. Plant's injuries were not serious. It required several stitches, however, to close the wounds in the head of their daughter, Vera. All are suffering from shock.

The car which turned completely over was very badly wrecked.

Magistrate's Court

Three young men from Kingston, Fred Knapp, Sidney Roberts and John Poitier, were arrested on the evening of June 26th for causing a disturbance at Springside Park. They appeared in the Magistrate's Court and were sent to gaol for ten days.

D. J. McKenna of Toronto will appear in the Magistrate's Court on July 10th, on a charge of manslaughter. The original charge of reckless driving registered against him was withdrawn and the manslaughter charge was laid. The charge is the result of the accident in which Charles Strong of Matawatchan was killed on the Kingston Highway on Friday, June 15th.

Both cases were settled by the individuals involved.

Cow Went Mad, Goes on Rampage At Tamworth

Tamworth—The bull in the china shop was duplicated here when a cow which had been sold by John Scott and was being driven through the village suddenly became crazed and dashed up on the veranda of Edward Dargie, got her head entangled in a chair. Chair on head it rushed across the street, upset two gasoline pumps and plunged through a plate glass window of Clarneyea's garage, frightening Don. Courneyea so badly he took refuge on top of a nearby car.

Driven from the garage the frenzied animal continued its course through the village, scattering pedestrians right and left and tramping and demolishing flower gardens along the street.

Running up the road that leads to Beaver Lake, the animal waded out into the water and it required an hour's work by men and boys before the excited creature could be driven to its new home.

Auctioneer Named For Sale of Tory Autos

St. Thomas, July 2—When automobiles in use by Ministers and officials of the Henry Government are sold at Queen's Park, T. Merritt Moore of Springfield will wield the hammer. Before leaving on a week's vacation, Sunday, Mitchell F. Hepburn, Premier-elect, stated that he would engage Mr. Moore to auction off the cars and also the Finlayson yacht, which figured so prominently in the election campaign. If Mr. Moore was prepared to act as auctioneer and if the sale takes place Mr. Moore is an auctioneer by profession, having an extensive business in East Elgin. A former Conservative candidate in East Elgin, he aligned himself behind Mr. Hepburn during the recent Provincial elections speaking at several meetings and introducing the Premier-elect at his big wind-up meeting in St. Tohmas on the night of June 18. Mr. Hepburn stated several times during his campaign that it was his intention, if elected to power, to dispose of the official cars and the yacht by public auction.—The Toronto Globe.

THE FUTURE OF HYDRO

During the Provincial election campaign, Hydro Electric affairs were pretty generally discussed. Mr. Hepburn promised that, if elected he would fire Mr. Gaby, and appoint new commissioners.

It is unfortunate that this great public enterprise should thus become a political issue. In its inception, the Hydro Electric Commission was to be a non-political body, free from political interference of any sort. And generally speaking, it has been about as free from political interference as could be expected. But the Hydro is a big business with great opportunities and naturally, the envious looked with longing for a place and position within its fold. Undoubtedly, a good deal of political pressure was brought to bear on those who were in charge.

But surely that is not sufficient cause to change the whole personnel with a change of government. It will be a sad day for our Province, if on a change of government, there is a wholesale dismissal of government employees. If a man of ability and a sense of public duty is not to be assured of permanence in his position, the result will be, first-class men will not apply. The choice will then be with others who will be, more or less, the tools of the politicians.

A lot of talk about taking Hydro out of politics seems to mean taking out one group and putting it in the hands of another. This will not do. We have too great a stake in Hydro, to let it become a party football. It is the greatest publicly owned project in the world. The men who are chosen as commissioners, must be men who are absolutely sold to public ownership and who shall be promised immunity from political influence and the fortunes of party warfare.

THE GREAT EXPERIMENT

Germany's experiment with a dictator bears out what we have been contending in these columns. The struggle in Germany is not one between the Nazis and the anti-Nazis. It is a struggle on the part of the great mass of the German people to live a happy, normal life.

Before the rise of Hitlerism, the nation was passing through a period of disillusionment, unemployment and defeatism. The democratic system of government set up after the revolution, was not functioning smoothly enough to meet the unprecedented post-war situation. The seventeen or eighteen parties in the Reichstag made the formation of a stable government exceedingly difficult. The pressure of external debts; the high tariffs raised against her goods; the imposition of impossible terms by the Allies, bred a spirit of hopelessness in the German people. Under those circumstances, Communism was making a rapid bid for power. Observing this and dreading it, the big industrialists swung behind the melodramatic Hitler and assisted him to power. With a ruthlessness never superceded in a modern state, he turned the nation against the Jews and succeeded in crushing them. He likewise subdued all the Communist elements and kept power by means of a strong military force.

The tragedy is that he didn't stop there. The Socialist Party, which stood for the progressive development of state socialism, was the one safe group, half way between the extreme of Communism on the one hand and unrestricted competition on the other. This group was like the rest, completely subdued by the Hitler forces. The result was, to drive all those sane progressive and substantial citizens over to the Communist camp.

Gradually, the truth is beginning to dawn on the German people. The promises of Hitler have not been fulfilled. They are gradually coming to realize that they have been deceived by the specious promises of the Distator. The disillusioned and disaffected are gradually swelling the ranks of the Communists.

Whatever may happen, during the next few years in Germany, it becomes increasingly evident that the final struggle will be between the extreme Conservatives and the Communists with the odds in favor of the latter.

A DEATH TRAP

Indulging in the luxury of laziness is a pernicious habit, and retiring from useful daily occupation before time, more often than not, is a stupid death-trap.

Few men who retire when they ought to keep on working, live long. The very soul of life is to keep mind and body well lubricated, as long as a person is mentally and physically fit for it.—Sir Walter Runciman, Bart.

NOTHING BUT MONEY TO RETIRE ON

The ambition of the average man seems to be to quit work as soon as he can afford to do it. This, in itself, is not a bad thing; but a man should be very sure that he has something else besides money to retire on before he retires. One ought to be very sure that he is good company for himself before he ventures to quit business.—The Christian (Kansas City.)

REORGANIZING THE PARTY

Next to the guesses as to the personnel of the Hepburn Cabinet, the topic of most general conversation in Ontario is the necessity for reorganizing the Conservative Party. If the Conservative Party, which has done so much for the Province during its history, is to continue as a vital progressive force, some changes are essential. The most pressing of these is a complete house-cleaning. During the past few years its leadership has been such as to alienate a large section of the rank and file of the party. New blood is needed; youthful vigorous and forward-looking men who are in close touch with the modern life and its movements. Men, too, who have the courage of their convictions and are not swayed merely by the love of power or emoluments of office. Throughout the Province, the Conservative Press are making suggestions as to future leadership. Some who have been suggested are so enmeshed in the old system that they are, at once, debarred. Attorney General Price should receive scant consideration from his party. He has ambitions for leadership and those ambitions have played not a small part, in determining Premier's policies. Macaulay has, forever forfeited whatever claim he might have had by the disgraceful way in which he flouted the Christian public by the Sunday picnic where the law was openly broken by gambling and drinking. There is even a suggestion that G. Howard Ferguson might be brought back. But come-backs of that sort are never very successful, and it is doubtful if even the amiable G. Howard could make the voting public forget some of the things he is responsible for in our province. There seems to be none of the Old Guard capable of reorganizing the Party and giving it the new life it needs.

The time is now opportune for the Conservative Party to sweep its house clean and start anew. There are plenty of young men of tried ability, who have the qualities needed for leadership and are available. Mayor Stewart is mentioned in some quarters. Undoubtedly, the Toronto Mayor has handled a very trying and difficult position, with ability, fairness and courage. He has won the admiration of the thinking people by his attitude on the public questions that have had to be settled in Council.

With two young men such as Hepburn and Stewart at the head of the great parties in Ontario, the Province would be assured of vigorous and active leadership which has been, for some time past, its greatest need.

THE PRESIDENT REVIEWS ADMINISTRATION

Before going on his holidays, last week, President Roosevelt spoke to the nation, over the radio. It was a characteristic address. The President has the happy faculty of making each listener think he was speaking directly to him. It was the kind of intimate address we might hear around the family circle, as national issues are discussed freely and without reserve.

When the President took over office, the business of the nation was at a standstill; the banks were helpless; the financial structure was toppling. The whole nation was ready for the strong and revolutionary programme which the President promised. But now the situation has changed. The President has implemented his promises by deeds. The banking system has been reorganized. Business has been directed and controlled by Washington. Money has been spent lavishly, in order to keep the wheels of industry turning. The great experiment with the N. R. A. has gone on quietly and persistently.

That the President has not accomplised all he hoped, and all the United States expected, goes without saying. Gradually, here and there—timidly at first and then more boldly—critics arose who dared to challenge the President's methods and to point out their failures. The "Die-hards" of the President called them the other night, have pointed to several factors in the present situation which can be urged as a failure of the Presidential programme. There are still ten million unemployed in the States. The nation has been in the turmoil of labor disputes from one end to the other. There is an evident decline of business activity during the past few months. These factors, the critics urge as evidence of failure.

The President, however, asked each hearer to compare the situation in his own home today with what it was two years ago, and not to be misled by emphasizing the defects of his programme. Judged by this standard, there is no doubt but that the programme inaugurated by the President, has been successful. As a temporary measure, every impartial observer must admit its success. Money has been put into circulation; work has been created; the banking system has now the confidence, once more, of the people. The effect of all this have been evident in millions of homes.

Whatever its defects and failures, the N. R. A. has accomplished much. But, the real test lies immediately ahead. Business, stimulated to high production under the pressure of the new movement, is now slowing down. Steel mills running at 50% to 75% capacity in the past year, are now closing down completely for a week or two. This has a serious, practical as well as psychological, effect on the whole nation.

The fall and winter months will see the supreme test of the administration policy. The probability is that during that time comes, those who now criticize the N. R. A. for its failure, will be among the first to champion its success, in the face of a more radical threat to the whole economic system. If the N. R. A. fails in its endeavour to control and modify the present capitalistic order, two alternatives are left, either a complete government control of the nation's life, or chaos.

BRITAIN BUYING CANADIAN BACON

Figures just issued from that most instructive of all departments at Ottawa, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics, would seem to indicate that Canadian farmers are making serious efforts to secure a much larger share of the British market than they have had hitherto. The total volume of bacon and ham exported to all countries for the month of May was 139,664,000 pounds, valued at $2,126,571, and of this no less than 126,126,000 pounds, valued at $2,116,-050, was exported to Great Britain.

The total shows a marked advance over the figures for the preceding month, which were 102,347,000 pounds valued at $1,671,103, and in comparison with May, 1933, nearly double the returns for that month having been 70,080,000 pounds, valued at $812,797. For the fiscal year ended March 31st, the total volume at bacon exported to all countries was 960,178,000 pounds, valued at $12,683,273, but of this amount only 101,947,600 pounds was sent to Britain, whereas Canada is entitled, under the Ottawa pacts, to an annual quota of 280,000,000 pounds. This year, it is clear, if we keep up our figures, we shall have filled the quota quite easily.

That is to say, we shall fill it if the quality of our bacon and ham is shown to be equal to that of the Danish exports to Britain. It is for that reason that the outcome of the shipment of specially cured bacon from Ontario will be watched with the keenest interest by all who are interested in Canada proving that she can provide what Britain requires. If it succeeds, then at least we shall have had proof that the thing can be done. And, having that proof, there will be no excuse if the quality and supply are not kept up. —Montreal Star.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Ashland, Wisconsin,
June 21st, 1934.

To The Editor :—

Dear Sir :—In looking over my collection of snapshots of places of interest where I have been, I found among them one of the old school house at McIntyre's Corners, School Section No. 10, Ernestown Township, and it brought back to memory the happy days spent there particularly my old schoolmates, during the years from 1862 to March 4th, 1874, when I bid good-bye to our teacher, Nelson Wager to go to Shannonville as a switchman for the Grand Trunk Railway, having made application for such a job so I could learn telegraphy at the same time under Mr. James Barton, at that time station agent at Perrytown, now Frederickburgh. While there I fell in love with locomotives and went staking engines at Belleville on August 2nd, 1874. I went firing on March 5th, 1875 and worked between Toronto and Montreal until January 15, 1882, when I was transferred to Battle Creek, Mich, when the Grand Trunk bought several short lines and connected them up, making a through line between Port Huron and Chicago. I was promoted to freight engineer in March following and remained there until May 1887, when I went to the Wisconsin Central Rly, and ran on one hale and hearty, pensioned on March 1st, 1926, having served on passenger runs for 37 years, and am now hale and hearty. As I made it a practice to go home twice a year until after my father died in June 1891, I kept a pretty good line upon my old schoolmates, but where are they now?

I will start on the west side of the school district with the Whitsell & Huffman family. John died at Walhalla, North Dakota, two or three years ago. He was a successful farmer. Boby was the dentist there when I visited them in September, 1926. Charlie died in Winnipeg. Augusta died in San Jose, California, also her husband, John Bell, of Harrison. In 1928 I went from San Francisco to San Jose to see them but only could visit their graves. Ida and one of the other girls died at home, and Bridge from Cornwall, Ont., to Roosevelttown, was opened on Saturday by the Governor General of Canada.

PRACTICAL TRIFT

In the past more has been said by rich people than was altogether seemly about the virtues of thrift among the poor, when the more pressing need was to secure a wage level which made the exercise of thrift possible. Past-war increases in the savings of small investors, no doubt, show a praiseworthy cultivation of the habit of thrift; but what is still more important is that a better distribution of the national wealth has made such saving possible. Lord Lothian, speaking at the National Savings Assembly at Lowestoft contrasted the £285,000,000 deposited in the Post Office and Trustees Savings Banks in 1913 with the £1,119,-000,000 invested today; and, adding investments in such institutions as building societies, he found that the small investors of Britain possess £2,500,000,000 of savings. This figure shows that comparatively poor people own an important and increasing proportion of the total capital of the country, and it is a decisive answer to Socialists who say that the present economic system is doing nothing more to offer to the masses of the people.—The Spectator (London).

A GREAT VICEROY

The Viceroy left India on Wednesday for a short holiday and on an occasion such as this mission, with the real interests of India at heart and who realises the value of constructive statesmanship, will wish for him a vacation that will lend him back to his country reinvigorated to face the arduous duties of his high office and a successful conclusion to the task before him in London. Lord Willingdon has now completed three of the five years comprising the normal term of Viceroyalty. They have been three years which have seen throughout the economic sphere and for a time in the political sphere, but of political confusion the Viceroy has produced orderly government by re-establishing that confidence for law which is the foundation of all that is worth while in a country's life. India may well be glad that such a man with such a record, which will inspire confidence in his views, is to be her political missioner to England. —Times of India," Bombay.

I expect to pass through this world but once. If, therefore, there be any kindness I can show to any fellow-being, let me not defer or neglect it, for I will not pass this way again.

INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON, JULY 8TH, 1934

II CHRONICLES : CHAPTERS 14 TO 16

" THE COURAGE OF CONVICTION "

In today's lesson we observe the effect which the preacher or prophet may have on the national life. Israel had recently come through a trying period. The kingdom had broken into two sections, a northern and a southern. These two were at constant warfare with each other. The northern section was the most successful in arms. On one occasion the king, returning from a victorious conflict with the Ethiopians was met by the prophet Amariah. The prophet with a fine sense of duty, addressed the king, intimating that all was not well. The nation, so the statement goes, "had been without the true God, without a teaching priest and without the Law." That is to say their religion had been allowed to follow the practices and the customs of the surrounding peoples. The bright, fascinating nature worship of the native Canaanites had an alluring and seductive appeal to the Hebrews, accustomed as they had been to the more austere and exacting moral demands of the worship of Jehovah. The prophet pointed this out to the king and urged a renewal of faith in the true God.

Instead of ignoring the prophet, or of abusing him as many a king might have done, Asa heeded the message. He at once called the people in solemn assembly. These people and the king, confessed their sins, offered sacrifice and entered into a solemn covenant to seek the God of their fathers, with all their heart and with all their soul.

This historic event is not without its significance for our own day. It is generally conceded that the problem of the minister of the church, is to-day, not listened to with the same earnestness as our forefathers. THERE'S no other cereal like Kellogg's Rice Krispies. Bubbles of rice so crisp they crackle and pop in milk or cream.

Lyle, became the bride of Lyle Edward Garland, son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur E. Garland, of Toronto. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Mr. Redding. The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, was beautifully dressed in white crepe, cut on princess lines, with a train, and wore a lovely wedding veil and carried a bouquet of roses. She was attended by Miss Alfreda Cleaver, maid of honor, and bridesmaid, Miss Marjorie Garland, each beautifully dressed in pink with hats to match, each carrying bouquets of roses. The groom was attended by Mr. Ford Fenwick. The wedding march was played by Mrs. W. G. Fenwick, and Mr. Floyd Graham, brother of the bride, acted as usher. During the signing of the register, Mr. Randall Musgrove, of Toronto, sang very beautifully the song "Because". The church was very tastefully decorated with ferns, roses and white peonies. A very large number of friends filled the church to overflowing. Following the ceremony, a wedding luncheon and reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, about twenty-five relatives being present. Later in the evening the young couple motored to Toronto, where they will spend their honeymoon. On their return they will reside in Toronto.

A very pretty wedding took place on Friday morning shocked the village, when Mrs. Higgs, the twenty-seven year old wife of Fred Higgs, a resident of the village, passed away of heart failure, after an attack lasting only a few minutes. Mr. Higgs was away at the time and was unable to reach home before death. A family of five children are left motherless, the youngest a baby ten days old. The funeral service was held on Sunday afternoon at her late home. Rev. D. M. Rumsey was in charge of the service. The remains were interred in the United Church cemetery, near Centreville. The sympathy of the whole community is extended to the bereaved young husband.

On Saturday afternoon a game of baseball between Enterprise and Forest Mills was started on the Enterprise grounds, but in the fourth inning, after a disputed decision on a decision by the umpire, the game was turned into a free for all fight. Fortunately no one was injured in the melee, and the game remained unfinished.

GREEN CANDLING LIGHT

The Dominion Department of Agriculture reconciling the importance of standardizing egg candling equipment in Canada, initiated investigations as to the most suitable light for that purpose, and, as an outcome of research by the National Research Council, a green glass filter has been evolved. Within recent months, this unit of a green light has gained considerable popularity in the Dominion. Many commercial firms have adopted it in their candling rooms, and green light candling appliances are being used exclusively by Departmental officers. The ideal light, it is stated, would be blue, because blue does not contain any of the yolk colour of the egg. However, the human eye is not very sensitive to blue and for that reason blue is an undesirable colour for candling purposes.

FLASHED A SMILE AND GOT ANSWERS IN KIND

Winnipeg, Man. — "Sunny Jim" caused lots of smiles a few days ago for when he flashed his own broad grin at the passers-by he got plenty of answers in kind.

Jim was five months old, and was waiting ever between trains' in the arms of his 12-year-old sister, a little Russian-born girl who was playing second mother while mummy rested. In all there were four children in the party, with mother just recovering from a serious operation. Out from Russia only three years, the family has spent the intervening time on a farm at Carberry. But it "went broke," as the 12-year-old said, and now the family is going to try its luck in Ontario. The little girl has been to school spasmodically for school was "eight miles from home," and there was no road. Still, she has managed to pick up English and is looking to being able to go to school every day when the family gets to Ontario.

A preacher was addressing the Sunday-school and explaining the significance of white.

"Why," he asked, "does a bride desire to be clothed in white at her marriage?"

As no one answered, he went on. "Because white stands for joy, and the wedding-day is the most joyous event in a woman's life."

Immediately a little fellow interrupted, "Please, sir, why do the men all wear black?"

Sandwiches Again

BY BARABARA B. BROOKS

Whatever its present position may be, the sandwich is of ancient origin. We are told that it was the Earl of Sandwich who first sponsored the custom of serving meat between two slices of bread. This idea marks the Earl as a fastidious, as well as practical man. The sandwich was a forward step in improving both table manners and convenience in dining. For in the Earl's day, roast meat was a big part of the menu and forks had not come into general use.

Some of the sandwiches we see today give no hint of nobility. However, even the humblest one can be a noble work if it is fresh and trim. And one of the very elaborate ones often are tawdry and unappetizing in spite of the good ingredients which go into their making.

The whole is no better than its parts. A good sandwich starts with good materials. First of all, there must be bread. It can be almost any kind. It should be moist and fresh, but several hours or a day old so that it is easy to cut and handle. If the crust is very crisp, wrap the loaf in a damp towel for a few minutes. It can be cut without breaking and crumbling.

Of course, for cutting, a sharp knife is needed. Select one that is thin-bladed and flexible, but strong. It should be long enough to cut a loaf the long way when needed. A knife, with tiny, sharp, saw-teeth on the cutting edge is good. An advantage of the saw-tooth knife is that it is not very good for cutting other foods and you will keep it especially for bread.

It will save time and materials if you will cut the bread to get the largest possible slices. Whenever practical, slice the bread the long way of the loaf. Spread and make the sandwiches in long slabs and when finished cut them into the size you like. If you are fasing nut bread or any rich bread that crumblet easily, it is better to cut small slices. Sometimes it helps to cut the loaf in half down the centre the long way, then slice.

Thin, smooth mixtures can be spread onto the cut surface of the loaf before cutting each slice. This will prevent tearing the slices. Another suggestion is to have all at room temperature and to cream it thoroughly before spreading the bread. Cheese and paste mixtures can be thinned with liquids, such as cream or milk, fruit juices or salad dressings, according to seasoning and flavouring desired.

Fillings should be finely chopped thinly sliced or in pieces which will stay in or on the sandwich when it is being eaten. It should not be necessary to eat a sandwich with knife and fork. If you like sandwiches with mountainous or haystack formation. It is helpful to arrange them so that they can be taken off in layers for eating.

Vegetables and fruits for sandwiches should be crisp, firm and dry. Cut or chop them finely, but do not crush. Some spreads are made by mashing vegetables. In this case, mash the vegetables thoroughly and moisten with sweet cream, oil or mayonnaise to form a smooth paste.

Chill the fillings for cold sandwiches. If the sandwich is to be served hot, be sure the filling that goes into it is hot. For the most part, simple fillings well seasoned make the best sandwiches. Often a spread of creamed butter is sufficient. With plain breads, add something to give flavor, such as chopped parsley and onion juice, horseradish, chutney, chopped ginger or other highly flavored ingredients.

Bran breads make unusually good sandwiches. Bran has the property of absorbing and holding moisture. The bread itself will keep nicely for several days. Even very thin bran bread sandwiches do not dry out quickly. Bran is healthful, too. It adds bulk which most of us need in our diets. Many of the bran breads are rich in flavour and you can make bran bread sandwiches with very simple spreads or just butter.

Banana Bran Nut Bread

One-quarter cup shortening.
Half cup sugar.
One egg (well beaten.)
One and a half cups mashed bananas.
Two tablespoons water.
One cup bran.
One and a half cups flour.
Two tablespoons baking powder.
Half teaspoon salt.
Half teaspoon soda.
Half a cup chopped nut-meats
One teaspoon vanilla extract.

Cream shortening and sugar well. Add egg, mashed bananas water and bran. Sift flour with baking powder, salt and soda. Mix nuts with flour and add gradually to the first mixture. Stir in vanilla. Pour into greased loaf tin. Let stand 30 minutes and bake in moderate oven (375 degrees F.) one hour. Let cool before cutting.

Yield: 1 loaf (8¼x4½ inches.)

EGG GRADE RESPONSIBILITY

In case of dispute about properly marked cases of graded eggs, the Canadian egg regulations are quite explicit. No case or container of eggs is considered to be properly marked if, upon examination by an inspector, the case is found to contain more than an average of 6% per cent. below grade, plus or minus tenance. In transactions between wholesalers and between wholesaler and retailer, any complaints by the purchaser with respect to eggs below grade must be made to the seller within 36 hours of the receipt of the eggs. Thus, responsibility as to eggs grade must be upon the seller during the period of 36 hours after delivery to the buyer. After the expiration of the 36 hour of the responsibility as to eggs below grade is upon the person in whose possession such eggs are found.

Gibbard A's Break Even with Siberry Team In Holiday Fixtures

Twilight Game Draws Capacity Crowd

Two good ball games were played at the George W. Gibbard Memorial Park on Monday, when the Siberry team, of Toronto, was entertained by the Gibbard A's, the first game being played in the morning, and the second being a twilight game. A fairly large crowd was present to witness the morning game, and in the evening the grandstand was filled to capacity and the seats along the sidelines were also crowded. The Siberrys are leading their league in Toronto, and are a snappy bunch of ball players. Perhaps their weakest point was in the pitching department, although the locals have a good line-up of clouters and showed their strength on Monday. Tommy Pointer was on the mound in the morning, and struck out 10 in the eight innings he worked, but issued 8 passes, coupled with costly errors, and lost the game 9 to 8.

In the twilight fixture, Blazetich was in the box, and, assisted by good support, pulled out a well deserved win.

THE MORNING GAME
Siberry's 9, Gibbard A's 8

The morning game resulted in a lucky win for the visitors. The local boys settled down fine for five innings, having a comfortable lead of 5-0 at the end of the fifth, up to that time Pointer having allowed but one single. Taylor securing that in the second. In the sixth, two walks, a three-bagger by Geraldi, and single by Taylor and Edwards, netted three runs. The seventh started off with a base on balls to Prince, Reid fanned, Gerald hit his second three-bagger, scoring Prince, and Geraldi scored on an error. One more run was garnered in the eighth, and three in the ninth. An error put Prince on first, Reid was given a walk, and, with three balls on Geraldi, Blazetich was called upon to replace Pointer, Geraldi walked. E. Selkirk replaced a nice two-bagger, scoring the first three batters, but was caught napping off second. G. Selkirk reached first on an error, and Edwards and Taylor struck out.

For Gibbard A's the scoring started in the second innings. Brennan singled. Kinkley sacrificed him to second. Simmons was caught by E. Selkirk. Wilson reached first on an error, Pointer singled, scoring Brennan, and Card's two-base hit scored Pointer. The locals scored three runs in the fourth on singles by Simmons, Wilson and Gibbard, Card having reached first by being hit by pitcher. They also scored one run in the second, and two in the ninth.

While Gibbard A's outhit the visitors 14-9, pulled in two in the field and a few free passes lost them the game.

TWILIGHT GAME
Gibbard A's 4, Siberry's 3

The evening game drew the largest crowd of the season, and the fans present saw one of the best games ever played in Napanee. The grandstand was packed to capacity, as were also the seats along the sidelines. Errors were not as numerous or costly as in the morning game, and some brilliant baseball was played by both teams.

A nice double play in the first innings cut off Gibbard A's chances of a run, Card of the Gibbard quartet on base on balls, Gibbard, in attempting to sacrifice, popped one up to Captain Blazetich, who made a fine catch, Blazetich hit into a double play—Prince to C. Selkirk, leaving Simmons stranded on third. In the fourth the locals came in the fifth, sixth and seventh innings. In the fifth, Dorey singled, Simmons' high fly was caught by Edwards, Gibbard struck out, Brennan singled, scoring Dorey, Blazetich was given a walk; Bentley (batting for Kinkley) singled, Blazetich was thrown out at first. In the sixth Wilson came in on Simmons' hit, and in the eighth Brennan scored.

Siberry's scored their first run in the fourth. Reid flied to Simmons, Geraldi and E. Selkirk struck out. Reid reaching third in the meantime. G. Selkirk singled, scoring Reid, and Taylor was thrown out at first. The visitors scored two runs in the eighth. Prince was thrown out at first. Reid was safe on Simmons' error, Geraldi struck out, E. Selkirk singled, G. Selkirk hit for two bases, Reid and E. Selkirk crossing the plate. Taylor was given a life on Simmons' error, and Bailey out at first.

Perhaps the best innings of the game from the local fans' standpoint was the ninth. Cavanaugh singled, Edwards hit a line drive and the throw was a little late to catch him at first, but Cavanaugh was attempting to steal third and Wilson whipped the ball over to Dunn, catching the runner cold off third. Edwards tried to steal second and Cairns threw to Gibbard for the second out. Prince hit a high one to Wilson, and the side was retired and the ball game was over.

The longest hit of the day was made in the eighth innings, when Wilson drove a high fly to left field, which went away over Taylor's head, for a three-bagger.

At the end of the seventh innings the draw was made for the gate prize of a chair. Mayor Tustin drew the ticket in front of the grandstand the lucky number being 65, and Mr. Walter Blakely was the winner.

Patriotic Service In Trinity United Church

On Sunday evening, a specially prepared Patriotic service was held in Trinity United Church at 8:00 o'clock. The Sunday Schools of St. Andrew's, Grace and Trinity United Churches joined to present the programme. About three hundred adults and young people attended. A massed choir from the three churches led the singing and during the offertory sang a patriotic number. The church was decorated with flags, ferns and baskets of cut flowers.

Mr. Gerald Smith, superintendent of Grace Church Sunday School, had charge of the first part of the programme. He explained that the occasion was the 400th anniversary of the landing of Cartier in Canada and also the 67th anniversary of Confederation.

Rev. R. T. Richards of Grace Church, gave a short address in which he gave the historical background of the events being commemorated.

Mr. C. L. Graham, superintendent of Trinity Sunday School, conducted the second part of the programme, and Mr. A. MacGregor was in charge of the third part of the service.

Rev. Harry Pascoe, of Trinity Church, gave an address on patriotism. He had his remarks on a saying of the late Dr. Henry Vandyke "Four thinks a man must learn to do if he would make his record true. To think without confusion, clearly; To love his fellow men, sincerely; To act from honest motives, purely; To trust in God and Heaven securely."

In it he showed that true patriotism is not the noisy, flag-waving expression of the thoughtless man. It is the genuine sentiment of the clear thinking individual, who has, in his heart a love for his fellows, whether of his own or another race and who has, above all, a sincere loyalty to God.

Short recitations were given by Miss Jean Clarke, of Grace Church, Miss Muriel Perry of Trinity and Miss Lenora Valkman of St. Andrew's.

FERRY APPROACH IMPROVED

The landing at Adolphustown side of the Glenora ferry has been filled in and there is ample space to park cars or to turn around right at the landing.

"Hello traffic gets worse and worse." said the old lady in the city. "Really, nowadays it isn't safe to be a Presbyterian."

He: "How do bees dispose of their honey?"
She: "They cell it!"

BASEBALL NEWS

By E.E.GIBBARD

On Wednesday, Enterprise came to Napanee to take on the local 'B' entry in the Lennox County league and if the Gibbard outfit can take the boys from the north into camp they will tie them for the leadership of the league. Enterprise won both their home games but the locals beat them here, so if the B's win this Wednesday, the series will be all even. It should be a real game.

Saturday's game is also somewhat of a crucial fixture. Gibbard A's will have to beat Picton to retain the leadership of the league; whereas if the Prince Edward County boys can take the "A's" they will both be tied for first place. The Picton lads are full of confidence and feel that the game is in the bag, and it promises to be a real tussle.

However, should Picton beat the Athletics the tie will not last long because the teams meet again in Picton, on July 11th. So it looks as though the race is getting interesting.

Last week Picton only beat Brighton 5 to 4, and when one looks over the box by the first innings and came close to scoring on other numerous occasions, while Brighton should have had at least three more runs. While Brighton has not broken into the win column yet they have made all the games they have played interesting and are liable to pull a surprise one of these days and cop an unexpected victory.

If one can judge by reports, the entertainment put on by the Athletics and the Siberry boys from Toronto, pleased the fans 100 per cent. Both games were packed with plenty of close plays and thrills, and some good and bad baseball. Out of fairness to the Toronto club, it should be mentioned that they were short three regulars—two of whom were infielders. Had they been at full strength, there is no doubt that the locals would have had to play heads up ball to take them into camp. As it was, both teams were guilty of muffing, and neither showed at their best, but it all helped to make the games more interesting.

This Siberry outfit is a nice, clean-cut bunch of boys, and it is just one more argument in favour of allowing business concerns to sponsor teams, which permission was granted in Toronto this year. Mr. Siberry, who is one of the Danforth business men in Toronto came down with the team and the boys had a real holiday, arriving about noon on Sunday. They enjoyed both games very much and apparently had a very successful week end. We will look forward to seeing them back in Napanee some time again.

Both Siberry's and the local boys appreciated and wish to extend thanks to the Centreville people who fed the games by the fans, both in the morning and evening. Good support like this makes possible and worthwhile outings for the players and is a big factor in building up the fighting spirit of the home team.

She carried Johanna Hill roses and Lily of the Valley.

Miss Jean MacCormack was her sister's maid of honor and Miss Bertha Reynolds was bridesmaid. They wore net gowns over silk slips, one aided alike with frilled skirts, frilled peplums and contrasting sashes. Miss Geraldine McLaughlin

Miss Geraldine McLaughlin, a member of a well-known family of Napanee, passed away at her home on Sunday afternoon, July 1st, and was buried on Tuesday.

Miss McLaughlin had been ill for nearly eight months. Last fall she underwent an operation at Kingston General Hospital. She was, apparently, making a recovery, when she was again stricken down with an ailment from which there was, from the beginning, no chance of a return to health. Through the months of her illness she was surrounded with the best medical and nursing care and she herself made a valiant effort to regain her strength. The end came peacefully to end long weeks of suffering.

She was the daughter of Mrs. McLaughlin and the late Ephraim McLaughlin, who passed away some years ago. All her life was spent in Napanee, where she attended school and since remained at home. At times she had assisted her father and mother in their business. In social circles she was well known and was an enthusiastic member of the Ladies' Golf Club. She was a lifelong member of St. Andrew's Church.

Miss McLaughlin is survived by her mother, who is recovering from an accident in which she broke her left wrist and left hip, some months ago, and her sister, Miss Vivian, a member of the Napanee Collegiate staff, and one brother, Will, about nearly six years ago.

At the funeral service, conducted at the family home Tuesday morning at 10:30 o'clock, a large number of intimate friends of the family were present to pay their tributes of respect to Miss McLaughlin and of sympathy to the family. Rev. Harry Pawson, of Trinity United Church, conducted the service in the absence of Rev. A. J. Wilson of St. Andrew's. Interment followed the service, at Riverview Cemetery.

The Late William Norris

Mr. William Norris, a well-known resident of Morven and former resident of Napanee, died on Wednesday evening, June 27th at Kingston General Hospital.

Mr. Norris had been in failing health for some time, but five weeks ago his condition became so serious that he was removed to the hospital where he died.

Mr. Norris was, for over fifty years, an employee of the Gilbard Furniture Company, where he was an expert workman and was highly thought of by his employers and fellow workmen. He worked under three generations of the Gilbard family, the late John Gilbard, the founder of the company, the late W. T. Gilbard and the late George W. Gilbard. Four years ago Mr. Norris retired from active work and purchased a farm at Morven, where he lived with his daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Post.

Mr. Norris was born in Camden Township, about 73 years ago. He was the son of Robert and Anna Norris, who came to Canada from Ireland, many years ago, and who died in Clarksville, some years ago. He married Annie Kring of Plevna, who pre-deceased him just eight years ago. The Late Lasher Vanvolkenburg

The death occurred on Wednesday, June 27th, at his home on Water St., of Lasher Vanvolkenburg, a well-known resident of Napanee.

Mr. Vanvolkenburg had been in poor health for the past seven months and had been confined to his bed for six weeks previous to his death.

He was born 62 years ago in the township of Olden, Frontenac county, near Yarker, and was the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. John Vanvolkenburg. He was the last of a family of five, two boys and three girls. The late Sandy Vanvolkenburg, who died a few months ago, was a brother.

For sixty years, Lasher Vanvolkenburg was a resident of Napanee. He was known as a hard working citizen, who engaged on work for the Corporation of Napanee or for individual citizens. Forty-three years ago he married Mary Jane Dunn of Napanee, who with their family of four daughters and two sons, survive. The pall-bearers were A. S. Hughson, George Lewis, Mark Maracle, Frank Maracle, William Maracle and James Thompson.

VINDICATING THE OTTAWA PACTS

Gratifying evidence of the progress made is recorded in the annual report of the Federation of Empire Chambers of Commerce. From it all dominions come reports of increased output, of healthier industrial conditions, and of better trade, more especially with other parts of the Empire, in the case of Canada, for instance, trade with the Empire was for the first time as extensive as with the United States, and there was a rise of 8 per cent. of her exports to the United Kingdom as against only 4 per cent. in 1928-29, while South Africa spurted to second place, next to India, as an importer of British goods. A large part played by the Ottawa Agreements in stimulating inter-Imperial exchanges will be no doubt a welcome testimony to their benefits is included in nearly all the reports. — London Morning Post.

SOWERS OF HATE

The one true motive for the manufacture and sale of guns and other implements of war by private companies is to be found in the financial profits of the stock-holders of these companies. There is every reason to believe that understanding and peace between nations would result in the restriction of the market for armaments and consequently diminish the receipts of those engaged in their manufacture. Suspicion and distrust cultivated between nations is therefore more profitable than the spirit of international understanding which the League of Nations is trying to create and maintain. If the manufacture of armaments could therefore be taken out of the hands of private companies, thus causing to disappear the temptation to make profits by sowing discord, the world would have made a great step forward.—Le Nouvelliste, Three Rivers, Que.

In the Garden

NOT TOO LATE —

While it is important to get a portion of seed in early in order to stretch out the season as long as possible, this stretching can also be carried out at the other end of the season. Incidentally, for those persons who start to sow their garden too soon there are a dozen people who do not continue sowing enough. It is practically every section of Canada it is possible to continue planting such things as beans, spinach, radish, lettice, carrots, beets, and corn, right up to July, and if well started plants can be obtained, this late work may include tomatoes, cabbage and cauliflowers too. Of course, where the whole garden is put in late, say after the middle of June it would be well to hurry along a portion of it at least with quick acting commercial fertilizer and, if possible, water. Frequent cultivation is essential.

WINDOW BOXES —

The window box or pot must be strong and firmly attached because it is going to be heavy. There must be rich soil, with plenty of fertilizer as this sort of gardening is very exhausting. Of equal importance is moisture, and this must be provided daily, and sometimes twice a day in the evaporation, for all sides of the box or pot are exposed to the sun, is thoroughly rapid. The window box should be as long as the window and should supported and arranged so that the top of it is almost flush with the window sill. Otherwise, the foliage of the plants will soon fill up most of the window. There must be holes in the bottom of the box or pot to provide drainage, and also a layer of gravel, cinders, broken crockery or similar material for the same purpose. If one can secure a supply of well-rotted manure, put this in next, and finish with a top soil of rich soil. If there is no manure, use a fairly heavy application of good garden fertilizer and repeat every month. The box, which should be at least seven inches deep and from eight to ten inches wide at the top, should be filled to within half an inch of the top. Along the front trailing nasturtiums, Germanicy, lobelia, alyssum, and similar plants are put in, with petunias, ageratums, begonias, ferns, geraniums and any other plants especially recommended for this purpose in your book. Shelter from the sun for a day or two until the plants get established.

TENDER FLOWERS —

Among the more tender flowers are Gladiolus, Dahlia and Cannas, forms of which are all easily planted. These should be planted in about the order named, the Cannas, particularly being rather tender and unable to stand any frost. Plant them all to a depth of about three times the diameter of the tuber or bulb in ordinary soil and slightly shallow in clay. Gladiolus and Cannas prefer fairly rich open soil and make a good showing when grown in clumps, the former planted four to six inches apart and the Cannas a foot. Dahlias will thrive in any good soil, giving good results in ash dumps mixed with a little clay. They should be staked and tied with two and ½ half feet between plants. Dahlias are splendid things for producing a tall screen, quickly.

LATE VEGETABLES —

In most parts of Canada it will soon be time to think of planting vegetables. The more tender sorts are beans, tomato plants, beets, cucumbers and melons. They will not start to grow until the weather and soil really becomes warm. In order to get a long steady supply of green vegetables, it is best to make plantings at intervals of ten days and use several varieties. To do the same thing with tomatoes one may use a few well started plants for the first crop and hurry these along with fertilizer and possibly mulch paper. All garden tomatoes should be staked, using either poles or steel stakes about six feet high. Trim off all side shoots as they develop, except the one that grows along the stake and tieing loosely about every foot. All these warm weather vegetables prefer rich open soil and any members of the melon family, that is, cucumber, citrons, etc., take special delight in hot sandy soil though it must be made rich with well rotted manure or good garden fertilizer. Along with the vegetables mentioned one may set out egg plant, sweet pepper and others in the first planting of celery. The latter must have very rich soil and water in dry weather.

REPLANTING

One is well advised to save a little seed of each variety from all plantings, in order to fill in possible "misses" caused by drought, washings, or other things beyond control. In the perennial flower bed there will also be gaps where winter-killing has occurred. They may be filled in with quick growing annuals.

LOW COST PERENNIALS —

The most economical way to get a perennial bed established is to plant the seed early about the first of May in the open. Most of these should be started in a special nursery bed, except perhaps such things as Oriental Poppies which are rather difficult to transplant and should be sown where wanted permanently. The Secure seed from a reliable firm. With perennials more than annuals the right seed is very important, as there is liable to be a good deal of waiting and disappointment if some of the flowers absolutely no good. Prepare a fine bed in some portion of the garden where there is good drainage, and preferably a little shade in the middle of the day. The seed may be sown in rows about three of four inches apart. With all but the larger seeds, simply press firmly into the earth. Keep the ground free of weeds, well cultivated, and until the seed germinates, water with a fine spray every evening. Thin out plants and provide a light protection of leaves or straw the first winter. Next spring transplant to permanent quarters.

PERMANENT CLIMBERS —

The Wisteria is among the first of the flowering and climbing vines. It comes out with the Daffodils, early in the spring, with sometimes a second crop of flowers in August. It is rather slow in becoming established, requires a deep root bed and a watering can. In the case of potatoes, tomatoes, corn and similar vegetables, a scant handful is dug in beneath each hill, care being taken to see that the fertilizer does not come in direct contact with the seed. With beans, peas, carrots, lettuce and such things the fertilizer is applied at the time of seeding as a side dressing at the rate of about a small handful to the yard of row.

ROBIN'S FAMILY UPSETS SCHOOL CAR SCHEDULE

What would you do about it? This is the question which the teacher of a school car in Northern Ontario is asking his friends and neighbours. His predicament is a serious one. When his car was moved to a C.N.R. point, some time ago, for the regular educational service which the Ontario Government gives the children of remote communities on the railway, Mrs. Robin decided that she would set up housekeeping on the car trucks. She built her nest and hatched out four hungry children. Then the car was scheduled to move to a new point. If it did, then Mrs. Robin's family would be left behind. If it did not a number of children were going to miss their lessons. Unless some one had a bright idea it would appear as if the robin census for this year would be depopulated by four fledglings.

ANTS ENTER FIELD AS WEATHER PROPHETS

A new prognostication in the art of season forecasting turned up in Springhill, Nova Scotia, recently. Partridge with feathered pants, squirrels and their stores of nuts, bears with thicker skins, breast bones of barnyard fowl, all have made their debut and now along comes black ants.

There is a party in Springhill, William Reed, who has been keeping tabs on the comings and goings of black ants for a number of years, and he states that this year they appeared the earliest he has ever noticed. The black ants put in their appearance in the early par to' May, while other years it was not until the early part of June that they appeared on the scene. Indications from this are that the Maritimes will have a very early summer.

NEWS AND INFORMATION FOR THE BUSY FARMER

(Furnished by the Ontario Department of Agriculture)

Sow Thistle Menace

The worst weed in Ontario at the present time is Perennial Sow Thistle. Areas where this weed has made greatest progress are now able to report from fifteen to thirty per cent. less Sow Thistle than three or four years ago.

Weed control is a public problem and can only be brought about effectively by the unified co-operative efforts of every property owner, every occupant of land, municipal councils and Departments of Agriculture. The great majority of citizens realize the weed menace and the tremendous loss involved due to the presence of weeds, and in time public opinion will be sufficiently strong enough to cause united effort in weed control in the Province of Ontario.

Weekly Crop Report

Reports from all parts of Ontario indicate that recent rains have effected a marked improvement in the crop outlook. Grey County reports all spring-sown roots and potatoes doing exceptionally well. In North Simcoe prospects are for a fair yield of oats and barley. An increased acreage of potatoes, corn and soybeans is seen in South Simcoe. The hay crop is bound to be light in most districts. The tomato crop in Essex is likely to be light as plants have been hard to get and of poor quality, also hundreds of thousands of tomato plants died. From Lambton comes the report that timothy and red clover meadows will not average half a ton of hay per acre. Spring grain looks exceptionally well in the Lambton district. Strawberries will be a light crop throughout Southern Ontario. Crops are in good condition in Prince Edward. Eastern Ontario has also enjoyed rains which have completely changed the agriculture picture.

Chemical Weed Killers

Pure sodium chlorate, or patent products with a sodium chlorate base, have been found effective as weed killers, according to C. H. Martin, Ontario Department of Agriculture.

Pure sodium, although cheaper, is inflammable and must be handled with even more care than sodium chlorate.

The usual solution is one pound of weed-killer to a gallon of water. This is sufficient for 100 square feet of weeds. The mixture should be applied with a pressure sprayer, and all leaf surface thoroughly covered.

"Perennial Sow Thistle" can be killed by spraying just before it blooms and again one month later.

"Blue Weed," "Burdock," "Wild Carrot," "Orange Hawkweed" and "Oxeye Daisy" can be killed with one application applied a day or so after the first blooms appear.

"Field Bind-Weed" requires two applications, one as before in full bloom and the second two months later. "Wild Chicory" should have two applications, one as flowering time and one a month later.

Treat "Canada Thistle" after a heavy frost in the Fall by scattering sodium chlorate crystals on the thistles at the rate of one pound per 100 square feet.

"Poison Ivy" may be killed by spraying any time during the growing season.

A Commendable Plan

A praiseworthy experiment is being carried out this year at a small school in Elgin County where the teacher has inaugurated a plan whereby the pupils will put their lessons on farm practices to the test. Each pupil is growing a certain experimental crop on his or her home farm, the products being varied to provide a wide range for field study. Some of the pupils are testing varieties of flint and dent corn for husking; other are cultivating hay and ensilage crops, while the remainder are experimenting in soybeans for seed and fodder, table or sweet corn, mangels, sugar beets, field carrots and turnips. Each test plot is two rods by four rods and one rod in width. Seed was obtained, free of cost, from the O. A. C. in connection with the experimental work conducted by that institution. It is likely that this plan will be recommended for general adoption in the rural districts.

"Lambs of Quality"

An important statement entitled "Lambs of Quality," has just been issued by the Industrial and Development Council of Canadian Meat Packers, as follows:—

The production of good quality wether and ewe lambs of suitable weight and finish will continue to be encouraged this year.

Commencing on July 2nd in Ontario and the west, buyers will pay two cents a pound more for ewe and wether lambs than for bucks.

The markets will pay up to a cent a pound more for lambs of good quality up to 90 lbs. at the stockyards and plants, than for lambs from 90 to 110 lbs. and up to two cents per pound more than for lambs over 110 lbs.

Farmers have for years been urged to meet the simple requirements of the market in order to secure top prices by castrating all male lambs and finishing and marketing lambs within the desired weights.

The manner in which the producer has responded to the market requirements is well exemplified by the decrease in the offerings of buck lambs during the season when they are most objectionable. The appreciation of the value of quality by farmers has resulted in a decrease in the marketings of buck lambs at Toronto from 10.6 per cent from August to December in 1926, to 1.8 per cent for the same period in 1933. At Montreal the improvement, in quality by the elimination of the "buck" has been slower but was reduced to 8 per cent. in 1933 compared with 33 per cent. in 1926.

It is further urged that all producers should make money by: (1) Docking all lambs early in the spring. (2) Castrating all male lambs when from ten days to three weeks old. (3) Feeding all lambs so that they will finish at weights from 75 to 85 lbs., not over 90 lbs. (4) Picking out of the flock the earliest and fastest growing lambs and marketing them. (5) Marketing lambs as soon as they are ready as the price will probably be higher early in the season than in the late fall. (6) Avoid all losses on buck lambs and on lambs either too light or too heavy.

THE BEST TIME TO PRUNE HEDGES

Hedges are made of different kinds of plants, some of which are deciduous, that is, they drop their leaves every fall, while others are evergreen.

At the Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa, about one hundred and thirty different varieties of trees and shrubs have been tried and there are now about sixty different hedges growing side by side, some of which were planted in 1889.

The deciduous hedges are generally trimmed about the end of June or when the season's growth is almost completed. This gives them time to make enough new growth to cover the wounds left by the clipping. The evergreens are trimmed a little later as their growth is slower.

Sometimes, a few odd branches may grow large and spoil the neat appearance of the hedge after the trimming if this occurs the branches are cut off.

The trimming should be done annually as it is difficult, if not impossible, to remake a hedge which has lost its shape. It is better to clip the hedge at the various seasons rather than not clip it at all.

The shaping of a hedge is very important and it has been found at the Central Experimental Farm that it is better to have it wider at the base. It can be tapered to the top or it can be rounded or flat. In districts where there is much snow, a tapered top is much the best, as the branches will shed off instead of settling into the hedge and spreading and breaking the branches and thus causing damage. Where the hedge has rounded sides and no top wider above the base, there is danger that the lowest part will grow bare and ugly.

CUTTING HAY AT THE RIGHT TIME

As the season approaches for making hay, it is well to remember that the feeding value of the hay will be determined very largely by the stage at which it is cut. This fact is emphasized by the experiments conducted on the Dominion Experimental Farms. Harvested at the right time and properly cured, a palatable and highly nutritious feed is assured, but if cutting is delayed until the seed is formed there is a serious loss in digestibility and feeding value. In spite of the fact that the latter condition is expressed in a large proportion of the annual crops of all kinds of crops, the hay crop is neglected to a greater extent than any other.

Much of the hay crop consists of a mixture of clover and timothy. Since clover usually predominates in the first crop year, the hay should be cut when the clover is ready. This is in the early bloom stage. Early cutting of the clover promotes a better second growth and gives a better seed crop. In the second crop year, cutting should begin at the first stage for timothy. This is when the plants are fully headed and not later than full bloom. When timothy is harvested before blooming, there is sufficient digestible protein for cows producing eight to ten pounds of milk, whereas if the hay is not cut until the seed is formed it is barely good enough to supply a maintenance ration.

FARM WELL WATERS

Among the many utilities carried out by the Dominion Department of Agriculture there is a voluntary service which deeply concerns the health and welfare of the farm home. This is the examination of farm well waters which is exercised free of charge by the Dominion Chemistry Division, provided the directions for collection and shipment of the sample are carefully adhered to and the express charges on the sample prepaid. Dirty water — water offensive to sight, taste and smell—carries its own condemnation, but there are other farm well waters which are clear, bright and odourless and yet far from being safe and wholesome. The presence of soakage from sources of contamination does not always reveal itself without the aid of chemistry and bacteriology. Therein lies the danger of concluding that a water without a bad taste or offensive smell is necessarily a good water. If there is the slightest reason to suspect the purity of the water supply, there should be no delay in having it tested. Directions for examination may be obtained on application from the Division of Chemistry Experimental Farm, Ottawa.

CHERRIES ARE IN
(By Barbara B. Brooks)

In the matter of cherries Mother Nature has been most generous. Cherry orchards are found in many parts of the world. Furthermore, many a back or even front yard does its bit toward filling yawning pie shells.

There are dozens of varieties of cherries. All of these can be classified for cooking purposes into two main groups, sweet and sour cherries. Sweet cherries are delicious to eat as they come from the tree and are good for canning or spicing. Sour cherries are nearly always cooked and require sweetening. These are the cherries that make the tarts that are honored in song, story and verse.

It is possible that red cherry tarts become famous just because they are pretty to look at and good to eat. However we must not forget that cherries were a seasonal treat in the good old days. Even the Queen of Hearts could not have cherry tarts the year around as we can now. The new quick-freezing methods of preserving keeps cherries red, juicy, and fresh, for winter use. Canning processes too have been improved.

No one would appreciate more the progress that has been made in cherry preserving than Martha Washington. It was she who has handed down the recipe "To Keepe Cherries Yt You May Have Cherry Tarts at Christmas without Preserving." Her method required a barrel with layers and layers of hay and a place under a "fether bed" in a cold room for temperature control.

Even though we can now enjoy cherry tarts at Christmas or at any other time, the following recipe is a good one for the first ripe cherries of the season.

CHERRY TARTS

Two cups pitted sour cherries.
One cup boiling water.
One cup sugar
One tablespoon cornstarch
Eight small tart shells.
Half-cup whipping cream.

Drain juice from cherries. Combine the cherry juice, boiling water and sugar. Bring to a boil, cook 10 minutes and strain. Blend the cornstarch to a paste with a little cold water and stir into the hot liquid. Cook, stirring, over moderate heat until it thickens. Remove from heat and beat with rotary egg beater to remove scum. While hot, pour over the cherries. When cool, fill freshly baked tart shells. Garnish with whipped cream and serve.

This cherry mixture may also be served hot on waffles or French toast. For dessert French toast dip the bread slices in corn flake crumbs. The malt seasoning of the corn flakes gives a rich flavor and the crust browns nicely.

DESSERT FRENCH TOAST

Two eggs. One cup milk.
Two tablespoons honey or syrup.
One-quarter teaspoon salt.
Half cup fine corn flake crumbs.
Six slices bread.

Beat eggs slightly. Add milk, honey and salt. Dip bread in egg mixture and then in corn flake crumbs. Saute on both sides until delicately browned.

Steamed puddings are easy to mix. If small individual molds are used the pudding will cook while the rest of the dinner is being prepared.

CHERRY BRAN PUDDING

One-quarter cup shortening.
Half a cup sugar.
One egg, well beaten.
One-third cup milk.
Half a cup of bran.
One cup of flour.
One-eighth teaspoon salt.
Two teaspoons baking powder.
One cup sour cherries, drained.

Cream shortening. Add sugar gradually; add egg and beat well. To the milk add bran and let soak while sifting the dry ingredients. Add to the first mixture alternately with the ingredients. Stir the cherries quickly into the batter, turn into buttered mold and steam one hour if small individual molds are used, can be steamed in twenty minutes. Serve hot with Cherry Sauce or with Cherry Hard Sauce.

CHERRY SAUCE

Two-thirds cup sugar.
Two tablespoons cornstarch.
Two cups cherry juice.
One-quarter teaspoon salt.
Mix ingredients and cook, stirring constantly until the mixture thickens then continue cooking over hot water for ten minutes. Serve hot.

CHERRY HARD SAUCE

One cup butter.
One cup confectioner's sugar.
One-quarter cup sour cherries.

Cream butter and sugar together, beat until fluffy, and stir in cherries. A good variation is to drain off the above recipe some of the cherry juice, and then add more sugar to desired consistency. The cherries may be omitted in this case.

CHERRY ICE CREAM

Two-thirds cup sweetened condensed milk.
One cup cherry juice, from can of sour pitted cherries.
One teaspoon lemon juice.
Half cup cherries (chopped).
One cup heavy cream.

Blend sweetened condensed milk, cherry juice, lemon juice, and cherries. Chill. Whip cream and fold into chilled mixture. Pour into refrigerating pan and freeze. Remove from the refrigerator once or twice during the freezing period, scrape the mixture from sides and bottom of the pan and beat thoroughly.

Local And District News of Women's Organizations

CONWAY WOMEN'S INSTITUTE

The regular meeting of the Conway Women's Institute was held at the home of Mrs. Harold Haight on Tuesday, June 12th. The meeting was opened by singing the opening ode and repeating the Lord's Prayer. The minutes were then read and approved. The usual business followed, the Relief Committee being the only one to have a report.

Mrs. George Ham opened the programme by giving current events concerning important items of the day from the many countries of the world. Roll call was answered by "The work I like best." The address of the afternoon was given by Rev. Mr. Sanders, on legislation. This subject was most competently dealt with and many of the laws were brought forth and well explained. This address was both instructive and interesting, and much appreciated. We were then favored by a medley of songs given on the harmonica by Phyllis Haight. A chapter from "Cattle in the Stall" was read by Mrs. M. Young. The last item was a contest, conducted by Mrs. H. Phippen. Mrs. Robinson was the lucky winner.

After the singing of the National Anthem, a dainty and delicious lunch was served.

SANDHURST W. A.

The regular meeting of the W. A. of St. Paul's Church, Sandhurst, met in the church hall on Wednesday evening, June 20th, with twelve members present. After the meeting was opened by the president, with prayer and a hymn, and the usual business was transacted, the report of the annual meeting of the Womans Auxiliary, held in Belleville, on May 2nd and 3rd, was read and enjoyed by all.

Considerable work was accomplished on the ordinary work for the W. A. bale and also for a layette being prepared for a mission hospital.

A special meeting for the packing of the layette was arranged for and held on June 27th, at the spacious home of the secretary-treasurer, Mrs. H. M. Robinson. The members were exceedingly well pleased with the quality and quantity of the parts to this layette, the first one prepared by this W. A. It was being shipped to the hospital at Albert Bay, B.C.

A social hour was much enjoyed by the ladies and a very dainty lunch was served by Mrs. Robinson, assisted by Mrs. Alex. Sills.

WESLEY LADIES' AID

The May meeting of the Wesley Ladies' Aid was held on May 24th, at Mrs. J. Hoss Hanna's. The president, Mrs. Allen Moore, presided. The meeting opened with a hymn, after which Mrs. J. Ross Hanna led in prayer. The scripture lesson was taken from Psalm 139 and was read by Mrs. Clancy Moore. The minutes of the previous meeting were read and adopted and the roll called, to which eight members and several visitors responded.

Miss Daisy M. Moore gave a splendid temperance reading. Business was then disposed of. The programme for the June meeting is to be prepared by Mrs. Walter Hanna, Mrs. Harold R. Nugent then gave a reading entitled "The Old Life," after which the meeting closed with prayer.

MAPLE LEAF W. I.

Mrs. Carmen Day and Mrs. John Day were hostesses to the members and visitors of the Maple Leaf W. I. on the afternoon of June 21st. The meeting opened with community singing, followed by the ode. Mrs. Will Fretts was appointed secretary in the absence of Mrs. S. H. Fraser. The roll call was "My Mother's Maiden Name." Considerable business was transacted. It was decided to hold a children's party at the hall in July, the programme to be given by the children of the community.

Mrs. Day read a paper on the manufacture of butter. The discovery of butter was accidental, made by an Aryan warrior more than 4000 years ago, when carrying with him a goat skin of milk. It soured and the motion of the galloping horse had churned the first lump of butter.

A paper on slate was read. This is an important industry recently developed near Madoc, Ont., and is the only slate quarry operating in the Dominion of Canada.

Music by Mrs. Guy Hinchcliffe, on the mandolin, was much enjoyed. Mrs. Will Fretts moved an adjournment and the meeting closed with the National Anthem.

Lunch was served and a social time was enjoyed by all.

New Gold Mining Camp

A new bold mining camp is looming up in the Summit Lake area of the Patricia district which, unless all signs fail, will prove a real challenge to Little Long Lac and others of the newer camps prominent in the public eye at the moment. Those who are conversant with developments taking place at Casey Summit, Gold Mine, on the Casey Contact, next door, are confident that when the details are released there will be a stampede into the section rivaling that underway at the present time in Little Long Lac.

Few if any of the new crop of gold producers in the province have developed so rapidly or more impressively than has Casey Summit. The mill on this property is rapidly approaching completion and by midsummer should be turning out gold bricks. Preliminary work on Casey Contact Gold Mines, which adjoins Casey Summit, has succeeded in uncovering several veins in similar formation and strongly resembling the original "finds" on Casey Summit. The high assays reported from sampling these veins suggest the probability of Casey Contact becoming a big mine like its neighbour upon further development.

Mulching Apple Trees

(Experimental Farms Note)

A satisfactory mulch conserves moisture by retarding evaporation, and, on decomposing, supplies a considerable quantity of plant food. Applied to apple trees, in sod, mulch has a decidedly beneficial effect, as moisture is conserved at a time in the season when it is urgently required by the trees. This, together with the fairly liberal amount of plant food supplied by the decomposing mulch material, creates a very favourable soil condition which, under average conditions, will insure both yield and quality of crop.

In an experiment, conducted by the Dominion Experimental Farms, at Abbotsford, Que., mulched Pamewis trees have produced annual crops, of well-sized fruit, for eight consecutive years. Unmulched trees, at the same variety, in the same block, have remained biennial in bearing habit during this period.

Practically any kind of vegetable material, such as straw, grass, garden refuse or even corn stalks will make a satisfactory mulch. The material should be spread evenly over the ground, from about two feet from the trunk of a mature tree to, at least, a similar distance beyond the spread of the branches.

The amount to be used will depend to some extent, on the local conditions. In order to permit the trees to ripen and mature the wood, sufficiently early in the season, to insure the maximum of winter hardiness for the variety, a mulch should be almost entirely decomposed, and no longer capable of conserving moisture, by about the first of August. On soils well-supplied with essential minerals and high in organic matter, relatively large quantities of mulch material may be used, providing the trees require it. On poorer soils, where decomposition may be slower, relatively smaller quantities must be used. In general, however, a covering of about four inches of straw, or its equivalent in other material, is sufficient. If the material for mulching must be hauled in, the best time to apply it is during the early winter, preferably after the first snowfall. When tramped into the snow, it will not, as a rule, be disturbed by winds, and, in the spring will be found lying compact and close to the ground. In this condition, decomposition starts quickly and the material will remain moist throughout the soil, thereby effectively becoming dry enough to constitute a fire hazard.

Where grass, or other vegetation, is cut in the spaces between the trees and used for mulch, cutting should be made early in the season, certainly not later than the middle of June, and the material applied while moist and green. The next cutting should be delayed until the terminal buds have formed on the new growth on the trees, usually about the middle of August. If mulch is applied during the middle of the summer, tree growth may be unduly prolonged and serious winter injury result.

PESTS HATE YELLOW BUT ADORE NAVY BLUE

If you would be free from mosquitoes, wear yellow. They simply hate it. If, however, you would like to receive the attentions of the pesky blighters just wear navy blue, which they dote on. They are keen on dark red but adore navy blue. Pale yellow and orange are passe and yellow makes them blind.

These findings have developed from recent studies and it is recommended that yellow be used wherever possible, where mosquitoes are liable to abound.

3 MONTHS ON BISCUITS AND MILK

Woman's Digestive Troubles

Everyone who is subject to any form of indigestion should know of this woman's experiences. Advice from one who has had such severe attacks is advice worth having. She writes:—

"I suffered from indigestion, gastritis and constipation, and was so very ill, I had on medical advice to live on soda biscuits and milk for three months. Well, a friend advised me to take Kruschen, and now I am pledged to say my troubles are ended. I can eat and enjoy a good meal without any painful after-effects, my skin is clearer—in fact, quite clear—and there is no sign of constipation. I would advise anyone suffering the same to take Kruschen."
—(Mrs.) M. R. L.

The immediate effect of the six salts in Kruschen is to promote a natural flow of the digestive and other vital juices of the body. Soon after you start on Kruschen you will find that you are unable to enjoy your food without distressing after-effects. And as you persevere with the "little daily dose" you will see that the relief with Kruschen brings a lasting relief.

NEW SERIES OF GARDEN CONCERTS

The Voice of Firestone has developed something entirely different in mood from anything the radio audience has heard, in the new series of Garden Concerts which are heard every Monday night over the NBC network. The atmosphere of the summer garden, moonlit nights, the woods, the brooks, the birds and the flowers, has pervaded the selection of the new talent and the type of music to be presented.

Gladys Swarthout, the outstanding operatic contralto, together with a vocal ensemble and string orchestra, combine to bring a delightful variety to the program. Instrumental music, Miss Swarthout in solo lieds with the ensemble, together with duets, trios and mixed quartets by members of the vocal group strike an entirely new note in radio entertainment.

The program is broadcast at 8.30 p.m. Eastern Daylight Saving Time, and again at 8.30 p.m., Pacific Time for the Western Provinces.

CALVING AT SEA

The Live Stock Market Report of the Department of Agriculture calls attention to the reported excessive calving of dairy cows during recent transportation to the United Kingdom. The United Kingdom Government has, in this report, has directed the attention of the Dominion Live Stock Branch to this matter with the request that every precaution be taken to prevent the shipment of cows likely to calve en route. As it is very difficult to secure reliable information as to actual breeding dates, it is realized that the complete prevention of this trouble would be practically impossible. Nevertheless, all those directly concerned with this trade would co-operate in leaving out, as far as possible, for transport animals from the shipments, the trouble would be reduced to a minimum. A common but dangerous condition which seriously jeopardizes our export trade, and not the least injurious effect is the most unpleasant publicity associated with the matter.

LAYING MIXTURES FOR POULTRY

Laying mixtures for poultry are recommended by the Canadian Committee on feed rations for the Maritime Provinces, just published by the Dominion Department of Agriculture:

No. 1 mash—100 pounds bran, 100 pounds middlings, or 200 pounds fowls wounded wheat in place of the bran and middlings, 100 pounds of ground corn, 100 pounds ground oats, 50 pounds fish meal or meat scrap, and 2 pounds salt.

No. 1 grain—200 pounds cracked corn, 200 pounds wheat, and 100 pounds oats.

No. 2 mash—100 pounds ground wheat, 100 pounds ground barley or oats, 100 pounds ground corn, 50 pounds fish meal or meat scrap, and 2 pounds salt.

Scratch grain—100 pounds wheat, 100 pounds cracked corn, and 100 pounds oats.

No. 3 mash— 100 pounds bran, 100 pounds ground wheat or barley, 100 pounds ground oats, 50 pounds fish meal or meat scrap, and 2 pounds salt.

The most satisfactory method of feeding mash is to keep it in hoppers constantly before the flock. However, it may be fed moistened and table scraps, if available, may be conveniently utilized by mixing them with the mash.

The Password Is Quality

Canada Following Up Her Good Work In Poultry Exports

"If Canada is going to get its share of the British trade in poultry, in bacon, in live cattle, or in any other of its agricultural products of high value and necessity of doing things better, not worse than competitors must be met at all hazards and fairly," said Mr. W. A. Wilson, Canadian Government Animal Products Trade Commissioner in London, England, during his present visit to the Dominion. "We made a good impression with our first shipment of turkeys, because the quality was there and they were graded and packed according to Government standards. The British trade responds to work well done. There is the market for Canadian poultry and other products and the password is "quality."

"The reason for exporting poultry to Britain should be designed for the twelve months of the year. Buyers over there do not want to change their source of supply if they can be assured of the demand being met at all times."

"Canada should follow the same policy in connection with the present opportunity open for the export of dressed chickens as it has done with turkeys exported to Britain for the 1932 and 1933 Christmas trade. The 1,000,000 pounds of turkeys shipped in 1932 were 97 per cent as to quality. In 1933 they were not quite so good as the previous year but this was due to some unusual difficulties associated with the shipping and are surmountable. Turkeys for the British Christmas trade reach the buyers at least one week before Christmas day."

Cool Weather Eggs Best For Preserving

At present prices eggs are one of our cheapest foods. Low prices coincide with heavy production. They also cause the housewife to give consideration to the question of storing for future use. The eggs used for this purpose should be purchased before the hot weather.

Experiments in egg preservation were started by the Federal Department of Agriculture, at the Experimental Farm in Ottawa about 1898, and practically every preservative put on the market has been tried. Results have varied, but the tests have proved to the satisfaction of the experimenting chemists that there are two preservatives upon which the housewife may depend — lime water and water-glass. These have given entirely satisfactory results, and proved to be distinctly superior to the large number of preparations tested. Of the two, lime-water has given the better results, and in addition it is a cheaper preparation and more pleasant to use.

No preservative will retain the fine flavor of a grade "A" egg. There is bound to be a slight taint or stale flavor in the stored egg. This will vary to some extent according to the quality of the egg when stored. Eggs purchased for storing should be the highest Government grade. In the event of the eggs being bought at the farm every egg should be candled before being stored.

Lime-Water Preparation

Lime-water is prepared by slaking freshly burnt quick lime, thinning with water to the consistency of cream and further diluting, with constant stirring, to the desired volume. The resultant lime-water may be used at once—without settling —or allowed to stand for an hour or so and the clear upper liquid poured off from the heavy deposit of undissolved (excess) lime By following these directions and using quick-lime at the rate of one pound to 5 gallons of water, a "saturated" lime-water will be prepared suitable and satisfactory for the preservation of eggs. If quick-lime is not obtainable, slaked lime (hydrated lime) as used in the preparation of Bordeaux mixture may be used.

The eggs previously placed in a crock, water-tight barrel or other suitable receptacle are covered with the lime-water. Cover the container and store in a cool place.

Water - Glass

The well-known preservative water-glass, chemically known as silicate of sodic is readily obtainable from druggists and grocers, being sold in both liquid and solid form. It has been extensively experimented with, dilute solutions varying in strength from 2 to 10 per cent, i.e. 2 pounds to 10 pounds per gallon of water; a 5 per cent solution has given better results than stronger solutions. It is readily soluble and no special directions for preparing the preservative solution are necessary.

The results from "water-glass" have on the whole, been fairly satisfactory but lime-water is considered to be the superior preservative —the eggs, on breaking, showing less discoloration of the "whites" with more globular yolks.

To Get Good Results

Certain essentials necessary to good results : (1) That perfectly fresh eggs only be used. (2) That the eggs throughout the whole period of preservation be completely immersed. Do not take them out of the solution until required for use. (3) That the eggs be stored in a cool place. A temperature of 40 to 45 degrees Fah. undoubtedly materially assists towards retaining good flavor, or in arresting that "stale" flavor so characteristic of packed eggs.

ACCIDENT PREVENTION
WORK SAVES REAL MONEY

Accidents of a serious nature to the workers employed in the Railways yards, shops, trains, etc, showed a marked decline in 1933 as compared with the previous year, according to a statement issued by the Canadian National Railways Safety Council The smaller number of fatalities and a diminution in the severity of accidents during the past year, meant a saving to the Company of over a quarter million dollars.

The C. N. R. Safety Council has suggested that 1934 further efforts towards the goal of complete elimination of all accidents and injuries to workers and with this in view has requested that "each individual will strive to show a better accident performance record than in previous years." It is urged that every railroad employee should co-operate loyally a safety representative at all times, working safely himself and encouraging others to do likewise."

REMARKABLE DESING IN NEW RAILWAY BRIDGE

The largest single-spanned rigid framed concrete railway bridge in the world has been designed and carries the C. N. R. main line over the Montreal-Ottawa highway near Vaudreuil, Que. The arch of the bridge is nearly flat and gives a single-span clearance of 72 feet 6½ inches over the roadway.

Striking departures in design eliminate the need for ballast between the rails, which are permanently fastened to oak strips let into a concrete decking. The design also permist of large economies being effected when railway crossings are being superseded and in busy centres requires only the minimum disturbance of neighboring property. Deep road excavations and interference with existing sewers and other conduits are also generally avoided. To these advantages are added a clean and simple outline pleasing to the eye.

LOCAL AND DISTRICT NEWS OF WOMEN'S ORGANIZATIONS

TYENDINAGA EAST W. I.

The regular monthly meeting of the Tyendinaga East Women's Institute was held at the home of Mrs. Robert Tucker on Friday, June 8th, with an attendance of sixteen members and seven visitors.

The meeting opened with the singing of the ode and the Lord's Prayer in unison, the president, Mrs. F. Hudsbad, presiding. The roll call was answer, "How to increase our Membership," and was responded to by all with may splendid ideas brought forward. The minutes of the last meeting were read by the secretary, Mrs. William Waddingngham and were approved.

Several discussions took place. It was decided to hold a picnic for the next meeting on July 6th, at Rainbow Bench.

The lesson was given by Mrs. A. Waddingham and Mrs. M. P. Husband gave a splendid demonstration on "making buttonholes."

The meeting was brought to a close by singing the National Anthem, after which lunch was served by the hostesses and a social half hor was spent.

REDVILLE WOMEN'S INSTITUTE

The regular meeting of the Redville Women's Institute was held, June 28th, at the home of Mrs. George McLaren, with an attendance of fifteen members and several visitors, including many of the wee small ones, whom, we hope, will grow into our Junior Institute workers.

After singing the ode and repeating the creed, the roll call was ably answered by giving "Daily uses of garden products." The minutes of the last meeting were read and after some short discussions, approved.

A motion by Mrs. R. J. Wilson and Mrs. George Wagar, that the following bills be paid: delegates' fares, programme printing and donation to coaching class. On motion of Mrs. Wagar and Miss Close the half of the members receiving the most points for attendance and answering roll call, be the winners in the contest for more interested workers.

Two new books for new babies, letters of thanks for sympathy sent a member and a discussion on the quilting and sale of a patch-work quilt, was the remainder of the business dealt with.

A humaitiching demonstration was given by Mrs. Wagar in the absence of Mrs. Snider. Current events were well collected and given by Alex King. A short paper on "Better marketing of farm products," was given by Mrs. James Milligan, as yet the Ontario Marketing Board was to try to develop better and fairer prices for the producer.

A short report of the District Annual was given by each delegate and many useful ideas were learned.

Two new members, Mrs. B. Kimmett and Mrs. S. Rathwell were welcomed, and the meeting closed with the National Anthem.

A very bountiful lunch and social half hour was then enjoyed.

The next meeting in July will be held at the home of Mrs. James Milligan.

TRINITY CHURCH W. M. S.

The June quarterly meeting of the Women's Missionary Society was held on Tuesday, June 27th, at three o'clock, at the Sunday School room.

The opening hymn "O Canada" was followed by the Lord's Prayer in unison. The customary reading of the minutes and the treasurer's report, with the business of the organization, were quickly dealt with. The president, Mrs. D. B. Wilson, then announced that there would be no meetings during the months of July and August.

The worship period opened with the singing of "There is a Green Hill far Away." Following the quarterly communion service held last Sunday, the subject of the devotional leaflet, read by Mrs. C. W. Vandervoort, very appropriately dealt with the theme of the first communion, and made a plea for renewed consecration and devotion on the part of all those who love the Lord and are trying to serve Him.

A vocal solo was contributed by Mrs. R. E. Kirby, Miss Eleanor Baker, of Palo Alta, Cal., who is visiting her sister, Mrs. M. R. Reid, gave some interesting facts about the Chinese in Canada.

Mrs. D. B. Wilson then called upon Miss M. Milling, recently returned from a four months' vacation in California, to give some of her impressions of that very beautiful state. Miss Milling, in a quiet, informal way, described very vividly some of the delightful experiences she had had during the past winter.

The offering was dedicated by Mrs. Geo. Switzer and the meeting closed with the hymn "In Christ there is no East or West."

Tea was served by Mrs. Vandervoort and her committee.

A DOUBLE WEDDING IN FOREST CLEARING

The settlement of Lois founded last winter in Northern Quebec by unemployed ex-farmers and now named LaPerle after Hon. Joseph Perle, LaPerte, Quebec Minister of Colonization, has celebrated its first wedding, or rather, double wedding in the marriages of Florant curnier aged 21 to Marie Rose Gauthier, aged 19, and of Moise Caudonnet aged 21 to Marie Anne Levesque, aged 24 years. Among the guests invited were the Minister of Colonization whom the community wished to honor and Mr. J. E. LaPorte, who directed the mass transportation of the farmers' families and effects from the cities to the new settlement. Many more were wished to be present that the Catholic chapel built by the pioneers was unable to accommodate them all. The marriages were, therefore, solemnized before an altar erected in a forest clearing; a romantic and appropriate setting

Every woman has a secret drawer her memory in which she hides ad things.

DISINFECTING TUBERS TO CONTROL RHIZOCTONIA DISEASE

Although the stem canker and black scurf disease (popularly known as Rhizoctinia) of potato stems and tubers, respectively, cannot be controlled completely by disinfection of the tubers this practice should be continued. The foregoing conclusion is based on a statistical analysis of a large number of field tests conducted in 1933 by the Dominion Laboratory of Plant Pathology situated at, and co-operating with, the University of Alberta, Edmonton. These tests were located at the federal experimental stations at Kentville, Ste. Anne de la Pocatiere, Indian Head, and Saskatoon, and at several farms in the vicinity of Edmonton, as well as at the University farm here. Thus, a wide range of soil types was obtained, including conditions from virgin prairie to old cultivated soil.

The fungus causing this disease is common, and often abundant in practically all cultivated soils, and even in those virgin. It increases with cultivation in rich soils, even in the absence of a crop of potatoes. Of the two important sources of loss, the reduction in yield from canker on the stem is greater than the market loss from the black scurf on the potatoes. Results demonstrate that the stems may be heavily enkered in a given season, and yet little or no sclerotia accumulate on the tubers, and vice versa. Usually the disease is present more consistently on the stems than on the tubers. The reasons for this are not yet fully understood.

By killing the black, fungal masses of scurf on the tubers, the grower is reducing the damage to the stem from this source, but, of course, the benefit from treatment must be in proportion to the natural infestation of the soil. That is to say, where soil infestation is light, considerable benefit will accrue, but where it is very abundant the actual protecaion afforded cannot be great. With regard to scurf on the tuber, the protection is, unfortunately, not always satisfactory. In spite of these difficulties the cost of treating scurfy seed is repaid.

TREMULOUS EGG AIR CELLS

It will be noted that one of the most important changes in the revised Canadian egg standards is the elimination of references to tremulous air cells in eggs. Recent research has shown that tremulous air cells are not related to egg quality, and, so far as is known, no proof has been brought forward to justify the assumption that there is. The change in the standards was made after careful investigations demonstrated that a tremulous air cell was a condition of the outer and inner membranes and in no way associated with albumen strength, as previously had been generally supposed. Although it really occurs that shaking or rough handling— which is the cause of a tremulousness— might conceivably cause some breakdown of the structure which differentiates thick albumen from the thin. Such a theory, it is stated, should not be considered as self-evident truth. Floating air cells can be avoided almost entirely by packing eggs with the large end up.

FATAL TO GRASSHOPPERS

Bran, sawdust, white arsenic or Paris green, salt and water have been the popular constituents of the many poisoned baits devised for the destruction of grasshoppers, but recently liquid sodium arsenite has established itself as a pre-eminent lethal agent in the bran mixtures. It has been used extensively, and with great satisfaction, in grasshopper control campaigns in the Prairie Provinces. For general purposes, says the Dominion Department of Agriculture bulletin on grasshopper control, sodium arsenate, containing 8 pounds of arsenious oxide per imperial gallon of poison, has been found to be the most effective. One quart of this liquid is added to 2 gallons of water in which it dissolves readily, and the whole is used for moistening 100 pounds of bran or bran mixture. When sodium arsenate is used, salt need not be added to the bait. As this, it has not become available in the stores of local merchants, so that for home - mixing purposes, white arsenic, or Paris green, must still be relied upon.

MAKING OIL-CAKE MEAL

The extraction of oil from flax seed leaves a residue which, when ground, is known as oil-cake meal. Oil-cake meal, linseed meal, or simply oil meal, is one of the most wholesome and highly nutritious of all the concentrates. Used judiciously and in limited quantities, says the Dominion Chemist, it may form a most valuable ingredient in the ration for all classes of farm stock. Two methods of extraction of the oil from the flax seed have been generally used. That employing simple pressure to the crushed seed, known as the "old process," results in a meal with somewhat more than 10 per cent of oil in it, than that from the "new process," in which the oil is dissolved out of the crushed seed by naptha. The excess naptha being subsequently driven out of the residue by steam and the mass dried and bagged.

"Why at the age of three he played on the linoleum."

A WORD TO TRAVELLERS
. . . about Funds

It is desirable when travelling abroad to carry Travellers' Cheques and Letters of Credit rather than any considerable sum of cash. Apart from the extra risk it entails, Canadian currency carried abroad involves exchange, with consequent delays and inconvenience.

Letters of Credit and Travellers' Cheques issued by The Dominion Bank are honoured in United States, Great Britain, Continental Europe, and throughout the world. Our nearest branch manager will gladly arrange your requirements. Consult him.

Hepburn Announces Reduced Salaries For New Cabinet

Personnel of Cabinet Forcasted

While Premier-elect Mitchell F. Hepburn has not, as yet, officially announced the personnel of his cabinet, it is generally known, however, that the choice of the ministers has been made and the official announcement will likely be made during this week. The choice of Speaker and Ministers without portfolio, has not yet been decided upon, and it is likely the selections for these positions will not be made until later.

The expected line-up for the cabinet is, as follows :—

Prime Minister and Provincial Treasurer— M. F. Hepburn.

Attorney-General—Arthur W. Roebuck.

Provincial Secretary and Minister of Game and Fisheries—Hon. Harry C. Nixon.

Minister of Agriculture—Hon. Duncan Marshall.

Minister of Education—Dr. Leonard J. Simpson.

Minister of Health—Dr. J. Albert Faulkner.

Minister of Mines and Northern Development—Paul Leduc.

Minister of Labor and Public Welfare—David A. Croll.

Minister of Highways and Public Works—T. B. McQuesten.

Minister of Lands and Forests—Hon. Peter Heenan.

Minister without Portfolio — T. Stewart Lyon, chairman of Hydro Electric Commission.

Director of Liquor Control Board—Edmond G. Odette.

It is the intention to transfer the Liquor Control Board to the Jurisdiction of the Provincial Treasurer, in place of the Attorney-General.

Premier-elect Hepburn has definitely stated that the cabinet ministers' salaries will be cut $2,000 per year, from the present $10,000 to $8,000, and the Premier's salary will be $10,000 instead of 12,000. He has also said that the cabinet ministers' private cars are going to be done away with. A saving of $35,000 each year is expected to be made in this way.

Question Claimed Unfairly Worded

Full Marks Allowed on Two Answers In Ontario Arithmetic Paper

Ottawa, July 9.—The Ontario high school entrance arithmetic paper was "so poorly and unfairly worded" that the Ottawa examiners are allowing full marks for two different answers to the same question.

The question read: "During the month of May, five boys attended school as follows: 16 days, 21 days, 19 days, 18 days, 20 days. Give to one decimal point the average attendance of these boys."

The correct answer is 4.2 boys, secured by dividing the total month's attendance of 94 days by 22 as the correct number of school days in May. However, 90 per cent of Ottawa pupils gave the answer as 18.8, the average attendance of the five boys, secured by dividing the total month's attendance of 94 days by five.

"Obviously," said a local examiner, "the question was poorly and unfairly worded."

No Comment

Toronto, July 9.—Officials of the Department of Education refused to comment today on reports from Ottawa to the effect that the high school entrance arithmetic paper was "poorly and unfairly worded," and that examiners were allowing full marks for two different answers to the same question.

One official declared the papers were sent from the department here but the valuation of questions was left to the local boards. "One child might take one view of the question, and another child a different view," he said.

Children Show Interest In the Work of The V. O. N.

Evidence of the widespread interest in the work of the Victorian Order of Nurses has been shown in many ways in Napanee during the past few years. But no more interesting proof of this fact has been shown than by the contributions made to the funds of the local branch, by a group of young girls and boys living in the west end of the town.

Early last week, Miss Lenore Herrington, the president of the Napanee branch, was called to the door of her home on Piety Hill and was greeted by six children of about 10 or 10 years of age, who presented her with a box containing $1.13 for the use of the V. O. N.

Miss Herrington's inquiries brought forth the information that Jean Brown, Mary and Helen Reid, Donald and Neil Willoughby, Billy Card and Grant Humphrey had been holding a sale and were donating the entire proceeds to the Society, of which she is the head.

Miss Herrington's delight at the interest of these children was very genuine, and as much so that the Beaver have not lost a game this year, and Napanee fans are hoping they may keep up the good work.

Gibbard "Athletics" Watch Big League Games at Toronto

On Monday, "Ernie" Gibbard took his Athletics to Toronto, to see the double-header played by the Toronto Maple Leafs: the International League fixture played against the Newark Bears, and the exhibition game played against the Chicago Cubs, the second place National Leaguers.

In the first game with Newark, the Maple Leafs were defeated with a score of 4-2, but beat the Cubs by a score of 5-4.

This was an excellent idea of Mr. Gibbard to give his team the benefit of watching two big league games. No doubt the boys will have learned a few new tricks to help keep them in the lead. So far, the Athletics have not lost a game this year, and Napanee fans are hoping they may keep up the good work.

Working of Marketing Act Explained by Deputy

At the annual convention of the Canadian Society of Technical Agriculturists, which was also attended by the Canadian Seed Growers' Association, at Macdonald College, Quebec, Dr. Barton, Deputy Minister of Agriculture, Ottawa, gave a lucid explanation of the new marketing act, which is in its formative stages and is officially known at the Agricultural Products Marketing Act, 1934. The preamble of the act reads : "An act to improve the methods and practices of marketing of natural products of Canada and in export trade, and to make further provision in connection therewith." The assumption clearly is that the methods followed in marketing are not satisfactory, and that undesirable practices obtain. The act is, therefore, intended, said Dr. Barton, to provide legislation by means of which these methods and practices can be changed.

The legislation proves what may be called permissive powers which may or may not be exercised. Until they are exercised the provisions of the act do not become effective as law. These powers are centred in the Governor-in-Council, the Minister administering the act, a Dominion Marketing Board, and local boards which may be created under the act. All powers that may be granted by Order-in-Council under the act for the administration of marketing schemes will be vested in the Dominion Board. These powers, in turn, may be delegated to a local board, and the local board will become the administrative body under the general supervision of the Dominion Board.

Local Control

Thus, the local boards, under the supervision of the Dominion Board, will enable those who produce and market natural products to constitute control machinery of their own through which they may regulate the movement, direct the sale, without power of buying and selling or of fixing prices, and to determine practices that shall prevail in the marketing of such products. In other words, the local board can control the movement of the product. It may be regulating a pool for the equalization of returns receiver from the sale of the regulated product; and also powers to compensate any person for loss by withholding, by order of the board, any regulated product from the market, or through the awarding any regulated product to a specified market, pursuant to any order of the board. Compensation may also be granted for loss due to the depreciation of the currency of the country to which shipments were sent by order of the board. The local board may also be delegated to assist by grant or loan the construction or operation of facilities for preserving, processing, storing or conditioning the regulated product, and to assist research work relating to the marketing of such product.

Magistrate Dismisses Manslaughter Charge Against D. J. McKenna

Action Brought Following Death of Chas. Strong

On Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock David J. McKenna of Toronto appeared before Magistrate Graham, on a charge of manslaughter. The charge was laid following the verdict of the coroner's jury enquiring into the death of Charles Strong of Madoc-watchan, who was killed June 16th, as the result of a crash between a car driven by Mr. McKenna and a truck driven by the deceased man.

The original charge against Mr. McKenna was that of reckless driving, which was changed to that of slaughter after the jury's verdict at the inquest, which stated that Mr. Strong came to his death "through being in a collision with a car, we believe negligently driven by David J. McKenna."

The evidence given at the magistrate's hearing was very similar to that given in the inquest. The accident occurred on June 15th on No. 2 Highway, at the Camden East intersection. Mr. Strong, who was driving a truck, approached the highway from the Camden East road and stopped at a point 35 feet north of the intersection. Mr. McKenna was travelling west. When at a point 250 ft. each of the intersection, he saw the truck almost up to the highway and apparently had not seen it stop at the point 35 feet north. Mr. McKenna continued to proceed west expecting the truck to stop, but when it started to make a left-hand turn on to the highway, he applied his brakes and drew over to the left side of the road, expecting to pass the truck safely. The result was that Mr. McKenna's car and Mr. Strong's truck came together, about two feet from the south edge of the road. The truck, after the collision, travelled 41 feet and turned over in the ditch. Mr. Strong was found dead, pinned under the left rear wheel.

Mr. K. S. Ham, the County Crown Attorney, appeared for the Crown, and Mr. W. S. Herrington, K. C., acted for Mr. McKenna.

After taking the evidence of all the witnesses, the magistrate dismissed the case against Mr. McKenna.

Driver Nearly Crashes Provincial Officer and Magistrate

On Monday afternoon, when Magistrate M. P. Graham and Provincial Officer F. W. Barrett were driving down Roblin's Hill, Mr. Barrett's car was nearly crashed into by a motorist from Toronto, who was driving up the Hill.

The Toronto driver pulled out on the north side of the road to pass another car that was driven by Mr. Only the skillful driving of Officer Barrett prevented a head-on collision. During the excitement of the moment, Constable Barrett was able to stop the offender, who had the unique experience of being charged on the spot with reckless driving, by the man he nearly crashed.

He was brought up town and appeared before the other occupant of the car, the magistrate, and was fined $5.00 and costs.

His parting remark was: "Let that be a lesson to me."

TOWN COUNCIL

On Tuesday evening, July 3rd, Council met in regular session with Mayor Tustin presiding and all members, except Councillor Exley, present.

The Clerk read the minutes of the last meeting, which were confirmed. A communication was received from Mr. W. P. Deroche, clerk of the Court, with attached statement showing the total number of the Collection Board of the last Provincial Election, payable by county municipalities, to be $1363.97. The town's share is $273.50. On motion, the account was ordered paid.

Mrs. G. F. Smith appeared before the Council and asked the privilege of holding a tag day on September 15th, second day of the Fall Pair, in aid of the V. O. N. On motion of Messrs Masters and Luffman, privilege was granted.

Deputy Reeve Wilson presented the Finance Committee's report, showing receipts and expenditures to 30 July 1st.

Report of Streets Committee

Resurfacing of the streets has been almost completed. The following streets not included in the original estimate were treated : Hessford and parts of Robinson and Richard Sts. Not yet surfaced are Simcoe Street, and parts of Donald and Robinson. There is also some work to be done at the intersections.

We have exceeded the estimate for resurfacing by $180.00. But on finding that the tarvia would hold a larger quantity of stone we had an additional 160 tons put on. This will increase the life of the surface. Also, we forgot in the original estimate, to include for brooming and for rolling.

We have spent on this work $516.00 for labour and truck and at the quarry. Total expenditure is approximately $3,113.00.

The resurfacing of the connecting links and the Reclaimed Lands, Belleville Road, Selby Road and Thomas Street, which it was expected would be paid for by the amount due from the County Council for 1933 and 1934, cannot be done this year as the County Council is appropriating this for Dairy Avenue—approximately $1700.00. Bridge Road and Thomas Street will be seriously damaged by another year. It will take about $200.00 to do them this year but it will take considerably more if not done until next year. We think a start should be made to induce the County Council to agree to some arrangement by which these repairs could be carried out this summer.

Deputy Reeve presented the June report of Market and Police Committee. The police report showed arrests 13, calls to accidents 7, transients given protection 96, Police Court cases 5, fines and fees collected $66.25.

June Relief $374.05

In the absence of the chairman, W. S. Exley, Reeve Hudgins presented the Social Welfare report for June. 31 individuals, the members of eight families, are receiving relief from the town. The total spent for the month was $124.05, made up of food $68.55, shelter $4.00, clothing $2.00, fuel $8.25, medical assistance $41.25.

A by-law was introduced, given its several readings, and passed, to strike the rate of taxation for the current year for the town, at 53½ mills.

On motion of Messrs. Wilson and Hughson, the tax collector was instructed to return the roll by July 11th. He is to be allowed to return the roll with the arrears of taxes, as they stand at the above date.

It was moved by Messrs. Hughson and Cowling, that the clerk arrange a date suitable for the School Board to meet the Council and that the auditors be asked to be present at the meeting to make some explanations concerning the auditors' report.

Dairy Avenue Discussed

A communication from the County Clerk concerning Dairy Ave., was received. The letter advised that the County Council was prepared to proceed with the building of Dairy Ave. if Napanee would allow the balance of the 1933 subsidy, amounting to about $300.00 and the 1934 subsidy, about $800, to be applied to the cost of the road, which is not to exceed $3000.00.

A motion by Messrs. Cowling and Morden, authorizing the Mayor to go to Toronto to interview the Highways Department and try to find out exactly what is intended to be done about Dairy Avenue, was defeated. An amendment to the motion, to lay the matter on the table for further consideration was also defeated, and no further action was taken.

On motion of Messrs. Wilson and Cowling, the treasurer was ordered to issue a cheque for $315.00 to the County as a refund on an old account, paid by the County in 1931.

After passing of accounts, Council adjourned.

Picton Walks Game Away In Ten Inning League Struggle

"Strategy" Fails When Church Walks One Too Many

Saturday's game between Gibbard A's and Picton gave the fans their money's worth. Gibbard's beat out the visitors in an extra innings. Each team scored a run in the second and again in the ninth each scored another run, leaving the score 2-2. Church, in the tenth, attempted a hit of strategy which he failed to put over. After Dunn had singled, he struck out Cairns and Blazetich was put out at first. Church then walked Dorey and Bentley, with the apparent idea of striking out Wilson, to make three down. But he evidently surprised himself and pleased the crowd when he pitched four balls to Wilson instead of striking him out, and with three other men on bases. Dunn crossed the home-plate.

Both Pointer and Church pitched good games. Durnford was behind the bat for Picton throughout the game, but when Brennan's finger was hurt in the fifth, Cairns replaced him for Gibbard's. Dorey pitched for Pointer in the tenth.

Pointer struck out 13 men and walked four. Church struck out six and walked six.

Napanee's Uncollected Taxes Average About $6.00 Per Capita

Truro, Nova Scotia, claims to have the smallest per capita uncollected taxes for 1933 of any town in Canada. Its total uncollected taxes is $40,728 or $4.79 per capita. Trail, British Columbia is said to be second with uncollected taxes averaging $7.57 per capita.

Napanee is in an enviable position in this respect, also its total uncollected taxes for 1933 is slightly over $20,000. which is just over $6.00 per head. Of the $20,000, about $8000 is represented by taxes due from unsettled estates, which will be paid in eventually. If these estate taxes were paid in now the uncollected tax average per capita would be less than $4.00. Compared with other towns, Napanee undoubtedly holds a most fortunate position in this respect.

Some towns in the Dominion have unpaid taxes for 1933 as high as $25 per capita.

Former Ontario Boy Wins Plowing Match Emerson, Manitoba

Mrs. W. K. Prunn of Napanee, received word from Mr. Wes. Storms, who operates her farm at Emerson, Manitoba, of the success of his son, Hunter, in a recent plowing match Hunter Storms, who works with his father, won the Grain Growers' Cup with his seven-horse team and three furrow plow, at the Emerson Plowing Match on June 20th. In addition he also captured several other special prizes for his prowess as a ploughman.

Mr. Storms reports, in his locality, food prospects for a crop, and that the grasshopper menace is under control.

Cheese Board

On Saturday, in Napanee, 875 white and 355 colored cheese were offered for sale. 211 sold at 10½ cents and 875 sold at 10 5-16.

The balance were refused.

Chief Watts Pursues Fugitive Into Creek

Man Nearly Drowns Trying to Escape

On Saturday evening, about 7:30 o'clock, Chief Watts received a call from a resident near Big Creek, on the Hamburg Road, to investigate the actions of a man in a car, near Closs's lane.

The car had been noticed parked since 9:00 o'clock in the morning and by evening the suspicions of nearby residents had been aroused. Chief Watts, when informed, immediately left to investigate. As the car in which he was being driven pulled up near the parked car, a man jumped from it and began to run across the fields, dodging under fences, with the chief in pursuit.

The fugitive made for the creek, despite the officer's calls to stop. Evidently, near the point of exhaustion, he reached the creek and fell face downward in the water, with his feet and legs sunk in the mire. Chief Watts followed him into the water and himself was almost waist deep in the miry bed of the creek. With some difficulty, he was able to extricate the pursued man, who was nearly suffocated. After being worked with for a while, he was brought back to consciousness and brought into town, when medical attention was given him by Dr. Willoughby.

Investigating His Record

A charge of vagrancy was registered against him and he was lodged in gaol. The man gave his name as William Thompson of Peterboro. He has been finger printed, but as yet no report has been received by the local authorities from the Department.

The license plate of the car he was driving, was found to be that of one of John J. Lavis of Cobourg. In the car was a full five-gallon can of gasoline and a syphon, a box of chocolate bars, peanuts and pop.

Jefferson had something the matter with his eyes, and he told such a long tale of woe about them that his friend became really alarmed. "I say, old chap," he exclaimed, "you ought to see an optimist."

Annual Field - Day At Wesley Proved a Decided Success

The Annual Field - Day at Wesley was held in Mr. Wilbert Campbell's field on Friday, July 6th. Everybody felt in good spirits for, early that morning a splendid shower of rain refreshed the earth. The programme of events followed. The prize for the best-dressed lady on a saddle horse went to Miss Doris Scilley; for the best dressed gentleman on a saddle horse, the prize went to Mr. Willis Dowdle.

An event which created a great deal of interest and mirth was "The best old-time horse-drawn outfit." The entries in this case cannot very well be described in the space allotted here, but it was almost unbelievable that there could be gathered up such quaint old vehicles. The judges had difficulty in deciding, but finally awarded the prize to Ralph Wilson and Willie Paul.

Then there was the nail-driving contest. The prize, a motor cap given by Mrs. Anderson, was awarded to Ruby Storey. A beautiful bed-doll, awarded by Mrs. Walter Clancy, went to Reta Hunt, in the shoe-throwing contest. The prize for the high-jump went to Bernard Hunt. The sack race was won by Lorne Campbell. The gents' travellers' race was won by Willis Dowdell and the ladies' travelling race was won by Miss Laura Scilley. The obstacle race was won by Bernard Hunt. Boys under five-years race, first and second, Claude Scilley and Billy Miller. Girls race, five to ten years, won by Mazie Scilley first and second by Margaret Hannah.

The Centerville and Wesley ball teams played a splendid game. The Centerville team won 16 to 10.

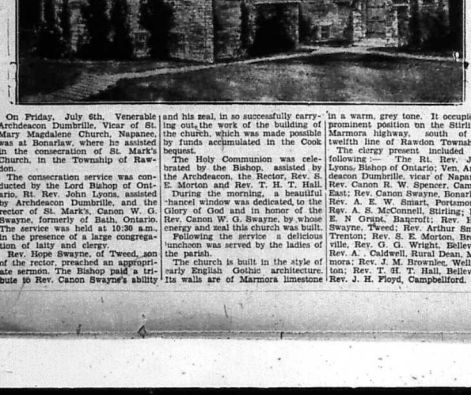
Ice cream, cool drinks and hot-dogs, with other delicacies were dispensed from the booth, while lunches and lemonade were served on the verandah of Mr. Campbell's home.

When all was over it was the unanimously expressed opinion of all that everybody had a good time. Even those who worked hard and by courtesy and kindness helped to make the day a success, were happy and gratified.

Western Crop Conditions Show Improvement

Crop conditions in the Prairie Provinces have been further improved by rain during the past week and all northern districts now have a splendid prospect. In the southern areas more rain is required. As a result of the drought earlier in the season, wheat yields in southeastern Alberta, southern Saskatchewan and southwestern Manitoba will be small, and coarse grains will produce little more than feed. The weather is unfavorable to grasshoppers, but the threat of them remains, states the Bank of Montreal, in its weekly crop report.

Anglican Church Consecrated at Bonarlaw



On Friday, July 6th, Venerable Archdeacon Dumbrville, Vicar of St. Mary Magdalene Church, Napanee, was at Bonarlaw, where he assisted in the consecration of St. Mark's Church, in the Township of Rawdon.

The consecration service was conducted by the Lord Bishop of Ontario, Rt. Rev. John Lyons, assisted by Archdeacon Dumbrville, and the rector of St. Mark's, Canon W. G. Swayne, formerly of Bath, Ontario. The service was held at 10:30 a.m. in the presence of a large congregation of laity and clergy.

Rev. Hope Swayne, of Tweed, son of the rector, preached an appropriate sermon. The Bishop paid a tribute to Rev. Canon Swayne's ability and his zeal, in so successfully carrying out the work of the building of the church, which was made possible by funds accumulated in the Cook bequest.

The Holy Communion was celebrated by the Bishop, assisted by the Archdeacon, the Rector, Rev. Canon E. Morton and Rev. T. H. T. Hall.

During the morning, a beautiful stained window was dedicated, to the Glory of God and in honor of the Rev. Canon W. G. Swayne, by whose energy and zeal this church was built.

Following the service a delicious luncheon was served by the ladies of the parish.

The church is built in the style of early English Gothic architecture. Its walls are of Marmora limestone in a warm, grey tone. It occupies a prominent position on the Stirling - Marmora highway, south of the twelfth line of Rawdon Township.

The clergy present included the following :— The Rt. Rev. John Lyons, Bishop of Ontario; Ven. Archdeacon Dumbrville, Vicar of Napanee; Rev. Canon R. W. Spencer, Cobourg; Rev. Canon Swayne, Bonarlaw; Rev. A. E. W. Smart, Portsmouth; Rev. A. S. McConnell, Stirling; Rev. H. N. Orme, Bancroft; Rev. Hope Swayne, Tweed; Rev. Arthur Smith, Trenton; Rev. S. E. Morton, Brockville, Rev. G. G. Wright, Belleville; Rev. A. Caldwell, Rural Dean, Marmora; Rev. J. M. Brownlee, Wellington; Rev. T. H. T. Hall, Belleville; Rev. J. H. Floyd, Campbellford.

LIQUIDATING

The word liquidating has many uses. But a new one has been added during the past week. Official reports from Berlin, state that Hitler has "liquidated" the enemies within his own camp. It must be remembered that Hitler never would have secured power in Germany had it not been for the faith which the people had in his promises. He promised to produce employment, to secure food, to divide up the estates of Germany's land -owners and hand them over to the people. In this way he won the respect of the discouraged and dispossessed. Once in the saddle, however, he suddenly and brutally "liquidated the leaders of Communism, of Socialism, and the Jewish leaders of finance. Now, as ruthlessly as he had liquidated those, he turns against the men who had been his friends, for years, his devoted friends. Among those liquidated were Capt. Ernst Roehm, head of the storm troops, one of the few men allowed to address the leader with the intimate "du" (thou) ; Edmund Heines, leader of the Silesian storm troops and known as the "Nazi strong man"; General Kurt Von Schleicher, aristocratic soldier who was chancellor immediately before Hitler came to power; and Heinrich Klausner, chief of the Conservative Catholic Action Party. The Vice-Chancellor, Von Papen, who apparently was slated for "liquidation," was spared, though he was forced to resign his position in the Cabinet.

By this process of liquidation, Hitler has consolidated his position and temporarily, at least, made himself secure in his position of power and authority. In order to divert attention of the people from these internal dissentions and atrocities, the Hitler regime has adopted the age-old policy of drawing the red herring across the trail. Early official reports spoke of the leaders of the storm troops as having been in connivance with a foreign power. Later reports has named France as that power. France has made official protests against the suggestion and asked for proof. In the meantime, Hitler's purpose is served. Attention of the public will be concentrated on official correspondence between France and Germany and the Germans will have time to let their passions cool off after the liquidation of the leaders.

How long Hitler will be able to maintain his power, is problematical. But killing-off the leaders who are not in complete sympathy with the present situation, will never still the unrest of the millions of workers who have found themselves betrayed by Hisler. It is true ,of course, that the German people have been used to regimentation. They are a law-abiding people, and have a great respect for authority. This accounts for the apparent ease with which they accept conditions which are imposed on them from above. But, beneath all this apparent obedience, a smouldering fire of discontent burns slowly. Sooner or later, unless some concessions are made to the common people, the smouldering fire will break out into a conflagration which may engulf all Europe.

The tragedy of the situation is that the only group who could have guided the affairs of state to a sane and progressive solution of the nation's problems — the Socialists— were among the first to be "liquidated" when Hitler assumed power.

OUR MECHANISED AGE

It is sometimes maintained that birds act only by instinct in making their nests and that intelligence plays no part in that performance. A considerable blow appears to have been dealt to that theory by an official of the Nata Museum, who reports in a current number of "Nature" that the pied crow of South Africa now builds its nest on electricity pylons and, what is more, adds bits of iron and wire to support it. "The mere manipulation of heavy gauge wire by a bird," he points out, "is a surprising feat of strength."

It certainly does seem rather remarkable in a bird of Empire origin; one would have been less surprised to find the wire nest in the electric pylons of little old Illinois or Oklahoma. However, it is all very interesting and encouraging; even if we do ultimately turn all the forests of the world into free insurance coupons for registered readers and tickets for sets of Dickens and dictionaries, it does not follow that the birds of the air will be without habitation. The adaptable creatures will then set about building abodes made out of newly drawn wire fencing and finished off with tarmac extracted from the nearest arterial highway. It is all very much in the modern movement and ought to be an eye-opener for those sentimental nature-lovers who are always deploring the rural encroachments of this mechanised age. Let them be warned in time and abandon a romantic heresy with which Nature herself has no sympathy at all. Once these days the blackbird will have acquired a fabric body and be found laying chromium-plated eggs. —Miscellany.

If you are tempted to be angry, pause a moment and still the rising activities. Deal in the same way with the tendency to be annoyed, resentful, or depressed. Remember that if you spare yourself these useless expenditures of force, you husband and increase your energy.—Dresser.

Hollywood has, at last, shown signs of nervousness. For years the producers of films at Hollywood have been able to flout public opinion and to give the people films which were an offront to decent taste. There seemed to be no recourse. Every effort to influence the trade or produce plays of a better sort, was circumvented by a judicious use of money, of which the producers seemed to have an unlimited supply. Twelve years ago, Mr. Will Hayes was appointed czar of the movies. He was a Presbyterian elder. His appointment brought with it the hope that a better day had dawned for the patron of the movies. But it hasn't worked out that way. Mr. Will Hayes soon became the champion of things-as-they-are, in the movie business. Recent revelations have shown that he had, in his employ, three members of the Federal Council of Churches of America, and fifty other paid agents. These agents were influential members of social service councils and other welfare agencies, all paid by the movie business to put their stamp of approval on films and to influence the various organizations to which they belonged.

Last April, the Roman Catholic Church opened war on the indecent movies. There are sixty-five million Roman Catholics in the States. They are all being enlisted in the great campaign. Immediately they were joined by leaders of the great Protestant bodies. The result, so far, has been that the producers are, at last, running to cover. New and protected plays are being written or recast. The New York License Board, last week, refused a license to Mae West's new film "It ain't no Sin." In Hollywood, a scene in "Madame du Barry" was cut out; "Born to be Kissed" is being refilmed and Samuel Goldwyn has stopped production on United Artists' "Barbary Coast."

An aroused and organized public is making itself felt. If the pressure continues, we may look forward to pictures which will be entertaining without being loud; humorous without being burlesque; instructive without being dull. The movie has, in the past, been one of the major forces in our national life for undermining the high moral idealism on which our nation was built—our own board of censors has saved us from some of its worst features—but, even at that, the result has been none too good. But now that the people have taken a hand and by millions are pledging themselves to patronize only those films which do not offend refined moral and religious taste, the producers, ever with an eye on box office returns, will probably reform.

The movie may, yet, become the greatest medium known for effective, wholesome fun and entertainment.

MEXICO HAS ANOTHER PRESIDENT

In these times, when there is a general loosening-up in the sale of intoxicating liquors, it is interesting to know that Mexico, in last Sunday's election, returned to the position of President, a staunch prohibitionist. He was elected on a prohibition platform, pledged to do away with the sale of intoxicating liquor within the nation. This new President, like our own Premier-elect, is a young man. He will not be forty until another year has passed. Though young in years, he is old in political and military experience. He is a full-blooded Indian, Lazaro Cardenas by name, and begins a six-year term at Chapultepec, the Mexican Government House in December. He has served, off-and-on, for the past twenty years as a soldier. He is of humble birth, and delights in speaking of himself as a working man. But he is more than a soldier—he has been Secretary of the Interior, Secretary of War and Governor of his State. Unlike our own Premier-elect, he talks very little. But he gets things done. He is known for his integrity and honesty. It is reported that he once tore up a cheque for $50,000 from American Oil interests, who desired his protection.

Now, if the people of Mexico can be persuaded, cajoled or forced to stop periodic revolution, there may be a six-year period of constructive, honest government in this all-too-little known country. The fact that Calles, the strongest force in the country, is behind him, will tend to keep him in power for the allotted six-year term.

"SPOILING" A BATTLEFIELD

When, after Waterloo, it was proposed to build a pretentious mound to the Crown Prince of the Netherlands, who was severely wounded in the early stages of the fight, a great quantity of earth was taken from the east of the Charleroi Road, where the left of the British line was stationed. "They have spoiled my battlefield" was the Duke of Wellington's comment when he was told of the scheme. But although that part of the field was greatly altered the rest of the ground was left exactly as it was on the day of the battle. But the battlefield is likely to be changed beyond all recognition if the Belgian Chamber succeeds in removing the legal restrictions which, up to the present, have prevented building on the site of Wellington's victory over Napoleon nearly 120 years ago. For Waterloo has become a suburb of Brussels since 1815, when it was ten miles distant from the Belgian city, and there is a growing population that needs houses to live in.

If it became a choice between building houses for a living people and preserving intact an ancient battlefield, where 50,000 men were killed, wounded, and missing Reason would not hesitate to say "Build." But it ought to be possible to preserve one of the world's great landmarks: the Belgian Lion, which dominates the field of Waterloo from its 200 ft. high mound. With it should also be spared Gerome's "Dying Eagle" monument to the French soldiers who fell at Waterloo, and perhaps, too, the more unassuming German memorial to Blucher's men, of whom, according to Prussian official reports, 15,000 were killed in the fighting.—Miscellany, in the Manchester Guardian.

THE ONLY WAY

Motoring in urban areas there are written and unwritten rules, and every motorist is aware of them, but he is not, he should be. A persistent observance of the rules means an easier vehicular flow and a minimum of risk. A persistent non-observance of the rules is a persistent lack of courtesy and leads to opposite results. Sometimes it seems a hopeless business to expect that appeals to common sense and thoughtfulness will bring tangible results, especially in traffic matters, but we know of no other way to seek general improvement.—Ottawa Citizen.

FAITH CURE FOR COLDS

A real doctor (not one of those day-dreaming romantic laymen) has been discovered who holds that colds can be prevented by the exercise of will-power. As soon as one of the nostrils is felt to be affected the idea is that the patient closes, by the application of a finger, the one that is in working order and so he breathes steadily and deeply through the other. At the same time his "mental attitude" should be "I can and I will check this congestion of the mucous membrane."

It sounds a bit vainglorious; one cannot help feeling that the "virus" which passes filters with triumph will have no difficulty in wriggling through a mere frame of mind. Or is it argued that the "common cold" will be so flattered at finding itself described as "this congestion of the mucuous membrane" that it will just fade away in a genial glow of gratitude and self-appreciation? And what happens about the colds which are not so obliging as to attack just one nostril at a time? If the cold begins, as is not at all infrequent, in the back of the throat, should the threatened patient close all normal apertures for the time being and breathe steadily through his ears? while he cultivates a sufficiently definite "mental attitude"?

However, all this kind of carping criticism is purely idle and unhelpful. For believers in the self-confidence trick as applied to the common cold can always assert, when the victim complains that he flung fury and defiance at the visitation but was still overwhelmed by it, that the patient started the treatment too late and did not work himself up into the right frame of mind until the congestion had already established a stranglehold on the mucuous membrane.—Miscellany.

MISUNDERSTOOD

So many people seem to be enamoured of the "dictatorship" system that it is hardly surprising that Signor Mussolini's recent determination to take charge of all the "fighting services" by wedding them into a single Ministry of Defence should have been recommended for copying in this country. One of the stories current in Whitehall in the early months of the war dealt with that possibility. The story then reported (or invented) was that Mr. Churchill went to the Prime Minister and made a similar suggestion, pointing out that the war could be conducted with much greater success with one political head for all the fighting services. Mr. Asquith was said to have listened with great attention to all the arguments of his "Corinthian" friend and then to have replied: "I see sir, my dear Winston, there may be a great deal in all you say. but I'm afraid that, with the burdens already upon me, I could hardly undertake that also."

It sounds like one of those "wilful misunderstandings" of which Sir John Sinclair complained when, having suggested publishing to Pitt that the person responsible for agriculture in Scotland ought really to be a peer, he received a reply agreeing with him, accepting his "resignation" with regret, and announcing the intention to appoint a peer in his place.

THE STRIKING OF THE GREEN

A new form of lottery appears to have been invented in Turkey. In order to encourage the revenue of the Turkish Match Monopoly, the authorities intend "to include one match giving a green light in every four or five dozen boxes, and to reward the finder with a cash prize." This is news, of course, will be that of an extension of the Turkish Match Investigation Department in order to deal with the new crime wave which is flooding the country with forged green lights for insertion in official boxes of matches. But it will take a little time for that branch of industry to get going. And in the meantime it should be great fun to see the Turkish citizen sitting down on a doorstep to light a cigarette and eagerly striking match after match in the hope of igniting that one and only green flare which gives the "all clear" signal for an immediate search round to the prize department door of the Match Monopoly headquarters. Blank coupons will be nothing to it.—Miscellany.

STREAM - STRUCK

(A craze for "stream-lining," which shows itself in steam-lined "beauty fashions," steam-lined men's clothes, works of art, and railway trains" is said to be sweeping over the United States.)

He wore a stream-line waistcoat and
A stream-lined collar, trilby hat,
And he dwelt at Streamline Mansions
in a chromium-plated flat:
He owned a stream-line motor-boat and he ran a stream-lined car,
And, as for taste in literature, he preferred the stream-lined star.

He streaked around in railway trains by stream-lined engines hauled Or streamed aloft in aeroplanes when he travelled abroad:
He went on stream-lined cruises where, from out the azure main
Strange monsters reared their stream lined heads, then disappeared again.

He smoked a stream-lined gasper in a holder lean and thin,
Which emerged above his stream-lined (or in fact, receding) chin;
He backed the stream-lined car down at spots like Sandown Park,
And supported stream-lined greyhounds on the dog-tracks after dark.

Yet of all his stream-lined trophies nothing streaked away so fast
As his income on a programme that was much too swift to last;
So he stream-lined into Queer Street, where he bumped against the bar
Of a stolid, disapproving, and unstream-lined Registrar.

VICTORIAN MANNERS AND TONES

The introduction of the menu into English table-manners, on occasions when the derivation of the word from Latin "minutus," small, would seem somewhat of an anomaly, reminds one that in very early Victorian times there were other ways of informing guests what was coming, in order that they should not rashly exhaust their available accommodation too soon. If the table could not conveniently hold the whole of the fare provided, it was the duty of the host to "announce" to his guests what dishes were in reserve on the sideboard (and one knows the size of Victorian sideboards). But if all was placed on the table, the announcement, by observing the proper etiquette he should, in the manner of a chairman, make during the course of dinner, "Gentlemen, you see your dinner !"—whereupon they could fall to, with marvellous.

As for the ladies, they seem, when included in the party, to have a poor time of it. To begin with, they flanked their hostess on each side half-way down the table, the gentlemen doing the same on either hand of their host. The custom of mixing the sexes round the table was not like the waltz on its first introduction into England, considered rather improper, and the existence of which does not know, but the poor creature had no chance of drinking so much as a glass of wine unless specially invited to do so by one of the superior sex with a bow and the gallant question, "Miss Smith or whatever her name was), may I take a glass of wine with you ?"—an invitation one supposes humbly but gratefully accepted ! The arrangement of the table would not seem to make it easier for the ladies to leave in a bevy when it was time to do so ! —Miscellany.

ANOTHER BUSINESS IS BOOMING

Business is picking up elsewhere. The amusement industry is active. Sorry, there will be no more cheer for that. . . . When guns of admirable British workmanship go off, where will they be pointed ? If you look in Bedford Park you will see a notable war trophy. A gun captured from the Germans, and bearing a British trade mark. Thousandfires were sown thick with mines, made in Britain, which blew British seamen sky high in the campaign of frightfulness. For whom are we making the shining instruments of death ? — London Daily Express.

INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON, JULY 15TH, 1934

I KINGS, 17 : 1-24; 19 : 1-8

"GOD CARES FOR ELIJAH"

Elijah was the first of the long line of great prophets whose moral insight, faith and courage changed the whole course of Israel's history and the whole history of the world. Elijah is a titanic figure who strides across the early pages of Hebrew history. He condemns abuses in the religious practices of the day; challenging priests and king alike in his earnestness to institute reforms in the moral and social life of his day. He stands as the conscience of the nation at a time when, under the influence of a queen of foreign birth, the lofty purity of worship and of conduct, was in danger of being lost.

In the first section of today's lesson, Elijah announces a prolonged drought. At once, the question is raised as to how Elijah received the information. Might just as well ask how Amos ever came to proclaim God as a God of Justice, how Hosea gained his knowledge of God as a God of Love, how Jesus came to His conclusion, that God was a Father. What can we say, save that these revelations came from the very councils of God Himself. There are spiritual forces—men and women who in some mysterious fashion have been elected the special vehicle of God's revelation. The reasons for this, and the manner in which the revelation is communicated to them, we shall never know.

Much beauty and loveliness lies in the story of Elijah's preservation during the period of drought. He was directed to a brook that had not dried up, and was cared for by the birds. To do as some would suggest and amend the word which reads "ravens" to "Arabians" would rather tend to satisfy our modern demand for facts, but it would at once rob the story of the poetry and mystery which constitutes its charm and its interest. The lesson the story is meant to teach is, that God cares for his children. Here we see glimmerings of the same trust which came to full fruition in the words of our Master: "are not two sparrows sold for a farthing and not one of them falls to the ground without your Father; fear not, ye are of more value than many sparrows." That has been the faith which has sustained men and women in times of misery of life, in the martyr at the stake, the sailor on the sea, the soldier in the face of distress, agony and uncertainty have found consolation and courage by the faith in a God who understands and cares.

Great events had taken place between the first part of the lesson and the second. Elijah had gained a notable success with the forces of evil. The Queen threatened his life. Despondent, and discouraged, he fled to a lonely place and prayed that he might die. Anyone who undertakes religious work must be careful to guard against despondency and discouragement. The forces of evil are persistent and unscrupulous, which often parade under the guise of goodness. It is interesting to note the manner of divine treatment in Elijah's despondency. Before discussing the religious situation, the Lord was sent fed the prophet. After physical nourishment and rest, matters looked entirely different and Elijah was in a receptive mood, ready for the spiritual nourishment which was available.

There is a saying current in the Orient, that it is impossible to talk religion to a hungry man. There is something in that. So intimately are the spiritual and physical woven together in human personality, that the physical condition has a very definite effect on the spiritual. We have noticed during the depression, a steady falling-off in loyalty to the Church. While the Church was never better equipped than it is today to minister to the people, the great mases of the population never enter its portals. One reason, undoubtedly, lies in their comparative economic poverty. That does not mean that the Church can only minister to well-fed and comfortably clothed people, but it does mean that from the point of view of the man on the outside, it is hard to bring a message of comfort and hope, when he is out of work, and dependent on public charity for the bare necessities of life.

Considerable excitement was caused on Tuesday afternoon last week when two box cars went over the embankment at the end of the track in the mill yards, while shunting. The engine and cars apparently failed to couple and there being a steep grade, the cars gained considerable speed before reaching the end of the track. It was very fortunate that no one was hurt and very little damage done. The wrecking crew from Belleville was soon on the scene and the cars were back on the track by midnight.

Success is full of promise till men wet it; and then it is a last year's nest, from which the bird has flown. —Henry Ward Beecher.

YARKER

Yarker, July 9. — Many Yarkerites attended the Methodist camp meeting at Harrowsmith last Sunday, and report a very large gathering there. As many as twenty-five hundred, it is estimated, were present, consequently attendance at the Yarker churches was small.

Miss Betty McDowell, of Wardsville, who has been visiting at the parsonage, returned to her home last Thursday. She attended Normal in London last year, and is now looking for a school in the vicinity of her home, which we hope she secures.

Varty Lake campers are seen in Yarker occasionally, where they come to buy supplies. The fishing in the lake is reported as being very good, but no unusually large ones are being taken. Some of our local nimrods report good success in Colebrook Pond and Lake Jake.

The nine o'clock a.m. services in Colebrook United Church are proving quite successful, bringing out much larger congregations that the afternoon services did. That idea was suggested by members of the congregation as a means by which they might attend services and Sunday School without having to stay home all day to do so. It is to last just for the summer months.

A very interesting programme was prepared by Mrs. A. Priskin for the W. M. S. meeting held on Thursday afternoon. The subject for study was "Temperance," and was educational. "The Cross". Those present could not help but be impressed with the fact that the liquor traffic, and all its attending evils, are in direct contradiction to the cross, and the great sacrifice for the world's redemption.

The social evening, held Friday evening, under the auspices of the W. M. S. in the S. S. Hall, was a decided success. A most interesting and humorous feature of the programme were the five-minute addresses delivered by Messrs. J. C. Hudgins, S. D. G. Winter, Donald Fitzpatrick, Milton Martin, Percy Hopkins, on "What I Would Do If I Were Premier", "If I Were Married", and "If I Were a Bachelor". The rapt attention of the audience was assured from the first to last as the listener to these gentlemen in their "If" venture in political, financial, matrimonial, theroetical, practical realms of experience. Later Mr. Stanley Sexsmith gave a brief account of his interview trip to New Brunswick. Messrs. Ralph and Howard Bell, of Desmond, contributed a number of musical selections during the evening, which were very much appreciated, and assured them of a most cordial welcome when they favor Selby with another visit. THE CRASH AND CARRY SYSTEM

BY WEARE HOLBROOK
N. Y. Herald Tribune Magazine

When Lord Cackleburst returned to England recently, enquiring reporters asked him what feature of America he had made the greatest impression on him during his sojourn here. They expected some allusion to tall buildings or well dressed women or racketeers— the customary valedictory of the visiting foreigner. But Lord Cracklehurst after a moment of reflection, replied "Brief cases!"

"Every one in the States seems to be attached to a brief case," he observed. "All the men carry them, not only to their officers but to dinners, lodge parties and other social affairs where light refreshment is desired. Every woman I met carried a large flat handbag under her arm—a bag obviously modeled after a brief case. Even the school children carry them. Why, I daresay there is a small white brief case, with a bone handle for teething purposes, in the American infant's layette!

"Not long ago," he added, "I heard of a barrister who actually used a brief case to keep briefs. But he lived in Winsted, Conn."

Whether we are, as Lord Cackleburst implied, a nation of packrats. Our aversion to appearing in purely-handed is probably a hereditary heritage from our forefathers, who landed on Plymouth Rock or Ellis Island with all their worldly possessions in their fists; the Bradstreet rating of pioneers depended upon their personal encumbrances, and the man who carried the biggest bundle had the best credit. Or it may be an atavistic impulse which originated in prehistoric days when the Pithecanthropus erectus never felt safe without a club or a rock in his hairy paw.

Whatever it is, this toting tendency has reached its fullest flower in the twentieth century. The leading library, the cash-and-carry market, the bring-your-own-liquor party, the emporium-immediately-sale and the delicatessen dinner have combined to make a walking bazaar of the average commuter. I have seen him trudging home in the twilight with a sack of potatoes ("Today's Special—10 lbs. for 25c") under one arm, a rod lacquer smoking stand ("Only Them Last—Only $2.89") under the other, a head of cabbage in the crook of his left elbow, a 36-page evening paper and two brackets for the bathroom shelf in his coat pockets, while from his fingers hung little paper pails containing oysters, ripe olives, cream cheese, etc. He could, if suddenly surrounded and cut off from outside communication, withstand a prolonged siege by living off his various humps.

When he reaches his home he has to ring the door bell with his nose, and if no one answers it he has to open the door by turning around and sitting down abruptly on the latch, at the same time pushing back with his shoulders and taking care not to lose his balance when the door swings in. It sounds difficult, but he can do it. He is a commuter.

One evening about dusk Phoebe called me to the window to observe our neighbor, Mr. Twoggins. "I never knew Mr. Twoggins drank," she exclaimed breathlessly, "but look at him! He's absolutely reeling."

"You must be mistaken," I protested. "Twoggins never strays from the straight and narrow path."

"He's walking with one foot in the gutter right now," she pointed out.

"And you can't tell me that a sober man could carry a bouquet of green carnations through the streets, even in St. Patrick's Day."

I drew aside the curtain and studied Mr. Twoggins for a moment. "That's no bouquet," I informed her. "That's a bunch of celery — and you'd staggerer, too, if you were carrying a bird cage, a dress form, a toy fire truck, three grapefruit and a pineapple. Twoggins hasn't been drinking, my dear; he's merely been shopping."

The present popularity of green vegetables has added colorful note to the impedimenta of the shopper. Such theoretically edible shrubbery as broccoli, kale, spinach, kohl-rabi and mangel wurzel is usually sold wet and wrapped up rather sketchily by the man at market. By the time it has been carried half a block the cornucopia of soggy wrapping paper falls apart, the greenery spreads itself like a peacock's tail and its owner finds himself clutching an armful of vitamin-infested couture.

One-cent sales and bargain days have done much to increase the carrying capacity of the ultimate consumer. Few shoppers can resist the temptation to pay an extra penny and double their load. And even bona fide purchases may be delivered to the home free of charge, the veteran bargain hunter always prefers to transport them personally. They are more than mere merchandise; they are trophies won after a prolonged struggle in the nether regions of a department store.

When one has baked a trail to the bargain counter, given elbow thrust for elbow thrust, kick for kick, and finally wrested a precious garment from the grasp of a hundred clinging fingers, does one turn that precious garment over to a delivery delivery department, to be sent out next morning? No, indeed; one carries it home proudly, in person. Or, better yet, one gives it to one's husband; and he carries it home, though not so proudly.

The husband is an important factor in a shopping expedition, but he seldom gains ground at the bargain counter without a wife to run interference for him. With her sharp French heels and her pointed fingernails, she is better equipped for the terrific line drives than he. Dodging, twisting and occasionally muttering "Sorry!" between clenched teeth, she plunges forward to the 19-cents-a-yard line. Then, as soon as the salesgirl snaps the bundle to her she executes a neat lateral pass, throwing the bundle to her husband. He leaps into the air, catches it, tucks it under his arm and makes a spectacular end run to the revolving doors. Two minutes after the crash of the milling mass of feminity and ruin, Jim, She has but a slipper heel; there is a rip in her stockinet and her hat has been knocked positively straight. But she is triumphant. She has scored a Mark-Down.

It is easy to lure the average man into extravagant expenditures. A little flattery does it. His wife simply says that she wants him to help her pick out something for the house. "You have such excellent taste, my dear," she reminds him. And it isn't until he finds himself out on the corner impersonating old man Atlas that he realizes that he has been duped again. What she wanted was not advice but two strong arms and a pair of faithful dogs. They serve who only stand and weight themselves down with packages.

As the holiday season approaches man becomes more than ever a beast of burden, and his burden grows more grievous. The head of a wild-eyed wooden horse peers through the crook of his elbow, a tinkle-trombone suddenly projects itself through the wrapping paper, and as he enters a crowded elevator a shrill cry of "Ma-ma! Pa-pa!" that is crushed against his chest.

On Sunday he may be in the week when there is no shopping menace, the rural excursion rears its ugly head. Husbands are inveigled into accompanying their better halves on rambles through the woods —only to return with their arms full of autumn leaves, wildflowers, heavy bunches of moss and possibly a stray kitten.

As a matter of fact, this training in elementary trucking begins before marriage. It is one of the ordeals of courtship. With the dawn of love there comes to man a realization that the female of the species is no climbing vine so far as her personal possessions are concerned. She simply cannot hang onto them. Even when she is seated with the unfurnished lap which fashion has provided for her, her handkerchief, her compact and assorted articles of feminine adornment inevitably find their way to the floor. At the theatre the ardor of her escort may be measured by the number of times he dives under the seat to recover her bundles, mantle, gloves, fur neckpiece, lipstick, hand bag and temporarily discarded slippers.

Thus he is thoroughly broken to harness by the time the wedding is announced. A few bundles more or less make no difference to him then. On the rare occasions when he is permitted to go forth unencumbered he takes along his brief case just to keep in training.

There is no escaping this white-man's burden, once it is assumed. Yesterday I met Mr. Milfred coming out of a departmental store. His face was hidden behind a pile of packages, but I recognized him by his feet. He was carrying a fur coat, two hatboxes, a rubber plant, a fagot of curtain rods and a Pekingeese. All he lacked was a persepos.

"Cheer up!" I said. "The first hundred pounds are the hardest."

"I doubt it," replied Mr. Milfred glumly, as he took a fresh grip on his load and staggered toward the subway station. "The modern woman is convinced that a husband in the hand is worth two in the Bush Terminal. When I get home and go to heaven, I bet I'll have to carry my wife's harp!"

OBITUARY

THE LATE MRS. F. J. HIGGS

On Friday morning, June 29, 1934, the village of Enterprise was shocked by the news of the sudden death of Mrs. F. J. Higgs, who had recovered extremely well after the birth of a baby boy, but from an unknown reason, she succumbed from an attack of the heart.

She leaves to mourn her husband and five children, ranging in age from one year to the infant baby, also a seriously ill mother, and her father Mr. W. Sills, and one sister, Margery; two brothers, Stanley and Adrian, of Trenton. Raymond of Detroit, Charlie of Enterprise and Donald of Picton, and a number of nieces and nephews.

The funeral was held at the home on Sunday, July 1st, at 1:30 p.m., and was largely attended by the community. The service was conducted by the Rev. T. M. Acheson, pastor of the United Church at Enterprise and assisted by a number of ministers of the United Church choir. Interment took place at Centreville cemetery and bearers, George Nelson, Guy Fenwick, Milo Jackson, Ed. Cummings, Harold Vanluven, George Conboy, acted as pall-bearers.

Mrs. Taylor, whose maiden name was Sarah Haight, was born in Adolphustown, where she lived until as a young woman she moved with her parents, to Newburgh. Many years ago she married the late Captain Percy Taylor and with him lived in Deseronto, until about fifteen years ago, when they moved to Napanee. Creegan and Mrs. Creegan, of Gananoque, became the bride of Dr. J. Howard Walmsley, of Picton. Rev. J. R. Creegan, brother of the bride, performed the ceremony.

The church was artistically decorated with summer blooms for the occasion and a number of guests and friends from Picton were present.

Bridal music was played during the ceremony by the organist, Mr. Carrie Shaffer.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her uncle, Mr. Clifton Sheffield, was charmingly gowned in white crepe fashioned on long lines with much shirring in the bodice and in the yoke of the finger-tip jacket. She wore a picture hat of white with white shoes and gloves and carried pink rosebuds, forget-me-nots and lily-of-the-valley.

At the reception which followed at the Rectory, the bride's table was centred with a lovely wedding cake, a gift from the Women's Guild of the church. Roses were used upon the table and about the room, and

Canada Gave Eagle $2,500,000 — Sum Builds Armories

Despite Canada's adherence to disarmament proposals, the emergency public works program announced in the House of Commons provides $2,161,600 for new barracks, armories and R.M.C. buildings, and $400,000 for buildings added the total is $2,561,400. The Dominion's expenditure on the League of Nations in the past fifteen years was $2,500,000.

The program itself provides: $1,200,000 for barracks at Calgary, and for armories: Montreal, $200,000; Vancouver, $240,000; Victoria, $120,000; with $370,000 for the Royal Military college. In the main estimates the following sums were provided for instalments toward new armories which have been under way: Toronto $29,500; Montreal, $13,140; Regina, $21,000; Westmount, $13,000, Vancouver, $16,000. There is also provision for $77,500 as instalment for a building for ordinance stores at Calgary, where the new $1,200,000 permanent force barracks is to be built.

In the senate Mal.-General A. D. McRae moved that Canada withdraw from the League of Nations because of the expense. He declared Canada's contribution to the League of Nations was $278,000, nearly $100,000 less than new "building to be put up for the "gentlemen cadets" of the Royal Military college as an unemployment relief measure.—The Toronto Star.

Anti-Arms Committee Issues League Rules

Convention Drafted Prevent Sale or Manufacture

Geneva—A first step toward ending the evils of the international traffic in armaments was taken last night when the Arms Traffic Committee of the disarmament conference approved a drastic draft convention regulating the manufacture and sale of war materials.

The convention provides:

1. Establishment of a system for licensing the manufacture, export or import of war materials;

2. Compulsory publicity for all manufactures and shipments of war articles;

3. Manufacturing licenses must give the name and address of manufacturers and a description of the implements of war which the manufacturers are authorized to make;

4. All Governments must immediately be informed of any orders received by license holding manufacturers;

5. The permanent disarmament commission would supervise execution of the agreement and see that publicity was given all arms traffic reports from the various governments.

The terms apply equally to private governmental manufacture in contrast to the 1925 agreement terms of which were applicable only to private factories. The convention was forwarded to Right Hon. Arthur Henderson, president of the president of the Disarmament Conference General Commission, for distribution to all governments.

It is intended to be part of the future general convention on disarmament.

FREE SHOTS ON Local Sport

It is to be hoped that everyone has reserved July 18th for the big day being put on by the Rotary Club, in aid of their Crippled Children's Fund.

Harry Card and Jack Adams are doing everything possible to give the sporting public a real treat, and have received wonderful co-operation from those whom they have asked to help make this day a stand-out.

Of course, the feature of the day will be the softball game between the Toronto and Ottawa hockey players. All the stars from both towns are looking forward to having a real day and will be here in full force.

In addition, Lionel Conacher expects to be down and will likely give a wrestling exhibition. Several of the sports writers from Toronto will also be on hand to entertain the fans in between times, but no doubt be at no little publicity in the Toronto dailies.

Everything is being done to make the day complete, including a street parade at night, a baseball game between the local and Kingston fighters and door prizes will be given for those in the afternoon and evening events.

Everyone knows of the wonderful work the Rotary Club has done for the crippled children of this district. They have several cases which need attention but lack the funds, so time it is to be hoped that everyone will do their share toward this work.

In any event everyone can be assured of a real afternoon's and evening's entertainment and it is to be hoped that the attendance records at the G. W. Gibbard Memorial Park will be smashed.

FAITH IN EMPIRE MARKET

Canada's exports for the first five months of this year increased $71,-000,000 in value over those of the same period in 1933, and imports increased by $66,900,000. This appears to be a piece of good news for numerous countries, although the account was favorable to the Dominion to the extent of $30,000,000.

What is most conspicuous in the figures is that Canada has every trade reason to be thankful for the Empire which still helps to pay for many things bought from us and provide a favorable visible balance. Exports to Empire countries exceeded imports from them by more than $56,300,000 and imports from foreign countries exceeded exports thereto by nearly $22,000,000. Britain and John Bull spent with us $46,500,000 more than we spent with them, and John Canuck expended in the United States $37,000,000 more than Uncle Sam spent here.

Exports to foreign countries increased 37 per cent., and imports from that group increased 56.9 per cent., while exports to Empire countries gained 32 per cent., and imports from these 34.5 per cent. Purchases of foreign nations in Canada increased three times as much as purchases by the Empire—as a market.—Toronto Globe.

SOME "FORD" APHORISMS

There are always two kinds of people in the world — those who are pioneers and those who plod. The plodders always attack the pioneers because the plodders would have nowhere to plod had not the pioneers first cleared the way.

In a generation ago there were a thousand men to every opportunity, while today there are a thousand opportunities for every man.

Dishonest men do, sometimes, succeed. But only when they give a service which exceeds their dishonesty.

The very word "efficiency" is hated because so much that is not efficient has masqueraded as such.

The progress of the world has been in direct ratio to the convenience of communication.

One's own employees ought to be one's own best customers.

When one thinks in terms of "Labor and Capital," one begins to think in a circle.

An unemployed man is an out-of-work customer. He cannot buy.

An underpaid man is a customer reduced in purchasing power. Business depression is caused by weakened purchasing power.

It is much easier to make money honestly than it is to make it dishonestly.

Business . . . is threatened by two classes of people, who think they are in opposition, but who actually have a common cause — the professional financier and the professional reformer.

Big business is not money power. It is service power. — From Today and Tomorrow, by Henry Ford, in collaboration with Samuel Crowther.

BEHIND THE COLOR BAR

She was the victim of a generation that taught its daughters a little of many things and nothing of commercial value. So she had inevitably come to the end of a misdirected effort.

When the Japanese house-boy met her in the main street of that self-centred Californian small town that had no use for her accomplishments, she was in a starving condition. That is why weak tears rose to her eyes as he bowed to her, bowed from the waist like a Frenchman, for his low brought him to her recollection and she instantly corrected him with affluent days of full, satisfying meals.

"Mees Witt'nhem?" Yes, it was Charlie. She remembered that surprisingly rich musical voice, innocent, she thought, coming from that wiry Oriental figure with its lined, tired, yellow face — Charlie. She had never mastered his unwieldy Japanese name, the old house boy at the school where she had stayed longest, where the authorities in despair of her teaching had turned her on to housekeeping. Charlie murmured apologies for having stepped her, but he must thank her again for those many cups of Japanese tea she had made for him while he worked. He laughed, his yellow face piling up wrinkle upon wrinkle.

"You work here now, Charlie?"

"Sure. Plenty good house. I clean house. I wash automobile. I dig potatoes. I paint roof. What they want. You Mees, you no marry?"

"How did he guess that? "No, Charlie. No want my teaching."

Charlie's next remark was a little startling to a middle-aged spinster.

"You no marry yet?"

Miss Whittinteham answered with dignity, "No, Charlie. Many women in this country remain unmarried."

Charlie ran his fingers through his black hair several times, thinking out this unusual English.

"I know," he said. "You American lady no marry sometime. I know. Plenty same here. Town full of them." He waved his hand round, indicating a local viciousness beyond explanation.

After that chance meeting the Japanese house-boy brought little gifts to her, little gifts of food. How could he know that for days on the town of such go-ahead prosperity? Perhaps he remembered from his boyhood in Japan the lack of the hungry.

But the strange situation could not go on for ever. She had just enough money left to pay her fare to the nearest city. There surely she could get work. At Charlie's knock she rose full of purpose.

"How do, Charlie? Sit down. Stay a few minutes. I talk to-day." Practice had made her proficient in conversing with him.

Charlie shuffled forward on large, stained feet, bowed his ambassadorial bow, holding his basin-rimmed Panama under an arm, and remained standing.

"You been very kind, Charlie. But no more. I go away."

"Never you go, Mees?"

"Oh, to the city. I find work there."

"What kind work? You no teach. You no wash? You go clean? What you do?"

She did not answer. The Jap's eyes were shrewd. They looked round the room appraisingly.

"You sell all up, and how much money you get?"

"Not much, Charlie. These not mine."

Charlie looked on the downcast face of the American lady, on the strange long nose, on the thin, dry hair, the drooping mouth. To him all American are unlovely, but he knew that just now a woman could make many dollars teaching English in his own Nippon.

"Mees, In my country you all right. You teach my country English. Teachers in my country all very high."

"No can go Japan, Charlie. Cost heap money."

"You go my country. I go my country first. I tell them you come. They all come to hear. All new teacher. Teacher very high."

Eleanor Whittinham rose to her feet. She could not bear fairy stories just then. Real life was so stern.

"Thank you, Charlie. You very kind. But no can do. I get work here."

"You go my country. I find money and pay boat."

The anxiety in his voice touched her. She resolved to be patient with his big words.

"Charlie, all no good. Take big heap money. You no got enough money. But thank you all the same."

"Yeah, I got money all right." Charlie grinned joyfully. "I get good good dollars every day for long, long time. I no gamble now." Here he looked a little sheepish. "I put all money in bank. All but to eat. I no eat like American. All money ready. I go tell my ladies must get other Jap. Then I go Nippon. You follow next week. I tell them you come. All come down to boat meet. Teacher. All how Teacher. Teacher very high Mees?"

Reason told her as she followed this long speech that there was always room for teachers of English in Japan, and her knowledge of the earnings and spendings of household Japs made Charlie's monetary boasts possible. As one drowning catches at straws, she said:

"Charlie, I would pay all back. You know me, Charlie. I pay back all you lend me."

The yellow face flamed.

"I no busy. I pick steamer. I get very busy."

"But, Charlie. Think well. Cost heap money, Charlie."

"You eat sandwich," said Charlie, patting the luncheon basket. "I get busy."

She cried a little and tried to believe that all would be carried through.

She began to unfold the luncheon. Was Charlie a Christian that he should help a woman of an alien race? No, she remembered his saying he was a Buddhist.

Months later, when Eleanor Whittinham was a well-established teacher of English in Japan, sending back to California instalments of her loan, she would smile over the leading articles in her American papers relating to the Oriental invasion. She, at any rate, had been behind the Color Bar and found it transparent, rainbow-like, revealing through its colorful gleam the homely shapes of human love and pity. — E. M. SHELLAC

ITS NATURAL HISTORY AND CULTURE

What is the substance of shellac? It is the product of millions of microscopical insects found solely in certain parts of India. Their product is indispensable for quite a number of industries important to civilized life.

It is a subsurface the production of which cannot momentarily be interfered with and which, consequently may, one day, really fail to keep up with the demand.

The insect is Sanskrit word signifying "a very large number." It is therefore used to denote the tiny, lady-bird-like insects which drift down the wind in clouds of countless millions and settle upon certain trees. Members of the "fig" family are the hosts usually preferred; other trees are selected by the swarming insects sometimes. On alighting upon the branches, the females of the species, which greatly outnumber the males, bore into the bark of the trees with their trunk-like beak—invisible to the naked eye—and suck and suck and suck! The sap of their host is transformed in their bodies into a clear fluid which eventually they void. They hold fast to their perch, and through all their brief life never make a move, save sometimes to transfer their attentions to a better feeding place.

In due time, of course, these insects become completely imprisoned in their minute pouch of shellac, which quickly coalesce and harden. After fertilization by the males they become mere amorphous, purply sacks crammed full of eggs. Presently they die and the eggs hatch out, the grubs also feeding voraciously on the juices of the self-same tree, until they, too, are ready to turn into lac-insects.

A Peasant Product

Sometimes these creatures continue in the same spot or crawl farther up the limb, so that eventually this gets encrusted to the thickness of maybe half an inch with dead, dried insects, egg-sacks full of coloring matter; and the actual valuable resin. Or they may seek a new and better host. This is the sole way in which farming of these millions may be done. For their swarms are occasionally shifted from their original site to a tree likely to yield more abundant, superior resin. The operation is performed by carefully lifting the piece of bark whereon they are located and carrying this to the wanted tree, to which it is firmly fixed, when the insects immediately begin again to indulge their truly terrible appetites.

In the days before electrical and wireless apparatus, telephones, dictaphones, gramophones, discs, typewriters, and such-like gadgets of a modern existence, lac-insects were chiefly valued for the brilliant coloring matter in the egg-sacks they leave behind them when they die. Eve ni nthose times, however, the resin also was of worth, being the medium used for the lacquer employed in many diverse ways for centuries by the craftsmen of the East, and in more recent times by those of western nations.

Th imm ense advance of late years in the paint and varnish industries, and of equipment which is roated chiefly for the resin they produce. This curious substance comes solely from India and almost entirely from the provinces of Bihar and Odissa. There, robbers often try to steal the product from the farmer upon whose fields it stands, a happening which sometimes leads to bloodshed. A watch is accordingly kept upon the lac-trees when the time for reaping them approaches.

The Manufacture

When the twigs and bits of branches with their incrustations finally reach the factory, the resinous mass is scraped from them by girls or women, who plunge the lac at once into vats of tepid water. When this has been strained away, after the lac has been well washed by a thorough trampling, it leaves, on settling, a sediment which, dried and cut into cakes, forms the crimson-lake colour known to most of us.

The resin is turned about in India's scorching sun until quite dry. But it still holds many impurities. Accordingly, it is next shovelled into a bolster-shaped bag which is grasped at each end by a man who turns this in opposite directions over a slow fire of a special sort of charcoal. The lac is thus squeezed through the canvas of this strainer so that it drops in a clear, golden pool on to the clean-swept floor, where it cools and hardens almost immediately.

With his lips he lac-worker now grasps the mass at the centre of its upper edge and each corner with his outstretched hands. Then digging the toes of his widely straddled feet into the sheet's lower edge he stretches the still plastic resin as much as possible; next he shivers the tenuous mass into a thousand little bits by a sudden blow from his fist. These scraps we style "shellac," while when further ground into pinhead-sized pieces they are termed "seed-lac." This last is the finest sort of all.

NEWS AND INFORMATION FOR THE BUSY FARMER

(Furnished by the Ontario Department of Agriculture)

Poison Bran

Poison bran for cutworms is made by mixing one pint of bran with one teaspoonful of Paris green and adding to this one tablespoonful of molasses dissolved in sufficient water to make the mixture damp enough to hold together. It should be spread on the ground at night, and should be used with great care as it is very poisonous.

Growing Mash for Chicks

Chick starter or chick mash should be substituted with a growing mash when the chicks are eight or ten weeks of age, in order to obtain the best rearing results. A growing mash used at the Central Experimental Farm that has given good results consists of: Ground yellow corn, oat flour, middlings, bran, each one part; animal feed mixture half a part; bone meal two per cent, salt half per cent.

The animal feed mixture is made up of ground meat scrap, fish meal and milk powder. Where milk is used the fish meal and milk powder can be eliminated.

Pastures for Swine

A swine pasture can be used to advantage both for growing pigs during early stages of growth and for breeding sows. Growing pigs may be started economically on pasture along with supplementary feeding of grains and skim milk. However, the pigs should be penned up and fed more intensively after four months of age. Good pasture alone will supply sufficient feed if the sows are in medium flesh, but it should be supplemented by grain if the sows are thin. Ringing of the pigs will keep the pasture in good condition for the following year.

Cost of Growing Crops

Costs of producing various crops in Eastern Canada, as indicated by records of Dominion Experimental farms, have been tabulated. Considering that certain items entering into the cost have to be estimated, the following conclusions are presented: Wheat, 68 cents per bushel; oats, 31 cents; barley, 45 cents. These prices are based on costs for the period 1931 to 1933, and are substantially lower than the costs for the preceding period, the average reduction being about 33 per cent.

The cost per ton of producing principal fodder crops during the last three years is placed at: Clover hay, $5.72; timothy hay, $4.35; corn silage, $2.31; sunflower silage, $2.24; mangels, $1.95; turnips, $2.27. The cost of growing potatoes is placed at 17 cents a bushel.

The average life of farm implements is an important factor in determining costs of operation, and some 1,300 farmers presented their experiences in this connection. It appears that an automobile may last ten years, but a binder only nearly 19 years; a corn binder lasts 20 years and a grain binder 22, but the life of a tractor is 12 years and a motor truck barely 10. The longest-lived machine is the farmhouse, which may last for 34 years, but the potato sprayer is through in 14. Care of machinery and husbandry methods which produce good crops are important factors in reducing cost.

Weekly Crop Report

Fall wheat has headed out but straw is short and a medium crop is are as a result of the severe winter killing foreshadows a crop of substantially below average. Barley and oats, of which there is an increased acreage, are making satisfactory progress. Early sown corn is showing rapid growth and the crop is promising. While meadows have benefited from the recent rains, a short hay crop is indicated. The tobacco acreage is reduced and unfavorable conditions have necessitated considerable replanting. Apple orchards suffered more damage than early estimates indicated and a large number of trees were killed.

Marketing Soybeans

Marketing soybean seed is not complicated. The beans are used for three main purposes—for feed, seed and industrial uses. Very little, if any, soybean seed is marketed for feed, and, if used for this purpose, it is usually fed at the farm on which it originates. Of the beans sold for seed, probably the greatest proportion is marketed directly by the growers themselves. Some seed is disposed of through local elevators and houses, while the oil mills may arrange to supply the requirements of splending growers. Seed used for industrial purposes is marketed at present directly by the farmers. There are at present two oil mills crushing soybean seed in Canada (both located in Ontario) and the annual requirements of both are produced almost entirely under contract.

The New Strawberry Plantation

To ensure a good crop of strawberries next year, it is important that the plantation set out this spring receive careful attention. The cultivator should be kept going to maintain a fine soil mulch, and as the runners develop they should be pinched to ensure a well-spaced, matted row. All blossoms should be pinched off the plants set out this spring.

Spray the Fruit Trees

The Dominion Horticulturist warns orchardists to follow the published recommendations regarding the spraying of fruit trees. Thoroughness of application, coupled with the use of the proper materials, will produce the desired results. Contact sprays should be used for aphis or any of the sucking insects. Black leaf 40 is very useful. For leaf-eating insects a stomach poison such as arsenate of lime or arsenate of lead should be applied. When spraying the orchard use a combined insecticide and fungicide.

Fruit Crop Report

A summary of crop conditions for June shows that the condition of fruit crops, including apples, cherries, peaches, grapes, pears and plums is considerably below that of a year ago. The production of strawberries this year is estimated at 5,950,000 quarts compared with 10,625,000 quarts last year, and raspberry production is placed at 1,695,000 quarts against 2,651,000 in 1933.

In Central and Eastern Ontario the spring was very cold and backward and also unusually dry, although moisture is plentiful at present. Both pears and plums will be a light crop in this area. Cherry trees suffered moderate losses and the crop will be very small. Trees which survived the winter are growing vigorously, but they had very little bloom and the set was poor. There was a great deal of damage to apple trees, especially those which bore at all heavily in 1933. The amount of loss for late varieties ranges from 10 per cent. in some orchards to 65 per cent in others.

In Western and Southern Ontario the spring temperatures were unsatisfactory, with cold weather during blossoming and pollination period and late frosts in some areas. Following the first week in June, rains have been generally copious and sufficient at present. Winter-killing was confined chiefly to apple and peach orchards in the apple districts, Baldwins, Greenings and Kings suffered most heavily, in some cases the loss being as high as 50 per cent. With the exception of McIntosh, Snow, and such varieties apples set light and are very uneven in size. There is practically no fungus or insect damage to date on well-sprayed orchards.

"DODDER" MENACE

A valuable circular on "Dodder," described as a new parasitic menace to clover and alfalfa, has just been issued by the Department and is available to farmers. It is an annual weed of European origin and is usually found in Red Clover and occasionally in Alfalfa fields. It is parasitic in nature, possessing no roots and derives its nourishment through suckers attached to the host plant.

The circular gives a complete description of the weed and declares that Ontario's clover seed export business, valued at a million dollars will be seriously threatened if Dodder is allowed to spread in this province. It suggests that as soon as Dodder is noticed, the infested patches should be mowed and the refuse raked and burned. Badly infested fields should be cut early for hay and the best possible after care should be taken to secure clover and alfalfa seed free from Dodder.

"Dodder can be eliminated by a strenuous five-year program of cooperative effort," it is stated. "No clover field known to contain Dodder should be saved for seed. Every purchaser of clover seed should insure himself of securing Dodder-free seed by first having a sample analyzed. This can be done by forwarding a two-ounce representative sample to the Dominion Seed Branch, 86 Collier Street, Toronto."

ENGRAVED BRASS

When engraved brass, such as Bearers worn, requires cleaning, it should not be treated with powder or polish, for such preparations are apt to clog the engraving and give it a black appearance. The brass should be rubbed thoroughly with a half-lemon, and then scrubbed with a stiff nail-brush dipped in soapy water. The soap should then be rinsed off with clean water, and the brass wiped dry and given a final polish with a soft leather.

"BLUE" STAINS

It is frequently discovered that articles which have been washed a good deal are inclined to take on a bluish tinge after immersion in blue water. Particularly is this so in the case of silk articles. The stains or bluish tinge may be removed by plunging the article immediately into a bowl of lukewarm water containing a little borax. Leave to soak for a short time. It will be found that a more successful method of treating silk white is to add half a cupful of milk to the first rinsing water. This will not only do away with the risk of staining, but will definitely help to keep the silk white.

RUBBER GLOVES

Rubber gloves are rather an expensive item of expenditure as they tear so rapidly. The gloves should never be dried near a fire after use, but an old towel kept at hand and the gloves rolled in this until they are required again. Sometimes when a little olive oil into the rubber to keep it flexible. The gloves will hardly ever tear if the hands are rubbed with flour before putting them on. They will then slip on and off easily without pulling. A cup of flour might be kept on a shelf over the sink for the purpose.

CAST OFF UGLY FAT

WOMAN LOSES 28 LBS. IN 3 MONTHS

"Three months ago," a woman writes, "I was persuaded to try Kruschen Salts to reduce my weight, which was 228 lbs. I had tried other things, but all to no avail. Now I know that Kruschen Salts are different. In three weeks I lost 9 lbs., and I felt five years younger. I really must say I feel a different woman. I have now lost 28 lbs. to date." — (Mrs.) C. G. B.

If you are overweight take one half-teaspoonful of Kruschen Salts in a glass of hot water before breakfast every morning. There will be no rapid or alarming loss of weight, but just a steady decrease of that flabby fat which is as unhealthy as it is unsightly. Kruschen is a scientific blend of six mineral salts found in the waters of those European spas that have been used by generations of oversout people to reduce weight.

NAIL POLISH

It frequently happens that if nail polish is kept for any length of time it becomes thick and difficult to use. This is due to evaporation and cannot be prevented unless the bottle is absolutely air-tight, which is seldom the case. The best thing to do is to add half an teaspoonful of methylated spirit, with the polish when it thickens. Shake the bottle well and add a little more if still weak. The polish will be easy to use again afterwards. If the polish bottle is small, only a few drops of the spirit should be used.

WASHING BEIGE ARTICLES

Beige-coloured table linen, silk stockings and other garments soon begin to look drab and washed out when they have been laundered several times. This may be avoided and the colour preserved successfully if these articles are treated in the following manner when they are washed for the first time. Immerse the article in cold water containing several tablespoonfuls of vinegar. Leave to soak for about an hour, and then wash them in the usual way, but adding one cup of vinegar to each large bowl of soapy washing water. Do not dry them in the sun.

REMOVING STAINS

Tea or cocoa stains can be removed from linen or cotton by soaking the articles in cold water, then boiling them in soapy water itr the usual way. For coffee stains plunge the material into boiling water as soon as possible. Water should never be applied to tar stains, as this fixes them permanently. Cover them with butter and leave for an hour or two; then rub the tar off with a clean rag. The grease can afterwards be removed by rubbing with gasoline and the articles can then be washed as usual. Black ink can be removed if the articles are soaked in boiled milk for some hours; ammonia and water will remove red ink. Paint should be rubbed with turpentine, then sponged with ammonia and water. Iron-mould can be removed by soaking the stained portion in a solution of salts of lemon and water, using a teaspoonful to a pint of water. This should be thoroughly rinsed out before the garment is washed in the usual way.

DUTCH STUFFED POTATOES

Thinly peel the raw potato, slice off its top and scoop out its middle. Add this middle portion to a little chopped tomato or tomato ketchup, some mushrooms, any sort of cooked cold meat, a tiny bit of fat, a slice of onion, and a sprinkling of pepper, salt, and the herb you fancy for flavouring. Chop these ingredients roughly, mix well, and put into the hollowed potato, replacing the little top slice as a lid. Put in a tin or earthenware dish and cook in a moderate oven for about an hour. For six fair-sized potatoes you will need two tomatoes, one large onion, two tablespoonfuls of breadcrumbs and one of meat.

Miss Florence Walker, of Bath, visited recently with Mr. and Mrs. Ray Carr.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Snider, of Odessa, visited with Mrs. Chas. Collins.

Mrs. Jackson and daughters, Muriel and Audrey, are spending the summer vacation at Mr. and Mrs. Homer Collins'.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Ferguson and daughters, Grace, Jean, and Dorothy, o Orillia, spent the week end holidays with the latter's brother, Mr. Robt. Locking, and Mrs. Locking.

No better protection against worms can be got than Miller's Worm Powders. They consume worms and render the stomach, and intestines untenable to them. They heal the surfaces that have become inflamed by the attacks of the parasites and serve to restore the strength of the child that has been undermined by the draughts that the worms have made upon it, and that their operation is altogether health-giving.

Recipes & Hints

It is the desire of "The Beaver" to devote this section of the paper, regularly, to the publication of Recipes and Household Hints. We would be pleased to receive recipes and suggestions from women's organizations. We would also like to receive and publish the contributors' names, as suggested. Contributions will be used as space permits.

(Send them in early in the week.)

ONE - EGG CAKE

(Mrs. Harry Stacey)

2 Cups sifted pastry or cake flour.
2 Teaspoons baking powder.
¼ Teaspoon salt.

Sift together three times.

Break one egg in standard measuring cup. Add enough soft butter to half fill the cup. Then add dry ingredients, beating vigorously for five minutes. Vanilla or spices may be added for flavouring. Bake in moderate oven ¾ of an hour. Ice with butter or boiled icing.

NOTE :— By omitting ¼ cup of flour and adding ¼ cup of cocoa, above recipe may be used as chocolate cake. For orange cake, flavour with grated orange rind instead of vanilla.)

CHIPPED BEEF WITH CHEESE SAUCE

(Mrs. Harry Stacey)

Make a white sauce by melting two tablespoons butter and mixing in two tablespoons of flour. Add two cups of milk and half a cup grated old cheese. Shred one half jar of chipped beef and saute in butter. Add to cheese sauce and serve on hot buttered toast.

Serves three.

(NOTE:— Do not add salt to white sauce. Chipped beef has enough.)

RHUBARB CORDIAL (Fresh)

(Lennox Women's Institute)

Two lbs. rhubarb.
Two quarts water.
Boil for five minutes.
Add one lb. sugar.
Juice and rind of one lemon.

PRESERVED RHUBARB CORDIAL

(Lennox Women's Institute)

Two bunches rhubarb (about 20 stalks).
One cup water.
Boil together five minutes.
One cup juice to two cups sugar.
Add juice of two lemons.
Bottle (using new corks.)

KITCHEN HINTS.

Use for Vinegar — When cooking old potatoes, add one tablespoon of vinegar to the water in which they are boiled and they will be as white as new potatoes. Vinegar added to any kind of stewing meat which seems tough (chicken, beef, etc.), will help to make it tender and the flavour cannot be detected. Add one tablespoon.

Parsley— Minced parsley is often required for various dishes, and when in a small quantity is handled it seems hardly worth while to use the chopping board and the mincer. If the oven is hot, parsley may quickly be prepared in the following way: Wash and dry as many sprigs as desired, place them on a plate or on a shee of white paper, and heat them in the oven for a minute or so. The parsley will then be brittle and can be rubbed into fine particles without any trouble.

GRASMERE GINGERBREAD

Take one pound of flour, and with this mix a teaspoonful of cream of tartar and an equal quantity of carbonate of soda. Cream together half a pound of butter and half a pound of Scotch moist sugar. To this add a tablespoonful of golden syrup and a pinch of salt. Mix with the flour a dessertspoonful of ground ginger and a little finely chopped candied peel. Next add the flour, etc., to the creamed sugar, butter and syrup. You will notice that the resulting mixture is dry and even crumbly. This is just as it should be. You do not add any liquid to it, but put the gingerbread into a well-buttred square or oblong tin, which should be only an inch or an inch and a half in depth. Leave the gingerbread looking rough and crumbly. It should not be flattened, but only pressed slightly into the tin with a wooden spoon. The baking should take place in a slow oven and should last for about an hour, or even a little longer. The gingerbread has a rough appearance on top, but is not at all crumbly when cooked, the bottom part of the mixture moulding itself to the shape of the tin. When cooked turn out on a wire tray and allow to cool for ten minutes or a quarter of an hour. At the end of this time you should cut the gingerbread into lengths on a baking board. If it is allowed to get cold it will prove too hard to cut.

Grasmere gingerbread is supposed to be hard and even rocky, but if it is desired to have it tender more syrup should be used in making it. Another way to soften it is to put it into a tin containing other kinds of cake for a day or two.

FRENCH STUFFED POTATOES

The potatoes are first peeled and boiled until nearly, but not quite, tender, and then allowed to cool, which can be done easily in the day or the night before they are to be used. Holding each potato in a floured hand, scoop out a substantial piece with an apple-corer without breaking the whole. The stuffing is composed of minced raw calves' liver, grated cheese, and two tablespoons of finely chopped parsley, pepper and salt and sage, which are pressed together into a firm melange. When filled, the potatoes are put into a fireproof dish, covered with butter-ed paper, and heated through in the oven. Then they are taken out and smothered in a white sauce that is enriched with grated cheese, and more cheese is sprinkled on top. Fifteen more minutes in the oven is enough to complete one of the most delicious courses possible.

A SAVOURY OMELET

Beat up two eggs with a tablespoonful of milk, and add salt, pepper a little grated onion, and a level teaspoonful of finely chopped parsley removed from the pan; if cooked for or mixed herbs. Enough butter to more than five minutes the eggs will cover the bottom of a small frying- go hard. It should be served immepan should then be heated until it diately.

LOCAL AND DISTRICT NEWS OF WOMEN'S ORGANIZATIONS

NEWBURGH W. I.

The June meeting of the Newburgh Women's Institute was held at the home of Mrs. John Wartman, on Thursday afternoon, June 28th.

The president, Mrs. Geo. Walker, took charge of the meeting which was opened in the usual manner. The roll call was answered by "Where I first met my husband." The minutes of the May meeting were read and approved. The committee appointed to look after the Municipal Hall grounds, reported having had the grounds cleaned and the grass cut, which makes a great improvement in the general appearance. It was decided that the Institute be responsible for keeping the grass cut on the lawn, during the summer.

Business discussion followed. One item of business was arranging for the exhibits for the Centreville Fair. After this business session, a short address had been dealt with, Mrs. Wilfred Wilson gave a splendid report of the District Annual held at Morrow. The thanks of the meeting were extended to Mrs. Wilson for her well prepared report.

A contest arranged by Miss Cameron was enjoyed by all, a dainty lunch was served by the hostess and her assistants. A vote of thanks was tendered the hostess and her helpers and the meeting was closed by all joining in singing the National anthem.

There will be no meetings during July and August.

SWITZERVILLE MISSION BAND

A very enjoyable afternoon was spent on July 6th, when thirty girls and boys of the "Busy Bee" Mission Band gathered at the home of Mrs. A. Parrott for their regular meeting. The president, Jean Amey, conducted the meeting, while Muriel Craig acted as secretary in the absence of Edna Wilson.

The meeting was opened by singing "This is my Father's World," followed by the Lord's Prayer in unison. The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved and during the business period, suggestions were given for making some money. After roll call a story of a missionary's experience in Trinidad was broadcasted by Eva Clark, the announcing being done by Ruth Paul. The president then gave the call to worship and all responded in song. The scripture reading from Acts 12: 3-7, was given by Muriel Craig and the memory verse, James 5: 16, was taught by Vivian Craig. All then joined in singing "The Emblem of our Mission Band" and Augusta Clark led in the Friendship Prayer.

The Watch Tower items, which were very interesting, were given as follows: Korea by Callie Lee; Africa by Arnold Clark, India by Maitland Clark, China by Vivian Craig. Another song "Our Chinese Cousins," was then sung, after which the offering was received by Verna Amey and Lois Paul.

Mrs. Wales then took charge of the study period, the story being about the lives of a Christian Chinese pastor.

After singing another hymn the meeting was closed with the Mizpah benediction.

Following the meeting an hour was spent in making picture scrap books and having games and races. The girls and boys were then invited to seat themselves in order on the lawn and the hostess with her helpers, served a delicious lunch. A hearty vote of thanks was given the hostess for her kind hospitality.

The August meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. V. Paul.

ODESSA WOMEN'S INSTITUTE

Odessa, July 5 — Mrs. J. B. Smith president of Odessa Institute, entertained the officers and members at home on Wednesday, July 4th. There was a splendid attendance and the meeting, which was of a patriotic nature, was very much enjoyed. After the singing of "O Canada" the business and correspondence was dealt with. The roll call was answered by "A prominent Canadian woman of to-day, and Canadian Industries." The motto for the month was very carefully prepared and given by Mrs. Roy Graham. To be a success, everyone should have a motto. Current events were given by Mrs. George Burnett, which also touched on national anniversaries. This was followed by community singing of the "Maple Leaf Forever."

A report of the morning session of the County Convention, which was held in Bath, was given by Mrs. Stanley Sproule. A solo sung by Mrs. R. Cairns and Mrs. E. Gilbert was very much enjoyed.

The report of the afternoon session was then given by Mrs. E. Gilbert. Both reports had been well prepared and brought in the main items of interest. The question box on household problems was started, and we hope there will be more questions to discuss at the next meeting. A few articles from the Home Magazine were given by Miss W. Clark.

A telegram contest followed, using the word "Canada" and the dainty prize, donated by the hostess, was won by Mrs. Bruce of Toronto.

After singing the National Anthem the hostess served a refreshing beverage. A vote of thanks was extended to the hostess, the delegates and the entertainers, and approved by all.

CAMDEN EAST W. M. S.

The June meeting of the Women's Missionary Society of the Presbyterian Church was held at the home of Mrs. Delbert Sexsmith. Miss Cameron was in charge. The meeting opened with a hymn, followed by prayer by the president. The scripture lesson was taken from the second chapter of Peter, and the roll call was answered by a Bible verse on "Thankfulness."

After the reading of the minutes the Supply Secretary, Mrs. D. Sexsmith, gave her report which showed many articles had been donated for the sale, which is to be sent to the Stungarians, the first of July.

Mrs. M. Riley exhibited some scrap books that are in the making, in readiness for the Christmas sale.

Following the missionary prayer, in unison, readings were given. "Getting out of trouble," by Mrs. Sexsmith; "Our Thanksgiving," by Mrs. Thompson. The chapter from the study book "Status of Women in India," was given by Mrs. A. Robinson. The president read an article from "Glad Tidings." Hymn 94 and the Mizpah benediction closed a very helpful meeting.

MOUNT PLEASANT PIONEER W. I.

PICNIC AT OAK LAKE

The July meeting of the Mount Pleasant Pioneer Women's Institute took the form of a picnic at Oak Lake, the members and their families met at Marysville, proceeded to Mr. Hearle's beautiful picnic ground and reached there about 11 o'clock.

The day was all that could be desired and the drive most interesting, the scenery picturesque because of its many tree-clad hills, especially the reforested hills west of Foxboro. Shortly after the arrival the tables were laid with the choicest and most appetizing foods and a very enjoyable dinner hour was spent. A surprise treat provided by a member of the party, contributed a great deal to the enjoyment of the dinner. The table was provided with an awning, which added much to the comfort of the guests.

The afternoon was devoted to the many diversions of this most attractive place. Both young and old enjoyed the swing, the see-saw, swimming, boating and slides. The men enjoyed pitching quoits and playing baseball and the ladies had the special treats provided for them by the Institute.

A short business meeting was held in the afternoon. It was agreed to have a lawn social at Mr. Milton Holder's on August 2nd. The committee in charge are making plans to have this one of the most enjoyable and successful events of the year. An invitation is to be extended to Maple Ridge Institute to be present on this occasion.

A very pleasing feature of the meeting was the registration of new members, with the prospect of others. Mrs. Hudson of Maple Ridge, and Mrs. Allenbrack expressed to Mrs. Harold Putman, the president, the appreciation of all the members of the very enjoyable time spent at the picnic. Regrets were expressed that owing to recent bereavements in certain families and sickness in others, that some members were unable to attend. The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Wilbert Wagar, on Thursday afternoon, with thirty-by singing a hymn and prayer by Mrs. H. Stafford.

BELLS

BY ALBERT E. HOPKINS
In Scientific American

Bells have a peculiar charm, like the organ, for most people. Formerly the best place to hear them was in the Low Countries, Belgium and Holland, but now New York City can boast the finest set of bells in the world. The Riverside Church, overlooking the Hudson River, has a carillon of 72 bells. Fifty-three bells were removed from the Park Avenue Baptist Church and 19 more have been recently cast in England. All are now in place and the formal dedication took place Thursday, May 31, 1931. This largest of carillons is a memorial to Laura Spelman Rockefeller, mother of John D. Rockefeller, Jr.

There is probably nothing which requires more patient skill and craftsmanship than the founding and finishing of a bell. Strange as it is, the small bell which is the most troublesome. Sometimes twelve casts may be made before a small bell with a true tone is secured. The large bells are made by exact formula and there is no guesswork about it. Bells do not improve with age, neither do they retrograde.

Unlike others in modern times the number of bells in bell towers was increased, the name remained the same, the word "carillon" from the Latin quadrillonem) to a considerable number, but the name remained the same. The word "carillon" we now understand a set of bells of the finest tone quality and tunings. Twenty-three bells are the minimum and 72 bells the maximum. The bells are usually sounded with the aid of "claviers" arranged somewhat after the manner of the keys of the console of an organ; they take the form of light wooden levers. These levers are attached by means of wires and cranks to the clappers which strike the bell on the inside surface at a point near its largest diameter. The travel of the clapper is about inch, which is sufficient to bring out the full volume of sound required for carillon playing, while still allowing the delicate touch necessary to enable a single operator to manipulate so many bells. Pedals are attached to the levers somewhat with the heavier bells, so that these can be played by either foot or hand. This enables the player to strike them more forcibly than would be possible with the hand levers, and it also allows him to execute the more intricate passages of music by leaving his hands free for the rapid manipulation of the levers connected to the smaller bells, playing the bass accompaniment with the feet. On a large carillon, mechanical devices assist the player; the so-called "deep-end," up to 24 bells, can also be played from the remote organ console. The player of a carillon is termed a "carillonneur" or "bell organist" and is a person of musical ability who has become expert in mastering the capabilities of the huge instrument.

In Croydon, England, is located the world-famous bell foundry of Gillett and Johnston. In Many of the artisans are descended from families of bell founders and their skill is not remarkable. Many of the moulding floor of the plant in the charming Surrey suburb of London, the first thing that draws attention is what looks like a huge bell of sand. This is one of the cores which is formed to the exact shape of the inside of the finished bell. Over this fits a cast-iron case, also bell-shaped, and the molten metal is poured between the exterior of the core and the interior of the case to form the bell.

The core is built up on a brick, bell-shaped foundation which is erected on an iron plate fitted with lugs for hoisting. Upon this foundation sand and loam are applied and scraped smooth with a revolving template called a "strickle" board which gives the proper contour of the inside of the bell. The core has to be dried several times in an oven. The sweeping and drying processes may take two or three days for a small bell or two or three weeks for a large one. If the hot metal should strike wet sand there would be an explosion and the casting would be ruined. The final operation on the core is to cover it with black lead (plumbago) to give smoothness to the casting.

The cast-iron case is solid for the small and medium sized bells, but built up in sections bolted together for the largest bells. The case is first turned mouth upwards and lined with a layer of damp sand, two or three inches thick; this in turn is covered with a layer of loam and is shaped with a revolving template or "strickle" board to give the exact contour of the outside of the bell. When completed to shape and before final drying, any inscription or ornamentation is provided for by stamping the figures or design into the still soft sand. This requires considerable skill to ensure clean cut, evenly spaced lettering in perfect alignment. The case is then dried and turning over, the case is fitted with trunnions extending beyond the loam which form pivots when suspended by two chains. The lining of the case also is dried in artificial ovens several times while being made, between each layer or coating of the mixture. Finally the inside face of the sand in the case also is coated with plumbago to give a smooth surface to the finished bell.

In the case of a large bell the core is lowered into a deep pit in the casting floor and the case is carefully lowered over it. The space between the core and the case is a perfect bell of air which will be displaced in a short time by the molten metal.

The case is securely bolted down to the cast-iron plate on which the core is formed, as the hydrostatic pressure of the molten metal, which is very great in the case of some of the mammoth bells, would otherwise be further particulars and conditions of sale, apply to —

"Casting day" is always interesting to visitors at the foundry. A number of bells are usually cast on the same day. The casting of a large bell can be accomplished in about ten minutes. The composition of the alloy varies somewhat, but great care is always taken to insure that only the finest metals are melted together. Expert supervision is given to the processes of preparation, melting, and casting.

In preparation for pouring, a cast-iron box is fitted to the top of the case and in this is formed a chamber to provide a "head" of metal, which will compress the casting down to the bell. A cone-shaped plug is arranged so that it can be raised or lowered to control the flow of metal as required during pouring. The bell metal, pure copper and tin, which has previously been heated for several hours in a reverbatory furnace, is tapped into the huge ladle, and the scum, which floats on the surface, is raked off. The foreman in charge takes the wheel of the tilting gearing of the ladle and turns it over till the metal begins to flow into the "head," the plug meanwhile holding the lever which controls the plug. When a good amount of metal has been poured into the head the plug is lifted, and while the metal is running in, the plug is kept in such a position that the clean metal from the bottom of the ladle runs into the mold faster than the metal is poured from the ladle, thus keeping all the scum and dross on the surface of the metal in the head. In 24 hours for a small bell and perhaps two weeks for a large bell, the metal is cool enough for the case to be lifted off, revealing for the first time the finished bell, which, after still further cooling, is lifted off the core plate, laid on its side, and the core broken away from the inside. While in this position and inscription or ornamentation is cleaned up with a sharp chisel to remove the hard burned, fine sand between the letters, figures, and the fins of metal at the joints of the moulds are "fettled" off.

The bell is then brought into the machine shop, is stopped to have drilled in the top the holes which will be used for bolting and hung pending. It then goes to a shed, where all dirt on the outside is cut away by a powerful sandblast, leaving the metal smooth and clean. From there it goes for the tuning room. Here it is placed, mouth upwards, on the revolving table of a large boring mill, to which it is firmly secured by bolts and clamps, and the metal is cut away from the inside gradually, not only to shape but to tune with all the other bells in the belfry, which are various harmonies and octave overtones are in accord. This, as may be imagined, is the work of highly skilled experts, involving much time and great care and patience.

The bell is then brought into the main erecting shop to join its brothers and sisters, or to await their arrival, and, in the case of a large bell or "bourdon" a massive steel framework is built, with trunnions working in roller bearings. It is then lifted into its steel swinging bell frame and secured by bolts and the wrought-iron clapper fitted inside. This clapper also is one of the three methods of striking this particular bell and is used when it is swung for chimes or tunes, especially for tolling on special occasions; it rings "half up," that is until the lip of the bell is vertical, and the two wheels are driven by electric motors and automatic gearing. It can also be sounded by a hammer that falls on the sound bow, or, for carillon action, by a counterbalanced clapper which is pulled rapidly against the outside of the bell.

If the bell is one of those which swings, it is suspended from the steel beams with a suitable insulating material between it and the steel, and is struck at the sound bow by an internal clapper, the strokes being given by hand pressure on one of the claviers operated by the carillonneur. The bells which are stationary can also be struck by means of outside hammers operated by gravity to give the "quarter" chimes.

The foundry is often required to correct defects in bells. When it is possible to correct to a reasonable extent the harmonies of each bell in relation to the others of the group into tune as a whole, this is done with the utmost care. In each case where it is found that the harmonies of an individual bell are too false for approximate correction, it is recast, using the same metal, unless there are historical or sentimental reasons against such procedure. On the other hand, a bell that is really bad, but worthy of retention in its present form owing to antiquity, is usually preserved in the church while a new one takes its place in the belfry.

The belfry of the Riverside Church, which is located in the 392 foot tower, is 40 feet wide and 63 feet high. The bells are disposed in three tiers or stories within this huge cavity and the carillonneur, Mr. Kimield Lefevere, (is at present) within a three-quarter circle in the middle section at the console. He is separated from the lowest 22 bells which run in weight from the bourdon" weighing 40,800 pounds, to a six-inch, 10-pound bell tuned to "C".

At present these bells are operated by four different sets of keys. By the carillonneur's console, giving delicacy of touch and expression; 2. Five to facilitate the bells are swung by automatic electric mechanism as a bell to sound or not sound certain occasions; 3. By electro-pneumatic mechanism and long-distance control from the church organ console; 4. By automatic hour striking and quarter chiming mechanism. The latter is the operation of the "bourdon" by a clock-controlled mechanism. Four quarter chimes are chimed on any number of bells up to four octaves by means of a revolving barrel with this powerful aid expression is not lost sight of and the carillonneur has three gradations of power; soft, medium, and loud blows.

There is a small room several floors below the belfry in the clock proper, a compact and neat piece of delicate mechanism, which is able to keep accurate time and at the right moment send an electrical impulse which will cause the hour and quarter chiming mechanism. Both of these units stop themselves when they have struck the proper number of blows on the bell. A program clock in the carillonneur's studio, ing both the hours and the quarters during the night. Each hour the clock mechanism must raise a 2,000 pound weight that keeps it going. The clock has no dials as the church has. Its purpose is simply to keep time in accordance with the style of architecture.

The total weight of the bells is over 100 tons and the steel work, including the clapper for the 22 ton "bourdon" weighs 4000 pounds and the clock hammer 1000 pounds.

The carillonneur has control of layout of the switch-gear and the wiring has been necessary, for on no account must the carillonneur's hands or clappers strike the bells while they are swinging, and it must be impossible for the operators to play the bells from different places, the mechanism being controlled by a master console, at the same time. A control panel is placed beside the carillonneur; when he wishes to play he presses one button only labeled "start" and this starts up the power and, by means of a motor-driven gear, and cuts off all controls from the outer consoles. After playing, the button "stop" is pressed and this stops the power plant, releases the quarter chimes, and connects the organ controls again. In both cases tell-tale lamps light up to show how the controls are set. The pressing of either button start motors which switch over 157 wires from one system to another.

On March 3rd, 1928, two thousand four hundred fingers from all parts of England gathered at Croydon to witness the casting of the great bell "Carillon" for the Riverside Church. Among the visitors were 41 ringing clergymen and 71 lady ringers. The bell's journey from its birthplace made an address and a great "bell concert" followed, which included hand bell ringing items by famous ringers.

Big Increase Shown In Goodyear Sales

Tire Sales in Half Year 64.8 Per Cent Greater Than in 1933

The number of tire units produced and sold by the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Company of Canada in the first six months of the present year shows an increase of 64.8 per cent over the same period of 1933, according to C. H. Carlisle, President, in a letter going to shareholders with dividend cheques for the second quarter of 1934. Other lines of rubber products manufactured by the Company also show a very much greater percentage of increase, and the Company has materially improved its position in the industry, states Mr. Carlisle.

During the first six months of 1934, dividends have been earned and surplus increased. Earned surplus as of June 30th, after deducting dividends for the period, amounted to $2,126,431, or $712,570 higher than a year ago. In addition, there is a capital surplus of $463,668. There are 500 shares less of preferred stock outstanding than at the same period a year ago, these having been redeemed by the Company. An additional net amount of $534,000 has been added to the reserve for plant depreciation, and other reserves have been built up by an additional $257,700, which is considerably in excess of requirements.

Summer Satisfaction

By BARBARA B. ROOKS

It seems as though summer meals are the most palatable and attractive and can be planned and prepared more easily than at any other season. Yet, how many times have you heard housewives lament about cooking during the hot weather? With an abundance of fruits and vegetables from which to choose and with the many ready-to-eat foods available, meal preparation should not be difficult.

Even in the summer, plan well-balanced meals, but avoid the use of too many concentrated and rich foods. Nature provides the ideal summer foods in fruits, vegetables, milk, eggs and white-grain cereals.

Do not go to the extremes of eating all cold foods, just because it is a hot day. No matter how warm the weather, a meal with at least one hot dish is usually welcome. This is true even for breakfast. Fresh fruit served with ready-to-eat cereals and cold rich milk or cream and a hot beverage make a refreshing and satisfying morning meal.

Luncheon or supper may be simplified by planning the meal around one hot dish, such as creamed vegetables, an egg or left-over cooked meats - Serve on toast or on toasted halves of whole-wheat biscuit. Vary by adding creamed mixture into a hot casserole. Top with buttered corn flakes and serve at once. The corn flakes are toasted and crisp so that the mixture need not be browned in the oven. A green salad or fruit dessert, bran muffins or whole-wheat bread, and a beverage will complete this meal.

Dinner specials which we all like have been chosen in making up the following menu :—

Wake up your Liver Bile
—Without Calomel

Your liver's a wonderful organ, but it certainly can get your digestive and eliminative system out of order when it fails to pour its daily two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels. If you don't you get sick and feel miserable. Constipation, sick headaches, acid stomach, sallow skin, gas, dizziness, coated tongue, bad breath and a feeling of "all-gone" are usually signs that you need a good cleansing of bile. Carter's Little Liver Pills will soon bring back the natural bile flow and make you feel like a new person. Don't take calomel. They're purely vegetable. Safe. Sure. Ask for them by name. THE NIGHT-CAP

Out of a large experience of medicine and war, a correspondent has just advised us to believe that our grandfathers "knowed something," too, when they were careful to wear nightcaps. His thesis is that the modern cult of fresh air has become a fanaticism, and that to keep the body warm with quilt and hot-water bottle, leaving "head and neck icy cold," is to defy the laws of reason. We confess that we are impressed by the argument for nightcaps. It is an axiom that no habit or fashion ever becomes general and endures unless some advantage is gained by it. This is not to say that all the persistent fashions have been reasonable and justified, but that they were not merely fantastic — that they did provide for a felt want. Now the night-cap was worn through many centuries by all Europe. Chaucer knew all about it, and Dickens two years ago. When the gentleman in the Merchant's Tale sits up in bed, he has his night-cap on. Sir Roswell remarked how queer Johnson looked "with his little black wig on the top of his head instead of a night-cap." But the most famous of nightcaps is that which Mr. Pickwick wore in the adventure at the Great White Horse. We are informed that it had a tassel, which seems to have been usual, and strings, which were rather a matter of individual taste. Mr. Pickwick must have looked very well in it. Whether the middle-aged lady looked equally well when she put that "muslin night-cap with a small pilated border" over her yellow curl papers, it would be wrong to speculate. Mr. Pickwick was the more embarrassed of the two, which, I am sure, requires nothing. "I am almost ready to sink, Ma'am, beneath the confusion of addressing a lady in my night-cap," were the lady hastily snatched off her's, but I can't get it off, Ma'am ;here Mr. Pickwick gave it a tremendous tug in proof of the statement.".

But soon after that memorable mishap night-caps went out. In vain Macaulay assured the mid-Victorian that the most complete distinction he knew of between the two kinds of sleep, the one with your nightcap, the other without it." The case was lost. A generation was rising which thought night-caps as ridiculous as the bed-curtains into which Mr. Pickwick in the picture has retired. And no doubt Col. Bevor is right in his diagnosis that the cult of fresh air is the destroying force. But when I reverence youth, which all its ancestors were a frowsty folk, it has not done them justice. Mr. Pickwick, at any rate, with his window at night and drew the bedcurtains, but it is certain that his room was much chillier and much draughtier than those in our houses. Our modern love of fresh air is inspired by rooms which are scientifically heated. That our bare heads are the colder (without it." The case was lost. —Old Reliable Minard's

When horses come in to stable with wire cuts or saddle boils, or cows have caked udder, the thing to do is get the Minard's bottle at once, as Mr. Dowd of Glenboro, Manitoba, knows. He writes:

A family doctor prescribed Minard's Liniment over 50 years ago. Still invaluable to every stable and every house. 83

New Government Will Soon Issue Beer Regulations

Will Not Permit Liquor Advertisements

Proclamation of the Henry Government's legislation providing for freer beer and wine sale was authorized on Thursday, July 12th, by Order-in-Council. Instructions were issued to Mr. Edmond G. Odette, the new one-man commission in charge of liquor operations, to prepare his regulations for administering "loosened" law. While no date has been set for the inauguration of the sale of beer and wine, it is generally accepted that July 25th may be the time.

First of all Mr. Odette must present to the cabinet a draft of his rules and regulations and receive the ministers' approval. Licenses will then be issued to the places of business to be allowed to sell.

Restaurants Not to Get Licenses

One of the most persistent rumors in connection with the expected regulations was that licenses would only be issued to standard hotels and hotel restaurants. It has since definitely been announced that beer and wine licenses will not be issued to restaurants. They will be given only to standard hotels of good standing in trains and boats. It is understood, expressed against the privilege of liquor advertising in newspapers. The law, prohibiting liquor advertising, has been in force for seven years. Some of the cabinet members are known to be in favor of allowing liquor advertising in the papers. Mr. Odette, himself, the Liquor Commissioner, is said to be in favor of the privilege. However, the new Premier, Mr. Hepburn, has left no doubt in the minds of the public as to his stand on the question. He has said:

"Personally, I am opposed to liquor advertising in Ontario newspapers and other publications. I want to be fair to the temperance people of this province. To me it is such an anomaly to try to teach temperance, upon which we are all agreed, and at the same time allow liquor advertising. I say this in fairness to the liquor interests, as well. If liquor advertising were allowed and drinking [illegible] were banned, there would be a [illegible] demand for prohibition on all sides."

The question of liquor advertising will likely be dealt with and decided on in the near future, along with other details covering the ew legislation.

Federal Assistance For Relief Extended To Aug. 15

Some weeks ago the Federal Government advised the Provincial Governments that direct relief assistance would end on June 15th. On July 13th announcement was made that relief would be given until August 15th. But it was reduced from the present 10 1/2 per cent to 25%, and a Dominion - Provincial Conference has been called for July 30th, when the matter of relief for the future will be discussed.

The announcement of this move was made by the acting - Premier Sir George Perley, after a meeting of the Cabinet Council.

By the arrangement in existence up-do-date, Province, Dominion and Municipalities each pay one-third of relief costs.

In Napanee, during June, relief amounted to $124.05 and was extended to eight families, made up of 21 individuals.

Napanee Relatives Mourn Passing of Thomas Sampson

Brother of Miss Mary Sampson and Late George Sampson

(Isabella Co. Times News)

Mount Pleasant, Michigan

Thomas Sampson, dean of the county board of supervisors, veteran of the Isabella Democratic party and long its leader, businessman and a beloved citizen here for more than a half century, died quietly in his sleep Saturday night. He was 80 years old.

Death followed an active career in business and political life until within a few weeks of his passing. About a month ago he was forced to give up his strenuous activities and from that time continued to fail slowly.

Funeral services were held from the home on East Broadway, Thursday afternoon. The court house and city offices were closed in a final tribute of respect and honor of the grand old veteran of the city and county, who in his years of activity in behalf of others had won him a place in the hearts of countless citizens, young and old.

Came Here in 1892

Born in Canada, February 1, 1854, Tom came to Mt. Pleasant, 62 years ago last March. He spent his first years here working in the lumber camps and woods and later established one of the first livery stables of the county seat. Later he was engaged in the lumbering busines and the contracting business. In more recent years he had served as administrator for many estates.

Long Chairman

For the past 10 years, Mr. Sampson had served as chairman of th Isabella County Democratic committee and for more than 20 years he had been an active and influential member of the committee.

Not only from the standpoint of age but in years of service, Mr. Sampson was the dean of the board of supervisors. For 13 years he served as the city supervisor from the second ward and for the past 10 years he has served on the board as city assessor. No other member on the board had sat as long.

Twice Sheriff

For two terms Mr. Sampson served as sheriff of Isabella county. First he was first elected in 1911 serving a two-year term and again in 1915 he was elected for a two-year term.

Besides serving as city assessor for 14 years, an office which he held at the time of his death, and sheriff for four years, Mr. Sampson served as city treasurer in the years 1892 and 1893.

Mr. Sampson enjoyed exceptional health for a man of his years. A slight defect in his hearing was virtually the only sign of advancing years for him.

Mr. Sampson was married in December, 1883, to Miss Clara Vanblaricom. Five children were born to them, Laura, of Cleveland, Bessie of Mount Pleasant, Anna (Mrs. Walter Warner, postmistress), of Mt. Pleasant, Marion (Mrs. Wilson) living in Illinois. All survive their father with the widow, Mrs. Clara Sampson.

Mr. Sampson was a member of the Masonic lodge here for more than a half century.

Hydro Commission To Effect Economy

Discuss Several of the Officials

The recently appointed Hydro chairman, T. Stewart Lyon, began his term of office by inaugurating measures of economy, as fulfilment of pre-election promises of the Hepburn Government.

After seven of 27 years with the Hydro, Chief Engineer F. A. Gaby was retired, as was also I. B. Lucas, the General Solicitor. In addition notice was served of the termination of contracts of 46 other Hydro officials, who receive salaries of $5,000 or over per year. In the case of the latter officials, the Commission says: "You may remain in the employ of the Commission after the termination of said agreement in accordance with this notice from day to day in the performance of your present duties, at such salary and under such conditions as may hereafter be determined by the board in its discretion or until further notice, if you so desire."

Work was also stopped on the $1,400,000, seventeen story head office building, in course of construction near the old Hydro building on University Avenue, in Toronto.

The most important officials affected by the termination of contract, are men who have been in the Hydro service for many years.

Later in the week, after the original order was given to discontinue work o nthe Hydro building, the order was rescinded and work commenced again. It was thought that stopping the work would cause hardship to the several hundred men engaged on the building.

Council Dealt With Important Matters At Monday Session

Representing Auditors at the Meeting

On Monday evening, at 7:30, the Council met in regular session at the Council Chamber. Mayor Tustin presided and the following members attended : Reeve Hughson, Councillors Luffman, Exley, Morden and Cowling.

After the reading and confirmation of the minutes of the previous meeting, Mr. Holland, auditor of Hudson & Co., was heard by the Council. Mr. Pettit represented the firm of auditors from Toronto, who conducted the audit of the town's books. He came down to meet the members of the School Board with reference to some details in the report and attended a meeting with members of the Board and the Finance Committee of the Town Council, during the afternoon. Members of the Council asked Mr. Pettit for explanations concerning some points in the report.

Mr. Pettit before leaving re-iterated his statement, made in the report, that the town is in a fortunate position financially, and was to be congratulated in having capable and efficient officials handling its business.

The Clerk read a communication from the County Clerk, containing an agreement to be signed concerning the building of Dairy Avenue. The matter was laid on the table for later consideration.

J. G. Fennell Appointed Tax Collector

A communication was received from Mr. J. G. Fennell, asking to be appointed tax collector at a salary of $25.00 per month. A by-law was introduced and given its several readings and passed, by which Mr. Fennell was again appointed tax collector at an annual salary of $250.00.

The agreement forwarded by the County, concerning the building of Dairy Avenue, was brought up for consideration. The Town Council was asked by the County to enter into a agreement with the County, whereby Dairy Avenue would be built at an estimated cost of not more than $3,000. The work was to be done as a relief project and would be carried out if the town would pay to the 1934 subsidy for connecting links and designated roads, from the County. The rate of pay for men is to be 20c per hour and 40c per hour for man and team, the maximum number of days to be eight hours.

Reeve Hughson objected to the terms of the agreement on the ground that it did not live up to the agreement of Mr. Muir, the Highway Engineer, that the road would be built at a cost of about $2,000 and that it would be built at no cost to the Town.

Large Attendance at St. Patrick's Supper

Excellent Entertainment Provided

Citizens of both town and country turned out in large numbers on Wednesday evening for the chicken supper and entertainment, held under the auspices of St. Patrick's Roman Catholic Church, in the basement.

The spacious grounds around the manse made an ideal place for the event. Despite rather threatening weather conditions during the early part of the day, the weather was ideal, which contributed largely to the success of the occasion, as every part of the entertainment, including the dinner was held out-of-doors.

The tables were spread at the rear of the manse. They presented a most attractive and appetising appearance. decorated with lovely bouquets of flowers and laden with delicious food The first guests were served at six o'clock and late comers were being waited on at nearly ten o'clock. Careful arrangements were made for the seating of the many that the evening guest was given splendid attention. During dinner music was supplied by the Napanee Boys' Band.

Following the dinner, those who were present repaired to the lawn where booths were erected and games of different sorts were played. Rings, as usual, was played by a great many. A dance platform was arranged at one side of the grounds and an orchestra played for those who wished to dance.

It is estimated that fully 600 were served dinner and during the evening, many others were present to enjoy the entertainment.

The arrangements were under the direction of Father Healey, assisted to the Rector, Monsignor MacDonald. The success of the occasion reflects the organizing ability and popularity of Father Healey.

3000 County People Attend Celebration On July Twelfth

Gathering Held at Varty Lake

The victory of King William at the Battle of the Boyne was fittingly remembered last Thursday, when over three thousand Orangemen and their friends gathered together on the beautiful grounds, at Varty Lake. It was a typical Twelfth of July day, rain in the morning and plenty of sunshine and heat the remainder of the day.

At eleven o'clock the celebration was set in motion with one of the main features of every Twelfth of July celebration, the parade. Under the direction of the County Marshall, Brother Botting of Roblin, the lodges were lined un and to the strains of the music of the Ladies' Fife and Drum Band of Kingston, and the Odessa Brass Band, the parade was on. The following L. O. L. lodges were represented in the march : Tamworth, Napanee, Bay View, Adolphustown, Enterprise, Croydon, Roblin, Centreville, Camden East, Lime Lake, Forest Mills, Selby, Marlbank, Newburgh, Colebrook, Moscow, Sydenham and Petworth. Also the following L. O. L. A. lodges: Harrowsmith, Croydon, Enterprise, Centreville and Marlbank. With beautiful banners and many local fife and drum bands, the grand parade provevded ever the finest of merit in the County District Officers leading the procession.

Afternoon Programme

At 1:30 p.m. the second feature of every Orange celebration was staged on the platform, situated in a beautiful grove of trees. It was the hour when public speakers were given the opportunity to relate the history of the Order and challenge members of to a more loyal support of this Protestant organization. Paul W. M. Brother Cyrus Edzar acted as chairman, in his usual good manner. The Colebrook lodge, through its W. M. Brother Kenneth Freeman, extended a welcome to the visiting brethren.

Stirring addresses were given by Rev. Canon Spencer of Camden East, Rev. Aylsworth Bell of U. S. A., Mr. Murray Purcell,— as the oldest Orangeman present was also called upon to make a few remarks.

During the programme, selections were given by the "Kingston Ladies' Fife and Drum Band and the Odessa Brass Band.

Crowds Watch Baseball Game

At the close of the programme the usual baseball game was staged between Sydenham and Tamworth, a game which was watched with keen interest by the grounds gathered.

During the noon hour and the afternoon, the booths under the direction of the Colebrook Lodge, did a flourishing business. It was reported that more than two gallons of ice cream were consumed, and the refreshment booth was the busiest place on the grounds, along with the old-fashioned pump.

A great deal of credit for the success of the picnic, perhaps the largest and best Orange celebration in this county must be given to the Colebrook lodge and those who not only worked so hard on the day of celebration, but for weeks and months before meeting.

It was a great day for Orangemen in Lennox and Addington and another step forward in the work of the Orange Association.

Both the boys and the leaders are hoping to make the camp an annual affair.

Enterprise Woman Narrowly Escaped Serious Injuries

Mrs. Susan Jackson, of Enterprise, on Thursday last, met with a painful accident, which might have had much more serious results.

Early in the morning, Mrs. Jackson was aroused by an electric storm. She lighted a coal oil lamp and started down stairs from her bedroom. Through a mistake she miscalculated the number of steps and fell two steps to the floor. In her fall she grasped her ankle and severely injured her back. The oil from the lamp was scattered over the floor and became ignited.

The quick action of Claude Jackson, a boarder in the home, who was aroused by the noise of Mrs. Jackson's fall, prevented Mrs. Jackson from being badly burned.

Mrs. Jackson will be confined to bed for some time as a result of the accident.

THE NEW GOVERNMENT

It is difficult to estimate the strength of the Government which was sworn in at Toronto, last week. The various members of it have had little experience in administering the affairs of state. Individually they are men who have made a success of their own business, but whether or not they can do collectively, what a success of governing a Province, remains to be seen. That they will work diligently and conscientiously, no one will doubt. They have an opportunity which few governments in Ontario have ever had. They have gone into office with an overwhelming popular vote. They have no past sins to atone for, no errors or mistakes to gloss over or explain away. They have a free hand. An expectant people of all shades of political opinion will withold judgment, eager to encourage them in every effort towards economy and efficiency.

It is reassuring to know that the Province is not to be deluged with beer. There are difficulties enough in the pathway of the youth without precipitating a new danger in indiscriminate distribution of intoxicating beverages. Of course, the new Government had to fulfil its pledges in this connection, but we are still of the opinion that were an unbiased expression on the sale of liquor sought through a plebiscite the result would be quite different than when the issue was confused with politics. Now that the issue is definitely out of politics, the temperance forces will feel free, once more to pursue their policy of education and persuasion.

It is unfortunate that so many of the really responsible positions in the Province have become political appointments, subject to the changing winds of public opinion. The Hydro Electric Power Commission and the Liquor Control Board should be independent, non-political organizations. If it becomes the custom for every new government to change, at once, the personnel of these great administrative commissions, it is difficult to see how they can ever be taken, efficiently, out of politics. The very best men available should be found for these positions and should be allowed to retain them, except for some inefficiency or other just cause. Perhaps, our proximity to a great democracy to the south, where a change in administration means, as well, a change in most government positions, to some extent affects our mental attitude to the situation here. But in this connection, as well as in some others, it might be better to follow the British tradition.

The new Government has made a good impression by cutting salaries. But the debt of a great province is incurred in ways that are not quite so open to the public view. The real test will come when contracts have to be let and when friends of the administration crowd for favors. It takes a lot of courage, under those circumstances, to say, no. But a fearless, honest and economical administration which can do that over a period of years, will earn the confidence and support of the general mass of the people.

STRIKES AND LIVING CONDITIONS

The United States is experiencing a number of serious labor troubles. A strike of longshoremen in San Francisco, which, at first seemed a minor dispute, has rapidly developed into a menacing situation. The longshoremen have been joined by seventy other Unions, which treaten a complete tie-up of the life of the city. The arbitration board appointed by the Roosevelt Administration has been unable to bring the opposing parties together. Perhaps the most serious aspect of the situation developed when truckers and transport workers joined the strikers and thereby threatened to disrupt the whole distribution of food in the city.

At the same time about six thousand truck drivers and their wives are preparing for a similar strike in Minneapolis; and in South Bend, Indiana ,the delivery of milk to 120,000 people is threatened by the walk-out of milk car drivers and inside employes, which took place on Friday.

The strike, as a means of receiving economic justice by the workers, has long been recognized as a legitimate instrument in their hands. Certain generally accepted rules of conducting a strike have been worked out. But it is only of late years that the idea of a general strike has been conceived. Both Great Britain and Canada have had experience with general strikes and know the danger they are to the life of the nation. In San Francisco, at least, the general strike idea is gaining ground, and may seriously threaten the peace of the whole West, and probably farther.

These strikes are evidence of the struggle which is taking place in the adjustment of life in our day. In the States, the N. R. A. codes and the policy of the present administration increased work and made for a more equitable distribution of wealth. On the other hand, by deflating the dollar, the attempt was made to raise prices and so stimulate the prosperity of the nation. The result, however, has been that the increase in prices which was to follow the deflating of the dollar has been long in coming. Now, within the past few weeks, prices of all foodstuffs have begun to rise rapidly. The unfortunate thing is that this rise is taking place at a time when there is a personal slacking-up of business, especially in the steel and motor car business. This is having a bad effect on the mind of the worker who was beginning to feel that the situation was somewhat improving. But now, when he is being laid-off or his hours of labor curtailed, he sees prices soaring and fears that, once more, the dice are loaded against him.

All this has a tendency to increase the impatience with conditions and with the men who control power and wealth. The present situation has some menacing aspects and will take careful handling if it to be confined to local areas.

PROPAGANDA AND ART

The Congressional Committee, sitting in New York City, is unearthing some very interesting and very startling information. They have discovered that Ivy Lee, "Public Relations Counsel," who is retained by an industrial organization in Germany, at a fee of $25,000 is in fact seeking to create a favorable impression in the United States towards the present Nazi Regime in Germany. While Mr. Lee carries on his writing and influence on this side of the water, his son is in Berlin, in contact with conditions there. Mr. Lee, on the stand, told that he had made several suggestions to the German Government with respect to policies that would have a favourable impression on American opinion.

Not since the revelations that Shearer was retained by the United States Steel Corporation to influence public opinion at the Disarmament Conference in 1927, has there been so much interest in an agent of propaganda. In both these instances, the men acted as private individuals for private firms, but in each, were the nations indirectly concerned.

This art of propaganda has been greatly developed during this generation. It received its greatest impetus during the World War, when expert psychologists and writers were freely engaged to create and foster a public opinion in favor of one side or the other. Those who have read some of the modern exposures of the system adapted, know full well the part which was played by propaganda during the great struggle. It was not to be supposed that a weapon so effective, in times of war, would be abandoned in times of peace. And a useful field for it was discovered in the realm of advertising, where new wants were created and new desires stimulated. This is a world which is constantly providing new goods for a legitimate use of the art. But every now and then, light is let in on the activities of men who are engaged in creating an atmosphere for war so as to increase the sale of armaments, or, as in the case of Lee, are the under-cover agents for a foreign power.

Bernard Shaw is credited with the suggestion that every college should have a course of anti-propaganda, so that the graduate would be able to understand the bombardment of all the modern methods of propaganda. This is, of course, an exaggerated way of saying that men-and women should be constantly on their guard as to the source of the rumors they hear. A great many people unconsciously attribute an element of truth to anything which they see in print. But, of course, to arrive at just and unbiased judgments on what is taking place in the world, the source of our information must be carefully scrutinized. Signed articles, and news gathered through recognized agencies along with opinions expressed by responsible newspapers, are perhaps after all, the best guarantee against propaganda of one sort and another.

TO EDUCATE, NOT INSTRUCT, THE IDEAL

Some time ago Superintendent Fetterly gave an address to the members of his staff in which he said the time was ripe for a change in educational ideals and methods, an extended report of his address appearing in The Canadian of January 15th. A few days later Dr. Bishop gave an address to the Rotary Club in Belleville, which was very similar in general purport. This looked like a pleasing and hopeful coincidence. Then a short time afterwards, Dr. Fyfe, Principal of Queen's University, Kingston, was the guest speaker at the "Get-Together Banquet" in Belleville, and expressed opinions that were almost identical. This threefold identity of thought and outlook passes the bounds of mere coincidence, and is indicative of the new constructive spirit that is animating thoughtful educationists, presaging the beginning of a new era in pedagogic methods and educational ideals.

The best school, Dr. Fyfe said, is the school that has the best teacher, and the best teacher is one that does the least possible teaching. There is, he says, too much teaching and too little left to the student to find out for himself. "Forcible feeding in school," he declared, "is as painful and unsatisfactory as the forcible feeding of suffragettes in English jails, many years ago. A good school is one where scholars may develop gradually and assimilate what is just before them. A good teacher, he said, "is the one who stimulates the maximum of interest in his pupils." He knew of a teacher who said: "I never taught anybody anything." But he had obtained the most favorable results. He simply directed and advised but kept himself in the background as far as possible, leaving the pupils to find out things for themselves, which, under proper stimulation, they were keen to do. "It is an essential aim of every school to have the pupils learn how to learn." The same ideal should dominate in the university. The ideal professor was one who could arouse the interest of the students and instead of trying to lecture the hours away, would say: "Come along and work with me." How vastly better this is than for students to sit in the lecture room, swallow the food prepared for them by the professor, and at the end of the session bring it all undigested, up again. —Editorial in "The Canadian."

THE COLLECTIVE SYSTEM FOR PEACE

There are still some people who believe that the earth is flat; but they are not so numerous nor so influential as they were in the days of Galileo There even may be a few who believe that the best protection against a quarrel, actual or potential, is a revolver in the hip-pocket; but, here again, not so many. Yet millions of intelligent people today can still assert similar absurdities—still refuse to accept a collective peace system, refuse to believe that the safest (and ultimately the only) national defence is the pooling of national power under the rule of law, propositions all of them, at least, as self-evident as that the earth goes round the sun.—Manchester Guardian.

THE COMPLETEST ANGLER

(A "five weeks' course in practical angling" has been added to the curriculum of Stanford University, U.S.A.)

Now do not take the ancient line
That humour oft abets,
But let the light of learning shine
On unexpected spots.
In times gone past you must have heard
Of things like Senior Wranglers;
If such degrees were once conferred,
Well, why not Elder Anglers.

So if upon some river bank
You see a sombre wight
Who sits with vacant stare and blank
And angles for a bite,
Avoid the ancient jesting touch;
Such attitudes labor and learning
Remember—he may be a much
More learned man than you are.

He may have studied long and hard,
And laboured to collect
Initials you should now regard
With infinite respect;
He may look dull, he may seem deaf,
Be waiting for or wishing,
But think—he's p'raps a full B.P.,
Or Bachelor of Fishing!

BAA, BAA, BANDIT

(It is stated that sheep of improved breeds are to be imported into Manitoba as a new idea of "providing alternative employment for bandits" by encouraging sheep-raising on scientific lines.)

The bandit had a little lamb
(In fact, a flock or crew),
And when he engineered a slam
The lamb was in it, too.
Wherever the bandit often cursed—
He could not terrorise,
Being, as you might say, immersed,
A mutton to his eyes.

The bandit had a little lamb.
It went with him to dule;
In any hold-up, raid or jam,
It played the bleating fool;
Which cramped the bandit's form no end—
It spoiled his old eclat
When, if he cried "Handsup!" the lamb
Behind him echoed "Baa!"

Besides, the lamb was mild and meek
Much given to alarms;
The bandit saw the light;
His former way of life was wrong
And needed putting right.

So, bit by bit, each lawless band
From infamy desists;
The only crooks in all the land
Were those in shepherd's fists.
The world, tremendously amused,
Could set, at virtue's feast,
Against the wild and woolly West
A wild and woollier East.

SPARE PARTS

Russian doctors, it is reported, have created a "gangrene hospital" which functioned successfully whilst a patient's defective organ was removed for treatment. If it be true (and in these days who will dare to doubt it?) it looks ominously like the dawn of yet another New Era. It has long been recognized that the protracted business of killing ill and getting well again is a shocking waste of time, which cannot be allowed to go on much longer in this age of chemical.

After the heart the construction of other artificial organs, perhaps even brains of moderate power, should present little difficulty. We shall then be able to introduce into our Halls of Healing the slick efficiency of the well-contented garage. There will be proper publicity, of of course.

The X-Service Infirmary for Overhauls!
Every type of spare part in stock.
Let us tune up your heart.
Free guarantee 50 per cent increase in affection. No waiting.

Nor will that be the end of it. The medical mechanics will not be satisfied with a mere makeshift job; they are sure to set about showing poor old Mother Nature just how it ought to be done. Patients will start saying, "Look here, I shouldn't bother any more about my old stomach. This one works ever so much better. I'm having Overload Warning Service in a priceless boon. How much ?" Others will tell their less fortunate friends: "Look here, I'll take Billy Blinks and Bothermore cerebellum Service next week. Nothing to touch it for performance."

And how splendid if the experts design an aluminium appendix that actually does something apart from contracting appendicitis!—Miscellany

AT TOO CLOSE QUARTERS

A warning to the eminent is suggested by a message from Japan; the manager of one of the largest bookshops in that country says that the sales of books by certain European authors have declined after a visit by the authors in question to Japan. "Famous people," he reports, "such as Bernard Shaw, Bertrand Russell, and Dr. Einstein, have had some of their popularity with the Japanese public adversely affected by visiting the country. In other words, they should be heard (or read) and not seen—which is in fact contradiction to some theories about the art of salesmanship, as applied to literature both here and in the United States. It is commonly assumed that, having looked at a celebrity, or better still, having been lectured by him, an audience is far more eager to buy his books—but evidently the trick does not work that way in Japan. Perhaps eminent visitors should have made themselves up as natives of the country; their appearance might then have inspired more confidence. The photographs have been interesting to see an Oriental edition of Mr. Shaw.

In any event, it is quite possible that the Western passion for inspecting your favourite author is a mistake. Actors are made to be looked at; authors meant to be read. The written word will not seem any wiser because you have inspected its writer. And it is a melancholy fact that some authors are nothing like so nice as their books.

A PEACE QUESTIONNAIRE

Nothing could be more important than that, firstly, the Government should ascertain how foreign countries should realise how strongly public opinion here favours disarmament and strengthening of the League of Nations. Neither by-elections nor General Elections give any sufficient evidence about an issue such as this, which will never be more than one among many issues. The League of Nations Union, therefore, will be doing an exceedingly useful piece of work in organising a house-to-house inquiry in all the constituencies, putting to each elector, as Lord Cecil explained last week, five specific questions to be answered. 8ths voluntary referendum, organised on the largest scale, will give an excellent opportunity of showing what proportion of the nation is prepared that this country should join in any collective action to prevent war. The results will show whether those who have faith in collective action against the League of Nations are really representative Britons. — The Spectator, London, Eng.

INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON, JULY 22ND, 1934

I KINGS, 19: 9-21.

"ELIJAH HEARS GOD'S VOICE"

When the Israelites moved into Canaan from the desert, they found a well established religion. Scattered throughout the country were local shrines erected usually in some grove or on some hummock of ground. In each of these sacred places had its own local deity, or, baal. The worship of this baal was associated with the forces of nature. It was a bright, fascinating nature-worship.

To the Hebrews, inured to the hardships of the desert, trained in a religion of exacting moral demands, this nature worship was anathema. The struggle for the conquest of Canaan, which went on with varying success for over three hundred years, was in one sense, a struggle of the Hebrew puritanic worship with the baal worship of the original inhabitants.

Today's lesson takes us into the heart of that struggle. Championing the cause of Jehovah against the baals was Elijah. On the other side was the Queen Jezebel, leading the fight for retention of the worship of baal. It was a hard-fought fight. The Queen was a strong-minded and determined woman. She was backed by the entrenched customs and by the prestige which her royal position gave her. Elijah was a man of conviction, initiative, grim determination and great faith.

The conflict had come to a head in a great test of strength, in which the prophet Jehovah had utterly routed the prophets of baal. Following this, the Queen had threatened the life of the prophet, who immediately skipped the country and went into voluntary seclusion. While hiding in the cave, he heard a voice telling him to stand upon the mount, and as he stood there, a strong wind rent the mountains, but God was not in the wind; this was followed by an earthquake, and God was not in the earthquake; after the earthquake a fire, but God was not in the fire. Then followed a still, small voice and God was in the voice.

The voice asked what Elijah was doing. He explained that he was the only follower of the true God, left, and that his life was in jeopardy. He is gently rebuked as the voice informs him that there are still 7,000 in the land who have not bowed the knee to baal.

(1) God has different ways of speaking to us. He speaks to us through nature, through history, through social movements, through the inner life of the spirit and conscience. He does not speak to all in the same way. The duty of the Christian is to hear God in the accents which he is able to understand, and to live in obedience to the message he hears.

(2) Elijah thought that he was the only one left who worshipped the true God. He was informed that there were seven thousand who had not bowed the knee to baal. So often men and women who are engaged in Christian work or are seeking to live the Christian life, are under the impression that they are alone in the struggle. There are always more, however, than we count on. There are always those who are making the same struggle we are making, fighting the same battles, and interested in the same things. It is well to take account of the forces of good which, in days or seeming carelessness and laxity, are on the side of goodness and decency, and God.

It is sometimes well for us to encourage ourselves by a fair and just estimate of our resources and spiritual associates. In the United States, within the last twelve years, only one out of every three thousand two hundred churches has had to close, for one reason and another; while one out of every six banks has failed in that same time.

There are still 7,000 who have not bowed the knee to baal.

CRAWLING ABOUT WITH LUMBAGO

Here is some useful information for anyone troubled with that unbearable complaint, lumbago. A woman writes:—

"For years I suffered from lumbago. During wet weather, I could only turn in bed with great effort and pain. I was so stiff and ached so much. Two years ago I had both lumbago and sciatica, and crawled about for a fortnight, feeling very sorry for myself and looking 103 instead of 39. Someone said, "Try Kruschen Salts," so I did, and I have taken them ever since, with the result that I hardly ever get a twinge of lumbago, these days."—(Mrs.) P. P. C.

Why is it that Kruschen is so effective in keeping lumbago at bay? Simply because it goes right down to the root of the trouble and removes the cause, which is an impure bloodstream. The six salts in Kruschen keep the bloodstream pure and vigorous by promoting a clockwork regularity of all the organs of elimination.

Marketing Legislation Development

In seeking an explanation of the development of present legislation to regulate marketing, ten factors have to be considered, said Dr. J. F. Booth, Commissioner, Economics Branch, Dominion Department of Agriculture, in an address to the annual convention of the Canadian Society of Technical Agriculturists. The first factor has to do with the increase in production and competition for markets, and the second with national policies and international trade. This increase in production and productive capacity has made marketing progressively more difficult for several decades, and has resulted in various measures to restrain marketing and to increase outlets for products. In this development governments have played an important part. Among the factors which have been used in this connection might be mentioned tariffs, grading and inspection regulations, legislation to facilitate organization and collective bargaining, and the appointment of special commissions and trade representatives to explore the possibility of expanding the sale of Canadian products. These are measures familiar to most people and are the forerunners of the present much-discussed interest towards economic nationalism. They came into existence because of the necessity of giving every possible assistance to farmers and to others in the marketing of their produce.

In connection with the second of the two factors mentioned, namely that having to do with the national production policies and international trade, attention is called to the fact that, in the early period of development in the newer countries of the world, it was considered their role to furnish raw materials, including agricultural products, to the older countries of Europe, which in several had assisted in the colonization of the new lands, and in turn to purchase the products of the factories and shops of the older countries. Inability of farmers in many European countries to compete on a real basis with the settlers in the new countries for a time, resulted in a decline of European agriculture.

This exchange of goods — natural products mostly to Europe and manufactured products from Europe to North and South America, Australia, and New Zealand—continued for some time but about 1870 there were indications of a change. Several European countries, France, Germany and Italy in particular, found it desirable to improve agriculture and with that in view, instituted protective tariffs. About the same time in Canada, and either earlier or later in other countries of the western world, emphasis was given to national development on a basis which called for the expansion of industries other than agriculture. The protective tariff was the instrument used to foster this development. This policy was initiated in both the new and the old countries, about the same time, a movement towards nationalism which meant a desire to become more self-sufficient.

Both were and its after-effects encouraged this development. Depression, including the one we have been passing through in recent years, have also contributed in this connection, but the foundation for the recent measures to control international trade and to develop economic nationalism had its origin many years ago and under conditions that have to be expected in connection with the development of the new world countries. No single country or political party is especially responsible for what has taken place. The broad purpose of what has taken place in the field of production and marketing and in the realm of international trade suggests the basis for recent measures to regulate marketing. While such methods has been to prevent activities, the weight of the movement is traceable to earlier years.

NARCISSUS BULB NEMATODES

The hot water treatment for the destruction of parasitic nematodes in narcissus bulbs has been of invaluable value to Canadian horticulture, yet the experiments of Messrs. W. Newton and R. J. Hastings, of the Dominion Laboratory of Plant Pathology at Saanichton, British Columbia, and those of others show that the treatment frequently fails to destroy all the nematodes, particularly when the bulbs are treated after a long storage period. The data from Saanichton suggest that the effectiveness of the standard hot water treatment when applied late in the season is due to the fact that the major development of the pre-adult nematodes takes place after the bulbs are lifted, and also because the masses of dormant pre-adults are often well isolated from the moisture of the bath by the bulb scales and corky basal plates. Also they are more resistant to heat in a dry compared with a moist state. The Dominion pathologists recommend that the hot water treatment be employed not later than four weeks after lifting when lifting is done as soon as the foliage dies down. A pre-soak is suggested as a possible means of increasing the effectiveness of the standard hot water treatment.

Control of the Cucumber Scab

Experimental Farms Note

During certain seasons, especially when there is an abundant moisture factor in the production of cucumbers in Eastern Canada, serious damage is caused by a fungus which attacks the stems, leaves and fruit. Affected leaves and stems develop light green water-soaked areas which eventually take on a brownish yellow colour. In severe cases extensive portions of the stems and leaves may become affected. Spots appear on the fruit appear as small grey, slightly sunken areas. The conidia thus formed are then developed and more frequent if moist a resinogenous gummy material is formed. This cavity is lined with a dark green velvety layer composed of a mass of the fungus. From this green layer spores are produced which are capable of reproducing the disease when brought into contact with healthy plants. The disease is spread largely by wind and rain. Sometimes drops of a watery substance arise from the cankers. The cankers usually range from one-eighth to one-quarter of an inch in diameter and may in severe cases involve the greater part of the surface of the fruit. The disease develops more readily when warm, humid weather prevails, a temperature of 77 degrees Fahrenheit being most satisfactory for the growth of the fungus. Experiments conducted at the Dominion Field Laboratory of Plant Pathology at Fredericton, N.B. show that cucumber seeds can be checked by thoroughly spraying with Bordeaux mixture composed of 1 pounds of copper sulphate, 6 lbs. of hydrated lime and 40 gallons of water. All surfaces of the stems, leaves and fruit should be thoroughly covered with the fungicide, and repeated at intervals of 3 to 4 days until the end of the season. A sprayer capable of delivering a fine spray at a high pressure is recommended for applying the Bordeaux mixture. Owing to the fact that diseased vines and fruit may serve as agencies for the spread of the disease during the winter months, such refuse should be obtained upon and destroyed by fire or buried deeply in the soil. Further information on this subject can be obtained upon request from the nearest Dominion Plant Pathological Laboratory.

The largest crowd of the season withnessed the splendid battle between the Napanee "Gibbard A's" and Picton, in which Gibbard's were the victors by a score of 5 to 4.

Gibbard's strong aggregation although winning the game, failed to display the class of ball expected by the ball fans.

Church pitched a fine game and his efforts were at par with the hard hitting Dorey from Camanoque. A three-bagger by Leavens put spice in the play during the third. Woodley received a bad split on the knee by one of Church's pitched balls and was forced to retire for a few innings. David Young, as umpire, went behind the plate.

Province May Float $50,000,000 Issue In Near Future

It is expected that the Ontario Government will float a $50,000,000 loan within the near future. The new Treasury Board, made up of Hepburn, Nixon and Roebuck, will be in charge of whatever financing is necessary.

Just what rate and price will be attached to the bonds is a matter of speculation in view of the recent levelled at the Henry Government during the last campaign, when the Liberals said the issue of January was taken up by friends of the Government.

DIED AT PORT ARTHUR, SUNDAY

Word was received in town, Monday of the death at Port Arthur, of Mr. William T. Crouch, a former resident of Napanee.

Mr. Crouch had been ill just a few weeks and his death occurred on Sunday at his home.

Mr. Crouch, who was 83 years old, had been in good health until a short time before his death. With his family Mr. Crouch left Napanee about twenty-five years ago and had resided in Port Arthur since. His wife died in 1922, and he is survived by three sons and three daughters, Ross and Harold at Port Arthur, Freeman of Detroit; Miss Vera and Miss Janet, at Port Arthur, and Mrs. Hodgson, Mrs. Hooper, Western Canada.

Mr. Crouch's remains are being brought to Napanee on Thursday for interment at Riverside cemetery. The body is being accompanied by his son Ross, who will be joined in Napanee by Freeman of Detroit. Miss Vera Crouch, who is in Napanee at this time, is very critically ill at the family home in Port Arthur.

Mrs. George Cliff and Mrs. Palmer are sisters of the late Mrs. Crouch.

The Late Miro Ham

Mr. Miro Ham ,a well-known resident of Napanee, died on Monday at his home on Centre Street, after a short illness.

Mr. Ham, who was in his 84th year had not been in good health for some time, but was confined to bed for only a few days previous to his passing. His wife died just five weeks ago.

The late Mr. Ham was born in Ernestown, where he lived until young manhood. After his marriage to Miss Josephine Langdon, they removed to Emerson, Manitoba, where they remained for forty years. FIRST SWITCHBOARD FOR TELEGRAPHS

An interesting relic of the first days of the telegraph was discovered recently at the headquarters of the Canadian National Telegraphs Toronto. It was the original switchboard, installed in Toronto in 1854 and the first of its kind in what was then Upper Canada. It accommodated only six wires and for about 10 years this meagre equipment was sufficient to look after all of Toronto's telegraph business. The board was operated by a battery, as electric lights were unknown in those days and the telegraph office itself was illuminated by lamps. When set up recently, the board worked perfectly

By 1864, the demands of increased business required a new board for Toronto and the old one was removed to Brantford, where it was in active service until 1890. Subsequently, a special case was made for it but with the moving of the telegraph headquarters to a new building, it was put in storage.

It is now on exhibition at the Historical Exhibit of the Toronto Centennial celebration.

BICYCLES FOR THE HAREM

King Edward's use of a bicycle—recalled by the exhibition of his machine at the Cycle and Motor Show at Olympia—had some curious repercussions abroad. Hearing of the British Soverign's hobby, the Sultan of Morocco took a notion to try it and, though he soon gave over the attempt, decided that it might be amusing to make the ladies of his harem learn to ride—chiefly with the idea of seeing them tumble off.

He appointed his Commander-in-Chief, Sir Harry Macleam, to act as teacher, and, as a beginning, procured a tandem and ordered him to ride round and round the courtyard on the front seat with one of the ladies behind, while he enjoyed the fun from a window. The gallant soldier, who had faced many a foe in command of Moorish troops, confessed to Lord Meath that the ordeal was the worst he had ever experienced. His chief trouble was that the ladies who evidently objected to their lord and master monopolising the fun, took to tickling him unmercifully the whole time—Miscellany

THE TALKING CLOCK

The familiar proposition that time is money seems to be well illustrated in the case of the "talking clock" of Paris, which tells the time over the telephone whenever it is rung up. Three clocks are now operated for a year, and during that period four million inquiries have been answered in it and the city has registered have brought in a revenue of $125,000. One would think that the only remains to make all clocks and watches illegal, and to forbid the wireless stations to say what the thing in the way of "time signals" and the French Budget will balance itself as the result of revenue received from the "talking clock."

The clock's keepers are said always to be a case of "strictly business." The mechanical voice has its "rush hour" when people are ringing up for breakfast period of the 'morning, when apparently endless people ring up in order to find out whether they are going to be late for work or not. On Sundays and holidays the talking clock has far fewer inquiries to answer; when a man's time is his own he ceases to trouble himself on the phone. All of which suggests that the Parisian must have manifestly become extremely "time-conscious" in the matter of working hours. Or is it that the talking clock has had a good year because it is, for the present, such a grand novelty ?

Barley vs. Corn For Poultry

(Experimental Farms Note)

A feeding trial was started at the Dominion Experimental Farm at Nappan, N.S. in the fall of 1930, with the object in view of finding the relative values of barley and corn in poultry rations.

Two pens of pullets were selected each fall for this test. They were sisters or half-sisters and as uniform in size and age as it was possible to select them. Pen one, was fed a dry mash, made up as follows : 100 lbs. each of bran, shorts, middlings, corn meal and crushed oats, 50 lbs. each of beef meal and skimmilk, 25 lbs. each of fish meal and dried buttermilk, 15 lbs. ofbonemeal, 5 lbs. salt and one gallon of cod liver oil. The grain ration was 200 pounds each of wheat, and cracked corn and 100 lbs. of oats. Pen two received the same ration except that cracked corn in the grain ration was replaced by the same weight of whole barley and the corn meal in the dry mash was replaced by ground barley meal. In addition to the aforementioned rations, each pen had free access to oyster shell and grit; also green feed, such as mangels, cabbage, swedes, cut clover or sprouted oats.

Averaging the three years' results, the pen receiving corn in their ration consumed an average of 3079 pounds of feed, at a cost of $40.60 and laid an average of 1,027 eggs having a market value of $71.24, leaving a profit over feed cost of $30.64. The average cost per dozen was 11.61 cents.

Pen 2, with the same number of birds, consumed on the average 3320 pounds of feed at a cost of $44.40 and laid an average of 1,027 eggs with a market value of $74.68, leaving a profit over feed cost of $30.27. The average feed cost per dozen was 11.62 cents.

The average cost of the corn was $1.46 and of the barley $1.41 per hundredweight.

The results of the three years feeding test would indicate that barley may be used very successfully to replace corn in the poultry ration.

Softball Executive Meeting

At a meeting of the Lennox and Addington Softball Association, held Tuesday, July 17th, several important items were brought up.

One in particular was the time of starting the regular league fixtures. Of late, the games have been getting under way any time after eight o'clock, and the executive have passed a ruling which states that "all games must commence promptly at 7:30 p.m. (D.S.T.) and teams not on the field at the stated time, will forfeit the game.

The first protest of the season made its appearance at the meeting. The Gretna Club protested the decision of the umpire-in-chief at a game played with Grace Church, at Gretna. The protest was given a due course of consideration and resulted in a loss for Gretna.

At the same game a player took the responsibility of striking the umpire after his decision (re protest) and was immediately suspended by president Pringle.

Both parties were on hand and after a lengthy argument as to who was to blame, the player apologized to the umpire for his poor sportsmanship and the executive gave him the privilege of playing again.

The game was postponed and the games came up. These games are not to be played unless they have any bearing on the standing of the play-off teams.

Several other matters were given consideration and the meeting adjourned.

Another Super Lifter

(Experimental Farms Note)

Lifting heavy supers of honey off and on to a colony when the latter needs an examination, is a back breaking job and bee-keepers have long been looking for some device whereby this particular part of the work might be made easier. Several super lifters have been devised, but few, if any of them, have proved satisfactory in a one man apiary. Mr. Birch of the Bee Farm at Ottawa has been interested in this problem for a long time with the result that he has now devised a lifter that can be operated easily and swiftly, by one person. The "Big Chief" lifter, as its designer is pleased to call it, will raise one or two supers weighing 90 pounds or more from the colony, en bloc, with an expenditure of very little energy. The supers are being raised from the colony they are carried to a position out of alignment with the hive chamber and held there, thus permitting the brood chamber to be examined without interference. Furthermore, when the examination of the brood chamber is over, the supers may be put back in place with the same ease with which they were removed. It is true that the lifter does not permit of the placing of new supers next the brood chamber but it does relieve the strain and labour that it is immaterial whether the new supers are placed above or below the old ones.

The lifter is made of hardwood and galvanized iron and will cost, at costs about five dollars to construct. Hardwood, however, is not necessary and perfectly strained soft wood will make just as strong a lifter, if a little stouter wood is used for the different parts. Any person handy with tools would find no difficulty in constructing a lifter. The lifter is equipped with wheels to facilitate movement from hive to hive, but they play no part in the lifting of supers.

PRECAMBRIAN MUSKOKA

Some very interesting geological and topographical notes on the Muskoka district are given in an article in the June number of "Scientific Agriculture," by officers of the Dominion Forest Service Branch, with reference to their investigations of the hemlock looper outbreak in that district. The whole region of the Muskoka Lakes is precambrian and is underlain by granite or gneiss. The fertile soil is shallow and outcrops of bare rock are to be found almost everywhere. The soil is low in general but increases in depth in low situations and in hardwood stands. The scarcity of soil is probably due to burns which occurred when originally burned over and the soil being washed away by rain in subsequent years. Parts of the country are thoroughly burned over and the effect of fire and rains very plainly. Topographically the region is very uniform. The country is of a rolline character, resulting in an irregular series of ridges and numerous flat or varied sizes. The relative elevations above the level of the lakes do not exceed 150 to 200 feet.

We know who's who now, but just where they'll finish is the question.

Enterprise, Napanee and Forest Mills are the teams involved, but Napane eand Enterprise are tied for first, with two losses each and it looks like they'll finish that way.

We may see a scrappy game yet to decide the leadership. Here's hoping, as those teams put on a tidy battle every time they hook up. They have met four times and each have won both games in their home grounds. They have both scored fifteen runs in the four games and the hits are about even. too.

It is a toss up between them and the breaks will play the leading role, in the final drive to the wire.

Enterprise defeated Forest Mills, last Wednesday, by the score of 11-3 at Forest Mills. The Cubs pounded Joyner and Young for seventeen hits, while Spratt held Forest Mills to four hits.

The game was well handled by L. Richardson and M. Loucks. There were plenty of bard ones to call and they made no mistakes. It looked like an umpire's picnic before game time, no less than four being on hand. Somebody messed things up. One of them received full pay and didn't have to umpire; another worked the full game and got no pay. Mr. Scott better snap out of it and either run the league right or turn the job over to someone else, who will take more interest in it.

The old outlaw league of a couple of years ago was better handled and gave each team more consideration and protection than they are getting under the O.B.A.A. in this league. Maybe there is only one team in this league ?

At the Twelfth of July celebration at Colebrook, Sydenham lost to Enterprise 4 to 1. It was a pretty game to watch, with both teams hitting the old apple plenty. Youth and a little luck was too much for Sydenham, though they played hard and were dangerous at all times.

The remaining games should have no bearing on the league standing, unless Napanee or Enterprise step on a game and on form they shouldn't lose again.

So we will see you at the play-offs !

A LARGE FIELD TO DRAW FROM

The Late Blight and Rot Disease of Potatoes

(Experimental Farms Note.)

It has been demonstrated by experimental work conducted by the Division of Botany, Dominion Experimental Farms Branch, that approximately one-fifth of the possible potato crop may be lost yearly because of late blight and rot in the field. It has been further demonstrated that fifty to almost one hundred per cent of this loss can be prevented by thorough spraying and that the keeping quality of the sprayed potatoes is much improved.

This destructive disease appears in almost any potato field during late August or early September and is recognized by the appearance of dark water-soaked spots on the leaves. In wet weather a fine grey mildew covers these areas on the under surface of the leaf. In reality, the growth is made up of many branched bearing countless numbers of spores which are, in fact, the seeds of fruiting bodies of a parasitic mould which feeds inside of the leaf and is producing kills the leaf in affected parts. This parasite is the late blight fungus and the affected area of the leaf is late blight. The spores, of course, spread the disease. On the tubers it appears as purplish to dark brown sunken areas liable to cause a destructive rot in storage.

Late blight may be controlled by spraying with Bordeaux mixture, making the applications at least five times for Irish Cobblers and six to eight times for Green Mountains, beginning when the plants are about six to eight inches high. The later applications are very important. The spray mixture generally recommended is composed of 4 pounds of blue stone (copper sulphate), 4 pounds of lime and 40 gallons of water. Limemay be of the hydrated form and should be of the best grade available. Stone lime is most satisfactory and should be thoroughly slaked. The most economical method is to prepare a stock solution of the blue stone and the lime in small containers. Casks of 40 gallon capacity are a convenient size. In the first cask place about 30 gallons of water, and dissolve in it 80 pounds of blue stone by suspending the material overnight to save time in a sack just below the surface of the water. When the chemical is dissolved add sufficient water to make up 40 gallons. In the second cask place 80 pounds of the best stone lime and slake it by adding water gradually. When the process is complete, add sufficient water to make up 40 gallons. These casks contain 2 pounds of blue stone and lime respectively, per gallon. The casks should be covered to prevent evaporation and exclude dirt and other substances which may interfere with proper application of the spray mixture. To prepare the mixture for spraying, first determine the capacity of the spray tank. Assuming this to be 80 gallons, pour into the tank 72 gallons of water and add 4 gallons of the thoroughly stirred blue stone solution (8 pounds of blue stone) and also 4 gallons of the well-stirred milk of lime (8 pounds of lime). The lime solution should be strained through cheesecloth or other suitable material or the strainer provided with the spray outfit. The solutions of blue stone and lime should never be mixed before further diluting the water.

Intentions to plant potatoes in the Dominion, as published by the Bureau of Statistics, indicate an increase of 6 per cent this year. The intended acreage this year is 540,100; the acreage in 1933 was 527,700.

GARDEN POISON MIXTURE

Young seedlings in gardens are frequently destroyed by cutworms which work in the stem just at the surface of the soil, says Isabella Preston in the Dominion Department of Agriculture bulletin on Annual flowers. A good poisoned bran mixture for their control is made as follows:—mix thoroughly half a pound Paris green, with 20 lbs. bran while both are dry. Dissolve one quart of molasses in two gallons or more of water, then pour this into the moistened bran and stir until all the bran is moistened thoroughly. In smaller quantities, use one quart of bran, one teaspoonful of Paris green, and one tablespoonful of molasses, with enough water to moisten the poisoned bran. Spread on the surface of the ground near the plants as soon as they are set out. The cutworms come out at night, eat the poisoned bran, and are killed.

Mme. Curie As Inspiration

Among the group of benefactors, whose passing is mourned universally by humanity, the names of men predominate. Only occasionally the name of a woman is found in the long list. Search the dimming records, if you will. There is Jesus of Nazareth who brought a code that removed women from the drudgery of the fields and acknowledged them as human beings with brains and hearts and minds, as well as bodies. There is Galileo who brought down the stars to the earth; there are scientists and surgeons and inventors —Robert Fulton, Marconi, Edison, Pasteur.

Over and over the men march by in the humanitarian parade, but seldom a woman passes in procession. There is Florence Nightingale, of course. There is Joan of Arc. But generally speaking, the men are the benefactors.

Handed On The Torch

Therefore, when there dies a great woman who gave her life that those who shall live after her may be happier, women should render even greater tribute to her than to the men who attends the same tall hills of service. Madame Marie Curie, the discoverer of radium and famed scientists, is dead. She has saved the lives of thousands, alleviated the suffering of other thousands. Although she knew that she was dying she would not cease her work. She had discovered treasures that she must record for future generations. She had a torch that she must hand down to her co-workers that they might brighten the long trail to eternity for all posterity. She kept faith. She follow of the Light.

We begin to wonder why it is that men usually make the definite contributions to humanity's progress? The answer is a simple one. Women personalize. We add to, illustrate a matter which has a bearing on our own lives or affects one or two who we believe. Men impersonalize. They hold the larger vision of universal business and endeavor.

There are many lessons which men learn from women. But the impersonalization is one which we must rather from men and a few great women, such as Madame Curie.

The secret of the many glass windows of Europe perished when the masters died. The artists did not tell their apprentices where the magic came, but Madame Curie handed the book which contained information that she had found in her experiments, and which her colleagues must finish. She had held her torch high. A few days before she died the record was completed. She wanted the world to look at life through brighter windows. The torch went out. There was no time to say goodbye.

Each In Her Own Way

But to be great does not always mean that one must be distinguished and illustrious. The woman who saw an old woman picking up small objects from the street and placing them in a pocket-book dropped by a grew curious. He asked her what she was doing.

"It's just the pieces of broken glass on the street," she explained. "I always cut my feet, and my children who play here, so I gather them up every day."

A simple explanation — but the renowned woman scientist would have understood. She would know that the woman's back ached from her simple endeavor.

We must learn to judge people not by what they take from life but by the contributions which they make to life. Imperturbability, kindness, and to happiness. Men know it is a secret? It is a lesson in our copybooks that most of us have never completed.

"Any kidnappers in Chimson Gulch?" asked the travelling salesman.

"Two," answered Cactus Joe.

"Where are they?"

"That's a secret. We're holding 'em for a ransom."

"I'll be good for a penny, mother," coaxed little William hopefully.

"Oh, Willie," reproved his mother, "why can't you be like your father? He isnt good for a penny. He's good for nothing!"

Wedding Bells

DICE—METCALFE

Tall white standards of pink, white and blue summer flowers and marguerites were used to decorate Rosedale United Church at high noon Wednesday, July 11th, for the marriage of Mary Clarendon, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Metcalfe, to Clarence Manion Dice, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Dice of Veedersburg, Indiana. Rev. P. J. Dowling of St. Catharines officiated and Mr. Edgar Goodaire played the wedding music.

The bride's gown was of peau d'ange lace, fashioned on princess lines the skirt forming a long train. A row of tiny buttons from the neckline to the end of the train finished the gown at the back, and the long, tight sleeves were fastened with a row of tiny buttons. Her long tulle veil fell in soft folds from a wreath of lily-of-the-valley. She carried a round bouquet of valley lilies, pink and white bouvardia. Butterfly roses, with long streamers and clusters of bouvardia. Mr. Metcalfe gave his daughter in marriage. Miss Margaret Gleed-nating, bridesmaid, was lovely in pink chiffon with train, and a blue velvet sash falling to the end of the train. Her hat was a large model, matching French lace, and she wore matching gloves with ruffle-fend frilled cuffs and carried pink larkspur, pale blue delphinium, Adeline roses and baby's-breath.

Mr. Harold Dice was his brother's groomsman, and the ushers were Mr. Clayton Metcalfe, brother of the bride, and Mr. Don Carr.

The reception was held at Sherbourne House Club. Mrs. Metcalfe becomingly roosned in French blue and white printed chiffon with train, three-quarter length coat with frills at the neckline and cuffs, matching hat and accessories and carrying Adeline roses, blue corn-flowers edged with baby's breath, received the guests.

The couple left later for Montreal, Lucerne and a trip through the States, the bride travelling in a brown and white triple sheer ensemble, large brown stitched taffeta hat and brown and white accessories.

Mr. and Mrs. Dice will live in Muncie, Indiana.

NATURAL WEED CHOKER

As fully explained in the House of Commons, recently, by the Hon. Robert Weir, Dominion Minister of Agriculture, crested wheat grass is well adapted for pasturing by virtue of its remarkable ability to withstand close grazing and sever trimping. It is a particularly suitable crop for feed production in the dry land areas of Western Canada on account of its adaptation to dry conditions, its winter hardiness and its ability to compete successfully with plants of other species. Seeing is believing, and an abandoned field in the vicinity of the Dominion Range Experiment Station at Manyberries, Alberta, was seeded to this grass and was closely grazed from early spring until late fall for five continuous years without apparent injury to the grass cover. The soil was heavily infested with weed seed, chiefly Russian thistle and mustard, yet the grass took possession to the almost complete exclusion of the weeds. Owing to its extensive root system which takes up all the moisture weeds cannot grow in competition with it. All the latest information about crested wheat grass is contained in a pamphlet just issued by the Dominion Department of Agriculture.

Little Barbara (questioning her mother):

"Mother, the Lord provides our daily bread, doesn't he?"

"Yes, dear."

"Santa Claus brings us what presents we need, doesn't he mother?"

"Why, yes dear."

"And you say the Stork brings the babies, don't you?"

"Certainly, dear." "But why all the questions, Barbara?"

"I was just wondering, what we have Daddy around for."

HOLLAND PREFERS CANADIAN BARLEY

Canadian barley is preferred by many in Holland, due to its having a softer skin and a whiter flour when ground to be used as a feeding meal. Among the other advantages claimed for the Canadian product is its superior germinating power and the lack of odoriferousness noted in many competing varieties. Some buyers are willing to pay a premium for the Canadian barley, but price in the Holland market is a governing factor.

Imports of Canadian barley into the Netherlands reached its peak in 1929, when Holland took over 41 per cent of her total imports from Canada, but last year there were no imports of any consequence nor have there been any since the present year began. It is considered there is a larger market in Holland for Canadian barley if Canadian exporters can meet the factor of price.

CARTIER looks at CANADA TODAY

The fearless, courageous, dauntless spirit that brought Cartier across the high seas 400 years ago, is bringing Canada and Canadians out of the dark days of economic stress. This spirit is exemplified in the "Show Window of the Nations" as this mighty enterprise forges ahead in its capacity as an effective stimulant to the trade and commerce of our Dominion. Canada's Cartier Celebrations, in conjunction with Toronto's Centennial Celebrations, climax on September 4th and 5th at the Canadian National Exhibition in impressive ceremonies in which representatives of Great Britain, France, the United States and Canada, unite in celebration of that gallant explorer's discovery of Canada. The Spirit of Cartier looks on Canada at the Canadian National Exhibition, where the progress of nations is on review.

NEWS AND INFORMATION FOR THE BUSY FARMER

(Furnished by the Ontario Department of Agriculture)

Acute indigestion in horses is the result of one or other of the following causes: Sudden exercise after feeding; overfeeding; change of food; new hay or oats; feeding close-textured foods, such as meal when not properly bulked with cut hay.

Ventilated Trap-Nests

Open trap-nests are being advocated in some quarters for summer use. The sides are constructed of laths or other similar material, admitting cool air freely, and these are covered with wire screening to keep out other hens, mice and other nuisances. The usual trap-door is situated at the front and the top is boarded over, but three sides are ventilated.

Intercropping the Orchard

The central space between trees in orchards utilized for crops should be treated under the cover crop system. Hoed crops like potatoes, small berries, etc., are to be preferred to crops of grain or grass. Instances have been recorded where tall growing intercrops, such as corn, when planted too close to the trees, have prevented the bark from properly ripening or hardening, with the result that a large number of trees were killed by sun-scald the following winter.

Precooling Fruit

The recent transportation of early strawberries over long distances has called attention to the benefits of the precooling system. Precooling, as the term is commonly used, denotes the removal of field heat from fruit after harvesting and before it is shipped to market. Unfortunately, with strawberries as with other fruit, there is still the practice of delay ing and shipping fruit that is not fully mature, because deterioration is not as apparent as in mature fruit. Fruit is mature when it has reached that stage when the normal process of ripening will continue after the fruit is picked and enable it to develop full flavor. It is to enable the producer and shipper to co-operate in placing mature, well-colored, full-flavored fruit within reach of the consumer, that precooling of fruit by fanning is recommended.

Potato Beetle Poison

The best and cheapest poison to use for the control of the potato beetle is calcium arsenate at the rate of 1½ to 2 pounds in 40 gallons of Bordeaux mixture (copper sulphate 6 lbs., lime 4 lbs., water 40 gallons). If the poison is used alone in water, add two to three lbs. of hydrated lime to each 40 gallons. Should arsenate of lead or Paris green be preferred as a poison, two to three pounds of the arsenate or half to one pound of Paris green may be substituted, to be used in each 40 gallon barrel of spray.

Gardeners' Insect Friends

All garden insects are not injurious. In fact many of them are beneficial, continually doing good by destroying those species which are harmful. Foremost among the insects which help the gardener are the different kinds of ladybird beetles. Both in their larval and adult stages, they feed almost exclusively upon plant lice and scale insects. Another kind of beetle, the fiery ground beetle, is a particularly useful insect. This beetle and its voracious grub, which is called the cut worm, destroy enormous numbers of cut worms. The beetle is brownish-black, with the wing-cases spotted with copper red — hence its name. The large harpalus beetle, which is very common, destroys cut worms. The different kinds of lacewing, and other fly and four winged parasitic flies are also friends of the gardener.

War Against Weeds

Dry weather and bright, hot sunshine are the farmers' greatest allies in the war against weeds, says Mr. Martin, assistant director, Crops and Markets Branch. July and August are busy months for the farmer but it is during these months when the weather is usually hot and dry that the maximum damage can be done to weeds with the minimum of effort.

July plowing and early after harvest cultivation is to be highly recommended.

Hay fields known to be dirty should be ploughed immediately after having, the furrows left to bake and dry out for 10 days or two weeks, then cultivated frequently as a summer fallow and seeded to fall wheat early in September.

This so called dry cleaning method is very effective on Sow Thistle, Twitch Grass, Bladder Campion and other perennial weeds.

Straight summer fallow is also very effective, although somewhat more expensive. Late sown buckwheat, followed the next year with rape or roots is a splendid smothering crop.

Weekly Crop Report

Reports from district agricultural representatives have taken on a more optimistic tone in the past two weeks. From Bruce comes the report that spring crops have a wonderful color and give promise of a really good crop. Dufferin reports grain fields very promising and a considerable acreage of annual hays and corn planted to supplement roughage requirements. Halton states that field crops have assumed an entirely different aspect and that the district is headed for the first crop of alfalfa seed in a number of years. In North Simcoe, spring-sown crops are looking exceptionally well, there having been a plentiful supply of rain for three weeks. Waterloo, on the other hand, reports crop prospects the poorest in years, with livestock in poor condition due to very short pastures. Crops are looking real well in Wellington county. The small number of potato bugs is a matter of comment among potato growers there, the general opinion being that the severe winter killed many of them.

Below-average crops are reported from Brant, Haldimand, Middlesex and Lambton, although recent rainfall has improved prospects. Fall wheat will be a light crop in Oxford while the hay crop is about one-third of the usual amount. Alsike and clover than anticipated are reported from Wentworth, but corn has not shown much a comeback from their backward appearance earlier in the season. Spring crops in Ontario County give every appearance of a splendid yield, both of straw and grain. In Prince Edward spring grain looks very promising, while fair yields of early peas are reported and early potatoes look exceptionally good. Winter injury in orchards there is more serious than anticipated, the varieties most affected being Stark, Ben Davis, Cranberry, Pippin and Northern Spy.

In Dundas county, Eastern Ontario corn, grain and hay have improved somewhat, while in Glengarry, all spring grains are making wonderful growth and have showed a decided improvement. In Northern Ontario frequent rains have made the crop outlook decidedly brighter.

VAT AND CHURNING NUMBERS

Under the amended regulations of the Diary Industry Act with regard to export cheese and butter, it is an important point that every cheese and every package containing cheese or butter be marked at the factory with the vat number in respect to cheese or the churning number as concerning butter. These numbers run consecutively throughout the calendar year, commencing with number one on the first batch of butter, and number 100 on cheese and packages of cheese. While the usual course of trading will be interfered with as little as possible and due consideration given to the convenience of the manufacturers and exporters, there is danger of considerable delay if any lot of cheese or butter is submitted for grading which does bear the vat or churning number or if there is any irregularity in the marking. It is within the power of the grader to impose a fine of twenty-five cents on each box not marked in accordance with the regulations, and no export certificate will be issued until the fee is paid.

NEED FOR HOG ORGANIZATION

Perhaps one of the greatest needs in the swine industry at the present time at present is organization. There is need of organization locally primarily and finally on the continental basis. Canada today is expanding her hog population with a view to taking a more prominent place as an export bacon country if the objective is to be met by the machinery of production must be so organized that the proper type of animal will be produced, economically supply marketed, and lastly, but not least, the producers obtain their share of the real value of the finished product. The indifference with which farmers in many districts have viewed hog grading and the lack of effort to avail themselves of the benefits of the system of carcass grading, have been due to lack of organized effort and proper appreciation of market requirements. The results are evidence of strength immediately quality improves. Farmers are advised to check weight carefully No lambs under 70 pounds at the farm should be shipped. As the season advances 70 pounds weight at the farm is inadvisable to 70 pounds.

Higher prices for lambs and a steady advancement of the industry is responsible for farmers giving more attention to the preparation of lambs for market. There is evidence that farmers are watching market prices and checking closer on lamb weights, so that lambs as they reach desirable weights are picked out of the flock and shipped to market, mainly by hand as this service enables any farmer to dispose of single animals as well as groups.

LAMB AS SUMMER FOOD

During the next sixty days the volume of new crop lambs will continue to increase in keeping with retail demand as enhanced by hotels, conventions, and our own Canadian people, who naturally turn to the lighter and more healthful meats during the summer months says Mr. A. A. McMillan of the Dominion Live Stock Branch. Tourist centres will secure their supplies of the most part from local farm-kill, especially where such centres are in the midst of the sheep raising country. Lack of rain causing shortage of pastures in western and central Ontario created some hesitation on the part of unfinished lambs in June Thin lambs had a depressing effect on lamb prices; however the market gives evidence of strength immediately quality improves. Farmers are advised to check weight carefully No lambs under 70 pounds at the farm should be shipped As the season advances 70 pounds weight at the farm is inadvisable to 70

Recipes & Hints

It is the desire of "The Beaver" to devote this section of the paper, regularly, to the publication of Recipes and Household Hints, received from local women or women's organizations. We would be pleased to receive recipes and suggestions and would withold or publish the contributors' names, as requested. Contributions will be used as space permits.

(Send them in early in the week.)

A CORRECTION — In the recipe printed below, which was also in last week's paper, we regret, through an error on our part, we neglected to mention the milk. We are, therefore, repeating the corrected recipe, this week.

ONE EGG CAKE

(Mrs. Harry Steacy)

Two cups sifted pastry or cake flour
Two teaspoons baking powder.
One-half teaspoon salt.
Sift together three times.

Break one egg in standard measuring cup. Add enough soft butter to half fill the cup. Then add enough sweet milk to fill the cup and mix with dry ingredients, beating vigorously for five minutes. Vanilla or spices may be added for flavouring. Bake in moderate oven three-quarters of an hour. Ice with butter or boiled icing.

NOTE — By omitting one-quarter cup of flour and adding one-quarter cup cocoa, above recipe may be used as chocolate cake. For orange cake, flavour with grated orange rind instead of vanilla.

CHOCOLATE PINWHEEL COOKIES

Half cup butter.
Half cup sugar.
One egg yolk.
Three tablespoons milk.
One and one-half cups flour.
One-eighth teaspoon salt.
One teaspoon baking powder.
One square chocolate.

Cream butter and sugar. Add unbeaten yolk of egg, milk, and flour sifted with salt, baking powder. Blend thoroughly. Divide mixture in half: to one half add chocolate which has been melted over hot water. Roll the white and chocolate doughs into thin rectangular sheets of same size. Place one on top of the other, roll over and over. Chill dough for several hours. Bake in oven of 400 degrees F. for 10 minutes. This makes about 70 pinwheels.

PARTY SANDWICHES

Cut the bread and butter thinly, and then either cut it into rounds with an ordinary pastry cutter or with special cutters designed in the shape of hearts, clubs, diamonds or spades. Then remove a small circular piece of bread from the centre of the top piece of each sandwich. This can be done with a thimble. Fill up the circular cavity with mashed tomato, chopped cherries or nuts, or other attractive garnishes, taking care that the flavour of filling and garnish blend well.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

GREASE MARKS — Grease marks on furniture and fabrics should be treated as soon as possible. Eucalyptus is the best medium for removing the grease spots from articles of clothing and furnishing fabrics. It is particularly effective in the case of thin materials. Apply the oil by means of a pad of cotton wool and leave it to dry. Grease marks may be removed from brown shoes with powdered French chalk. The chalk should be rubbed well into the leather. Grease spots on carpets will yield quickly to the treatment with turpentine and a cut lemon will remove them from furniture.

INFORMATION ON POLISHING — A mixture of equal parts of coal oil, methylated spirits, and water, well shaken, makes an excellent window cleaner. Apply with a soft cloth and polish with a dry duster.

Dirty and tarnished brass and copper can be cleaned perfectly with a piece of cut lemon. First remove all the dirt with the lemon, then wash the article quickly in warm water and dry.

Stains on polished tables, caused by hot dishes being placed on them, will disappear if spirits of camphor is applied on a soft rag. Then polish in the ordinary way.

To stop condensation of steam on bathroom mirrors, rub with a soft cloth moistened with glycerin. Leave a thin film of the glycerine adhering to the glass.

Stained piano-keys can be cleaned by mixing a little whiting with methylated spirits, applying with a rag. Then rub with a soft duster.

A COT COVER

A pretty and inexpensive cot-cover may easily be made at home. Cut two lengths of light-coloured silky material, such as crepe or artificial silk, to measure a yard long and 24 inches wide. Make these into a bag by stitching up three sides and turn right side out. Fill this with a length of wadding of the same size which may be bought cheaply from any large stores, and sew up the fourth side. To keep the wadding in place, and at the same time to add a professional and decorative touch, stitch out with large running stitches of embroidery silk any fancy design to give the appearance of an eider-down, making sure that the stitches go right through the bag. Motifs of animal and bird designs may be bought in various colours and stitched on, or animal shapes may be cut out of any odd pieces of material of contrasting colours to be found in the remnant drawer and appliqued on the silk, before making up the bag.

Stir constantly until the rice krispies and peanuts are thoroughly heated.

Spices are good in many fruit and milk beverages. Cloves or a little ginger in tea is not new, but have you tried a pinch of nutmeg in coffee? If caffeine-free coffee is used, the beverage is wholesome for young and old alike.

Miss Elizabeth Sills gave a brief but instructive talk on "The Cotton Plant." She dealt with the appearance and various uses of the plant and created deeper interest in displaying a specimen and pictures.

Spicy Adventures

BY BARBARA B. BROOKS

A spirit of adventure is quite the proper one for cooking with spices. The story of spices is a romantic one. The Bible and early histories tell us that spices were the wealth of kings. Medieval merchants, who dealt in spices, became the kings of trade. Van roamed over the entire surface of the earth searching for spice-producing lands and new routes to the old markets.

If suddenly all our spices were taken away from us, we should miss them and find our plain foods rather uninteresting. We could then better appreciate the zeal of ancient kings who went so far as to wage wars to control the spice trade routes.

However, many cooks overlook entirely the possibilities of spices in everyday cooking. A dash of ground cloves in rarebit or cheese sauces does something that is difficult to describe but pleasant to taste. Some people like sage, mace or nutmeg with cheese. The child and also the adult, who dislikes milk will find it transformed in flavor and appearance if a little ground nutmeg or cinnamon is printed on it.

A few well-chosen seeds or sprigs of herbs in salads give the magic touch which has made chefs famous. Recipes are difficult to give because seasoning is a delicate matter. The rule is to proceed with caution, but the combination of seasonings of sweetness whether or not you have never heard of them. Always remember that it is usually the trace that can hardly be detected that is the most interesting and effective. There are exceptions to this rule. For instance, every seed generously used in potato salad or cake improves the flavor for most people. Taste is the test.

So often spices are associated in our minds with hot foods that we are apt to use them only for cold weather cookery. However, not all spices are "peppery." Even sage gingerbread has an after-coolness effect. Try this recipe to prove it. It is not a rich cake. Bran is used to improve color and flavor and to add the fiber, minerals and vitamins of the outer wheat coatings.

Bran Gingercake

One-third cup shortening.
Half cup brown sugar.
Two eggs well beaten.
Half cup molasses
One cup bran.
One and one-half cups flour.
Half teaspoon salt.
One and one-half teaspoons ginger
One tablespoon cinnamon.
One tablespoon baking powder.
Half teaspoon soda.
Half cup buttermilk or sour milk

Cream shortening and sugar. Add the molasses and bran. Sift dry ingredients and add alternately with the milk. Bake in a moderate oven (375 degrees F.) for about 30 to 40 minutes. Yield: 12 servings (1 cake 9 by 8 inches).

Instead of salted nuts for your summer luncheon or dinner party serve Hindu rice crispies. The recipe comes from the home of spices.

Hindu Rice Kripies

Two tablespoons butter.
One teaspoon mustard seeds.
Half teaspoon curry powder.
One-quarter teaspoon salt.
One-quarter teaspoon cinnamon.
Speck of pepper.
Half box rice krispies.
One cupful fresh salted peanuts.

EVOLUTION OF THE WRITING DESK

It is established beyond doubt that the writing bureau originated in the early seventeenth century from the old-fashioned Bible boxes. The latter were originally flat boxes just large enough to hold the family Bible, which was the most treasured possession. These boxes were almost always kept upon a shelf in the general living room, and, because of their flat surfaces and conveniently high form, the house owner became accustomed to stand and write his letters upon the Bible boxes.

It can easily be imagined that this became somewhat wearisome. However that may be, it is certain that some seventeenth century cavalier evolved the idea of making a Bible box on a stand, so that it could be a movable piece of furniture. The stand was made low enough to allow the owner to sit during his writing hours, for correspondence was a laborious and tiresome occupation in the early days. This was brought to light the first real bureau writing-desk, and such a story of evolution can be found in every piece of furniture if it be sought carefully and entirely.

The next stage was to fit to the top of the desk a sloping lid for this was found much more convenient for writing purposes. It is not until very late in the seventeenth century that we find a bureau writing desk which was not used also as a Bible box. It was found that a place was needed in which might be kept all writing materials, which were more cumbersome in the early days, as well as little treasures and souvenirs. The Bible was taken away and placed in a separate box, and the top of the desk was fitted, inside the sloping cover, with pigeon-holes, roughly fitted, and drawers. The reason for the slanting lid is in

ENTERPRISE

Enterprise, July 16. — The officers and members of L. O. L. No. 431 attended the celebration of the Glorious Twelfth, held at Galbraith's camping grounds, at Varty Lake. The recent rains have been of untold benefit to grain and garden crops. Fields of grain are beginning to ripen and harvesting operations will likely begin in a very few days.

Sleep is the great nourisher of infants, and without peaceful sleep the child will not thrive. This cannot be got if the infant be troubled with worms. Miller's Worm Powders will destroy worms and drive them from the system, and afterwards the child's rest will be undisturbed. The powders cannot injure the most delicate baby, and there is nothing so effective for restoring the health of a worm-worn infant.

Agreement Reached To Build Dairy Ave.

Town's Committee Signs Agreement with County

On Tuesday morning the special committee, composed of Mayor Tustin and Reeve Hughson, appointed at the regular session of the Town Council the previous evening, met the chairman of the Special Roads Committee of the County, and the County Road Engineer, to confer on the matter of the building of Dairy Avenue.

The question has been the subject of some difference of opinion between the County and the town since early last fall, and has finally been settled.

At last week's Town Council session an agreement was presented by the County Council for the town's approval. The agreement called for the building of the road known as Dairy Avenue, leading from the Selby Road to the Newburgh Road, past the Acme Farmers' Dairy, at a cost not to exceed $3,000.00. The work was to be carried on as a relief project, and the town was to forego its 1934 subsidy from the County for designated streets and connecting links.

Reeve Hughson made strenuous objections to the town signing the agreement, and moved the adjournment of the special committee, with power to act, to confer with the County committee.

The representatives of the two bodies met at the County Treasurer's office on Tuesday morning and the agreement, as presented by the County, was signed by the town's representatives. The work, as proposed, is subject to the approval of the Ontario Government Highways Department, and will not be started until authorized by the Department.

Both Local Teams Take Games in Saturday's Double - Header

Gibbard's "B" team met and defeated Hayburn in a double-header bill on Saturday, preceding the Gibbard "A" and Brighton game. The score was 4-2 in favor of Gibbard's.

Card and Stinson were the battery for Gibbard's and Davern and Dickson for Hayburn. Loucks and Richardson handled the game.

Gibbard's got six hits and made three errors.

Hayburn got five hits and made one error.

GIBBARD A'S WON FROM BRIGHTON TEAM

Dorey, the pitcher for Gibbard A's, in Saturday's game with Brighton, proved himself without shadow of doubt an all-round ball player. His pitching was a masterly exhibition of control which made it next to impossible for Brighton to even get a look-in. He allowed only three hits, struck out eight men and didn't walk a single man. Brighton went away without a single run and Gibbard's made a total of eight runs.

When Dorey came to bat, third man in the first innings, he hit out a ball that nearly reached the centre-field fence, brought in Card and scored himself, as well.

Campbell ,the pitcher for Brighton, had only one strike-out and allowed ten hits and eight runs. Not one of the Brighton players made second base throughout the game and only six reached first safely.

One-base hits were made by Card, Bentley, Dorey, Dunn, Kinkley, Simmons, for Napanee, and by Wright, Price, Post and Campbell, for Brighton.

Two-base hits—Bentley, Cairns.
Three-base hits—Dorey.
Home-run — Dorey.
The teams lined-up as follows :—
Brighton — D. McKinnon, s.s.; Smith, l.f.; Wright, c.f.; Price, 1b; Shannon, 3b; C. McKinnon, 2b; Post, c; Webster, r.f.; J. Campbell, p.; Lindsay catching from fourth to end.

Gibbard's — Bentley, c.f.; Card, 3b; Dorey, p; Cairns, C; Dunn, r.f.; Kinkley l.f.; Gibbard, 2b; Wilson, 1b; Simmons, s.s.

Sale of Beer and Wine Allowed in Hotels Not in Resturants

Regulations Issued by Department

The Ontario Government's Liquor Act amendments, permitting the sale of beer and wine in standard hotels, came into force on Monday of this week. The announcement was made last Thursday that beer by the glass would be available the beginning of this week.

Governing Regulations

Many of the regulations released had been forecast. They include: "Authorities" to serve beer and wine in the dining-room of a hotel, club, steamer or railway train, will cost $100.00 each ; authorities to operate beverage-rooms in hotels will cost another $100.00.

The permit system, so far as it affects beer and wine, will be discontinued, but purchases must still be made through Government liquor stores and beer warehouses. Orders may be telephoned or mailed. Permits are still required for purchase of hard liquor. No mention of the matter appears in the regulations, but Premier Hepburn intimated that a "single beverage permit" will be instituted for tourists, probably at 25 cents each.

Changes May Be Made

The Premier stressed again that the present regulations were merely experimental, and hinted that, after a fair trial and an understanding of the public reaction, extension of privileges to restaurants might be possible.

As they stand, the regulations provide for :

Sale of beer and wine at meals in the dining-rooms of standard hotels, in hotels' clubs, in railway trains and in steamers, after the requisite "authority" is obtained.

Sale of beer alone in beverage rooms of standard hotels and en club premises. Maximum hours of sale are 10 a.m. to midnight, but earlier closing may be decreed if representations are made by the municipality.

Abolition of permits for purchase of beer and wine by individuals. There will be over the counter, or by mail or telephone, from Government stores and brewers' warehouses.

Forms Issued

Application forms for authority to sell wine issued on Wednesday to standard hotels. All applicants who could qualify will be issued with authorities. The authorities will expire on October 31st, 1934. The hotels selling are required to keep records of stock on hand, purchases, and submit reports each month.

Sales on Sunday, Good Friday, Christmas Day, and certain other holidays, will be prohibited.

Business Above Board

Mr. Hepburn said : "We're going to make the liquor business clean and above board. You will agree with me that prohibition is a lost cause, as witness the horrible example in the United States. I am willing to co-operate with you in a campaign of education in the schools".

Napanee Golf Club June Handicap Results

The Napanee Golf Club June handicap competition has just recently been completed. The games ran over into July, because some of the players were away last month.

The first flight prize was won by Douglas Davidson. He advanced to meet Carson Graham in the finals by winning his games with W. T. Mackenzie, W. J. Wiggins ad Harold Chase. The final contest was close and was carried to the 17th green, where it ended in a score of 2-1.

In this competition, Douglas Davidson had the distinction of playing with and defeating both the local members of the "Hole-in-one Club," Carson Graham and W. T. Mackenzie.

Mr. James H. Moffat won the final game of the second flight playoffs. The newer golfers in this competition had some very interesting contests. Jack Cook made a splendid showing in his games and entered the finals with a decisive win over Doug. Mayhew. The game with Mr. Moffat was carried to the 16th hole, when Mr. Moffat finally won.

The course is in splendid condition and it is expected that following competitions will prove equally interesting.

MRS. W. H. HARVEY

Mrs. W. J. Harvey, a prominent resident of Deseronto, passed away early Wednesday morning, July 18, at Kingston General Hospital. Mrs. Harvey was the eldest child of the late W. J. Harvey, a well-known contractor, who died a few years ago.

Rotary Field Day Provides Entertainment Of Unusual Interest

Pro. Hockey Players Play Softball

Last Wednesday was a red letter day in sports for the Town of Napanee. It was the annual field day sponsored by the Rotary Club in aid of the Crippled Children's Fund of the local Club.

Napanee and County people do not require any special attraction to secure their support for an event in aid of this very worthy cause. Nevertheless, the Rotary Club generously made every effort to give the people value for their money. The main attraction of the afternoon was the softball game played between the Maple Leaf hockey team of Toronto and Ottawa professional hockey players. Between 1,200 and 1,500 people were present in the grand stand and side lines.

Rotarian Harry Card, as in the past few years, was responsible for the sports. Jack Adams, one of the most enthusiastic members of the club, the manager of the Detroit Red Wings, professional hockey players, arranged with the two professional teams to stage the softball game in Napanee.

Thanks Expressed by Rev. Dumbrille

Before the play started, Venerable Archdeacon Dumbrille, a member of the club, expressed a welcome to the audience. He thanked the public for their support of Rotary projects in the past, and for the evident interest in the event of this year. He also voiced the appreciation of the club of Mr. Ernest Gibbard's generosity in granting the use of the park free of charge.

Last year the Rotary Club spent $2,004.00 on 54 cases, the largest number treated in the history of the club and a far greater number than the average of 39 cases of all the clubs in the province.

The Original "Pig Skin Peters"

Jack Adams introduced "Hap" Watson, the original "Pigskin Peters" as the umpire behind the bat, and Jack Adams himself served as base umpire for the softball game.

"Hap" Watson's original wit and clever repartee, combined with his clown-like antics and attire kept the crowd amused throughout the afternoon. During the ninth innings a most serious but very real looking accident occurred. Jackson, who played for the Maple Leafs at first base, complained of an injured finger. Quickly the players gathered around to help him first aid, and "Hap" Watson rushed to the dugout for a bucket of water. Carrying it in his arms, he gallantly onwards first, when suddenly he tripped and rolled over several times. The result was, as he gallantly picked up, he presented much the appearance of the proverbial "drowned rat". The dust of the field and the water made a sorry mess of him, and as he walked back toward the home plate he was heard to say in a very rueful tone, "Dirty field you've got here".

Players Introduced

As each player came up to bat he was introduced by Watson, and the crowd showed their interest in the men by hearty applause. The resulting score was 5 for the Maple Leafs and 4 for the Ottawa professionals. Some good playing was done by both teams, but the crowd's main interest was in the men themselves who were, known by name, at least, to the most of the people present.

The men were as follows :

Maple Leafs—Spire, of the New York American; Joe Primeau, Harvey Jackson, "Chuck" Connacher, Geo. Hainsworth, "Red" Horner, Arthur Jackson (formerly of St. Mikes, world amateur champions, now with the Leafs), "Happy" Day, "Hoot" Kilrea, and Bill Thoms.

Ottawa Professionals—"Walt" Kilrea, Job Starr, Alan Shields, Sid Howe, "Vip" Radley, Bill Beveridge, Jeff Kalfesh, Stan Jackson, and Gaudet.

At various times throughout the game other sports celebrities were introduced. Among them were Connie Smythe, manager of the Maple Leafs; Mr. Selke, business manager of Maple Leaf Gardens; Nat. Ableson, manager of the Ottawa Senators; Wilf Cude, a sensational member of the Detroit Red Wings, and Geo. Patterson, a new member of the Red Wings.

Boys' Band Played

Preceding the games the Boys' Band played several selections, and during the afternoon members of the Rotary Club sold refreshments throughout the crowd.

After the softball game a baseball game was played between Gibbard and Hayburn, which resulted in a win for the A team, with a large score in their favor. Les Richardson and "Walt" Kilrea were referees of this game.

Evening Events

During the evening nearly 1,000 people were at the Armouries for the boxing and wrestling events, and the dance that followed. Several wrestlers and boxers were brought up from Kingston by Ollie Olson.

The bouts were between the following :

Wrestling

Frank and Joe Gallagher. Won by Joe Gallagher.

Earl Ertell, of Kingston, and Tom King, of Wolfe Island. Bout won by King.

Two - Year Old Child Seriously Scalded

Last week the two-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Brown, residing at Moneymore, near Marlbank, was seriously injured when she fell in a pail of boiling water.

When preparing to wash some clothes, Mrs. Brown brought a pail of boiling water into ong room of the house and put it down on the floor. The cries of another child in a different room attracted her attention and she hurried to look after her. In her short absence, the two-year-old child, who was playing around the room, fell backwards into the boiling water, terribly scalding the lower part of her body.

As quickly as possible the child was taken to Dr. Burrows' office at Marlbank, where the burns were treated. At first, it was thought the injuries were so severe that the child could not live. However, since the accident, slch steady progress has been made that there is now considerable hope for a complete recovery.

The little child is the granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Brown, who reside near Centreville.

Apple Crop Small Compared With Previous Year

Toronto. — Apple production in Ontario this summer will be 70 per cent. less than last year, according to a report of the Ontario Department of Agriculture, issued last Friday, on crop conditions.

"The estimated crop of apples in Ontario will be extremely small," the report said. "The more important commercial varieties are the varieties which will have the lightest yield. This year Ontario will be a very few Ben Davis or Snys east of Toronto, while the output of commercial apples in Norfolk is placed at only 40,000 barrels. In Middlesex and Elgin the crop appears slightly better than in the Norfolk-Oxford district. In Georgian Bay the crop is very patchy with great variation in the crop of individual orchards. Whereas apple exports from Ontario last year amounted to over 500,000 barrels it is not expected that such shipments will exceed 100,000 barrels this year."

Strawberry production amounted to about 35 per cent of last years crop, sweet cherries will yield about 30 per cent less and sour cherries 55 per cent. less than last year. Pears, peaches, plums are all much lighter. The grape crop will be practically normal, the report said.

TRY, TRY, TRY AGAIN

More than once the Senate of the United States has been a stumbling block to legitimate progress. It has, by its actions on international issues, forced nations to modify their positions and to get along without the powerful support which might have been expected from the greatest democracy in the world. It was this body which, in 1919, prevented any further development of power from Niagara Falls and forced the Ontario Government to look elsewhere for its supplies. It must not be forgotten when we are criticising the policy of the late Government, in purchasing power from private interests, that they were driven to it as a result of the failure of the Senate of the United States, to permit further diversion of water from the Niagara.

At the present time, Canada is authorized to abstract 36,000 cubic second feet, and the United States 20,000 cubic second feet. Under the most efficient development this would mean 1,100,000 horse-power in the one case and in the other, approximately 600,000 horse-power. In neither case is the full potential, yet realized. One of the reasons is, that the older plants at the Falls are not as efficient as the new plant at Chipnawa and, consequently, are not securing the maximum power available. Several years ago a treaty was negotiated, which would permit further diversion of water for electrical purposes. While Canada ratified the treaty, it was turned down by the United States Senate, because certain members objected to supplying the present company with more power. It was because of this, and because of the pressing need for more power, that the Government of the day was forced to enter negotiations with private power concerns.

Now, however, that there is a President in the United States who has the confidence and support of both Congress and Senate, it may be possible to get the legislation which was denied a few years ago. For this reason, the present Hydro Electric Power Commission has done well to take time by the forelock and open negotiations once more, which might lead to the development of more power from the Falls. The present American Administration has two years to run and it ought to be possible within that time, to secure the necessary consent of all parties.

The Buffalo Evening News, which may be taken to represent the American opinion in the American area contiguous to the Falls, hopes that the negotiations begun by the Ontario Power Commission, may be successful. In an editorial on the subject, last Friday, it said :—

"In 1919 a proposal was advanced for a treaty which would permit a Niagara diversion of 116,000 cubic second feet for power purposes—an increase of 60,000 c. s. f. over the volume now permitted. The idea was to divide the additional diversion equally between the United States and Canada. Thus this country would get 30,000 c. s. f. and the Dominion 60,000. Utilizing the full head, Canada could with its allotment develop 1,980,000 horsepower, and the United States 1,500,000 horsepower. It was said that the diversion of so large a volume of water would not mar the beauty of the cataracts. But the save-Niagara cohorts protested vigorously against the proposal. They would not agree to any enlargement of the diversion. Always they have stood in the way of more Niagara power. It is about time that those in authority looked elsewhere for counsel—that they looked to engineers for guidance in this matter. Certainly a much larger volume of water can be abstracted than now is taken for power, without doing harm to scenic Niagara. It is an economic offense not to use the water up to the limit which a regard for the beauty of the stream would impose. Let it be hoped that the action of the Hydro-Electric Commission of Ontario will lead to a realistic adjustment of the Niagara power question."

Advice, man does not want; he seeks substantiation. Some of the worst men give the best advice. They know. The man that is sick is always offering advice to the well. Advice is cheap when it's cheap advice, and cheap advice is dear at any price.—Van Amburgh.

An elderly business man was travelling in Italy. At the guide conducted the party, of which he was a member, through the ruins of Pompeii, the elderly business man asked when the town had been destroyed. He was told that the calamity had befallen it in 79.

"In '79 ?" he repeated. "Now that's very queer; I was born in '62, so I was seventeen in '79, and I was reading the papers regularly. Somehow I don't seem to recall having heard anything about this place." He paused for a moment, and then he put another question to the guide : " And when are they going to rebuild ?"

100 PERCENT POLITICS

He who calls himself a 100 per cent Briton, or a 100 per cent Frenchman, or a 100 per cent American, is today likely to be the most dangerous and the most effective enemy that his countrymen can have. — Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler.

A CORRECTION

A Contributor has called our attention to an error in an editorial in the issue of July 11. In dealing with the action of the Roman Catholic drive against indecent movies, we said that the number of Roman Catholics in the United States was 65,000,000. The World Almanac for 1934 gives the official Roman Catholic population in the United States as 20,268,403.

We are glad to make this correction and regret the error.

THE NEW BEER POLICY

Temperance people throughout the Province, and those who are interested in the welfare of our young people, may extract a few grains of comfort from the fact that the new beer and wine policy of the Government is not as bad as it might have been. With both parties committed to the sale of beer and wine, before the election, it was with some apprehension the enactments were awaited. Two or three features of the new law are to be commended. It is, of course, a wise provision that there shall be no advertising. There is no need for the brazen and blatant announcement of rival beers, such as mars the highways and the papers of our neighbour to the south. At least, our youth will be spared the suggestive education in the habits of drinking, which advertising, undoubtedly, breeds.

Another feature from which temperance people may get some slight satisfaction, is the ruling which forbids the sale of beer and wine in restaurants and food stands. These are the places most frequented by the young people and, naturally, become the meeting place for social hours. Those who have gone to some expense in fitting up the restaurants in anticipation of a license, will be somewhat disappointed, but the parents of the boys and girls will not worry much over that.

The hours during which the beverage may be sold are unduly long. There can be no reason for keeping the beverage rooms open until midnight. Ten o'clock closing would have been much better and would have afforded a certain measure of protection against conditions which we anticipate with some degree of apprehension.

There was no clear evidence of a demand for this new legislation. But there it is !

At least it is of value ! — the liquor question is now, definitely, out of politics. Temperance people may go on with their work without being charged with political partyism. There is a long fight ahead of the temperance forces. But we hope it may be a fight untrammelled with party affiliations, or personal bitterness which has, too often, marked it in the past few years.

Temperance people will accept the legislation loyally, while, at the same time, working diligently for its gradual abolition.

THE NEW DIRECTOR OF EDUCATION

The changes which are taking place in Queen's Park are of varying degrees of importance. Some of them are being rushed through with almost indecent haste and give rather ominous evidence of something akin to a spoils system in our Provincial affairs. The present Government, which has the confidence of the people, was revealed in its overwhelming majority, ought not to jeopardise its public support by decisions made in haste and on rather obscure grounds.

In the matter of education, however, the Government will win the approval of all who are interested in the training of our youth. The appointment of Duncan McArthur, as Deputy Minister of Education, with powers to direct the educational programme of the Province, is a popular and wise appointment.

It has been well-known, for a long time, that the Department of Education was due for an overhauling — not so much in matter of administration, for the work was administered well—but in the broad approach to the whole modern method of education. Mr. McArthur possesses, not only the courage to make necessary changes; he has, as well, the training and the mental equipment which particularly fits him for the task.

Mr. McArthur is a graduate of Queen's—a University which has been a pioneer in many branches of higher learning — and which has given to Canada leaders in every walk of life. While a student, Mr. McArthur took a wide academic training, with first-class standing. Later, as professor of history, he has made a valuable contribution to the intellectual life of the Province. For some time Mr. McArthur was the editor of the Queen's Quarterly. It was under his leadership that it was reorganized and improved until, to-day, it is recognized as one of the finest university publications. His comments on trends in political life, which have appeared from time to time in its pages, reveal an astute understanding of contemporary movements.

Coming from Queen's University, which is now committed to wide changes in the examination system, and on the whole theory of university education, it is not unreasonable to expect that this new approach may find some place in the policy of the Department. There need be no fear of hasty and ill - considered changes. Mr. McArthur cannot be deemed a radical in politics economics or education. His constant study of world movements, necessitated by his position as professor of history, has given him the long view and enabled him to distinguish the permanent from the transient.

Whatever change may be instituted in our educational system, we are safe in saying, will be broad-based on a wide study of education in all ages and with a practical application of its enduring principles to the complex and exacting demands of our modern civilization.

Editorial Comment

CANADIAN APATHY IN FOREIGN AFFAIRS

But it cannot be denied that ever since the Treaty of Versailles foreign affairs have been treated in Canada as an inconsequential department of statecraft. Premiers have been absorbed in domestic problems, and few members had any special interest or expert knowledge of problems abroad. With the result that year after year foreign affairs have received only a few hours' debate, originating in the estimates of the Department of External Affairs. Public apathy towards international problems accounted for this indifference, which, in turn, had its roots in the peculiarly fortunate position which Canada enjoys from her geographical position. Her only international matter is with a neighbour with whom she has such close social, economic and cultural ties that they forbid the thought of war, and as wide stretches of sea separate her from other countries, she enjoys a security from invasion that is denied most countries.—John Stevenson, in Pacific Affairs (New York).

DOG EATS DOG

The farthest it seems safe to go is to say that Herr Hitler appears to have consolidated his position for the moment by killing off every one capable of exploiting the discontents which clearly prevailed among large sections of the Nazi Storm Troops. His chosen method, a much more likely to drive the disaffection underground than to prevent it spreading. He himself rose to power through the Storm Troops, organised and led by the men who were summarily shot during the week end. These forces, having become dangerous, are to be reduced in number and kept in proper subjection. The Leader will depend, in future, much more upon the species of Ogpu police—it is remarkable how one dictatorship resembles another—which has been formed from the picked men among them, and perhaps even more upon the Regular Army, the Reichswehr, which, if it did not participate actively, at any rate gave him its passive support in getting rid of his old helpers and associates. — London Times.

THOSE BAFFLING BASQUES

Here is an interesting theory put forward by Professor Whitney, the American philologist. In the course of his researches, Whitney was amazed at the many resemblances he discovered between Basque and the dialects of some of the North American Indians — resemblances so strange that he could not think them merely accidental. Francis Michel, in "Le Pays Basques," maintained that Basque sailors were familiar with the coasts of Newfoundland for centuries before Columbus. The question has even been raised whether, instead of Europeans discovering America, it was the Basques who came from America and discovered Europe ! — Miscellany.

HIS MASTER'S VOGUE

The waiter's uniform, now included among the latest items prohibited in Berlin, furnishes one of the numerous instances of a masculine fashion perpetuated by the gradual acquisition of a gentleman's cast-off clothing by his servants, though with a slight variation from the general rule. The powdered footman, who still lingers in a few households, wears the costume of a dandy of the time of George II.; the Lord Mayor of London's coachman would in the reign of George III. have been indistinguishable in dress from a nobleman on his way to Court, and the page-boy, with his three rows of buttons, suffers in what is known in the early nineteenth century as the "Dutch Skeleton Suit," the fashionable garb of boys of the upper classes. The variation, of course, and the cause of all the pother, is that the waiter has adopted "tails" evening dress before it has been discarded by the gents themselves. — Miscellany.

TO DISCOURAGE OTHERS

A good way of diminishing the enthusiasm for lotteries, which might be adopted by Governments which had been induced to sanction them but which were not altogether satisfied with the results, is suggested by some news from France. In the first of the recently authorized State lotteries the tickets for which, by the way, are not supposed to be sold out of France, which is in striking contrast to the Irish attitude the name of a retired postmaster was published as having won a million francs. It was a mistake, and he had won nothing — but he is now dealing with as many letters, all of the begging variety, as he ever had to handle before he retired from Post Office duties, and they are all addressed to himself.

It is the type of mistake that will might cure many people of a taste for lottery tickets. So a Government which desired to see lotteries die a natural death might decide to draw three names for every prize — one right and two wrong. The right name would get the money (and the begging letters); the two wrong ones would get just the begging letters and if they, and many other customers, did not rapidly come to the conclusion that this was a much more baleful business than merely drawing a blank, they might be justly regarded as a little slow in the uptake.—Miscellany.

SAXON MONTHS

The new Nazi nomenclature of the months according to the agricultural seasons would have been readily intelligible to our Saxon ancestors. An Anglo-Saxon calendar, preserved in the Cottonian Library, is illustrated with pictures of ploughing, cutting of firewood, hay-time, and harvest; and the months bear kindred designations. January is known as "Wolfmonath," owing to the ravenous character of wolves at that inclement period, and also "Aefter-Yula," or after Christmas. February is "Sprout Kale," for being kale-wurt, extensively used in making broth. March is "Illyd-monath," or stormy month; and so on till we reach October as "Cold-month," and also "Wyn-monath," if wine month. November is "Wind-monath" or Wind month," whe nthe storm blew, and December as "Aeron Geola," when the sun "turns his glorious course." After the introduction of Christianity, it is said that the monks retained the names of the Heptarchy in "The Unlettered" have ever been at ease with them.—Miscellany.

WEDDINGS AND TELEPHONES

Enterprise seems to be the mark of the telephone service. Its services, but the mandarins concerned are more enterprising in Australia than elsewhere. Here the Postal General invites us to buy our own instruments if we want the latest pattern; in Australia the service is actually prepared to give something away, for it is recommended that the authorities "will remit $5 of the annual rental in cases where a telephone has been installed as a present given as a wedding present." At the same time it is pointed out that this concession is to be regarded "as the stroke of practical business policy entirely divorced from sentiment."

Presumably the argument is that those who have once had a telephone in their house would be entirely free from all temptation to do without it, if left for ever in people's way. His decision might also be regarded as an inducement to matrimony, which is generally regarded as a useful institution and deserving of encouragement from the State. — Miscellany.

A CHOICE OF STYLES

A correspondent who signs himself "Paddy" sends the following little jingle to "Miscellany," accompanied by the inquiry, "Which is it ?" Are things getting any cleaner
Now we're ruled by De Valera
Or maybe a little yallerer
Since we voted for De Valera ?
Let us hope the progress is cleaner,
With a chief called De Valera !
And the Government go far
With our head De Valera !
As for answering the problem thus presented, it depends on whether you want to agree with the owner of the name or with the majority of those who use it in this country. The general pronunciation of reasonably well-informed people in this island makes the name rhyme with " lire " or " clearer." if you don't mind the cockney rhymes as used throughout the above jingle. On the other hand when Mr. DeValera first emerged into political prominence some dozen or so years ago he was once asked by an English reporter how he pronounced his name and his reversion put the accent on the first syllable—in other words, it rhymed with the "yallerer" of the second couplet given above.

Intending purists must please themselves whether they use the De Valerian method or that of the mercury School and Preaching Service. It is most desirable to pronounce a man's name as he himself pronounces it, but in the case of such a notable example of being "agin the Government" as this, there is perhaps a certain roguish justice in doing the other thing.—Miscellany.

INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON, JULY 22ND, 1934

I KINGS, 19 : 9 - 21.

"ELIJAH HEARS GOD'S VOICE"

Today's lesson takes us into the realm of political adventuring. Making alliances against a common enemy is no new thing. Offensive and defensive alliances have played a large part in changing the national aspect of peoples, throughout the centuries. Today, with the partial failure of the League of Nations to achieve peace by common arbitration, the movement toward alliances has received new impetus.

In the historic situation described in the lesson, Ahab, King of Israel, Jehoshaphat, King of Judah, and together and made an aggressive pact against the King of Syria. They planned to combine their forces in order to wrest from Syria, Ramoth Gilead. There was no apparent reason to have courage to stand against accepted traditions and popular movements. The prophets of God, the leaders of the church, have need to evaluate the extreme nationalism in the world in the light of the Gospel of Jesus. Of course, it will be argued that there have always been wars, and that there are times when it is necessary to fight. In the light which shines from Zion's Hill, it becomes increasingly clear, that war which debases and injures human personality, is contrary to the mind of Him who is the Head of the Church.

In our day, the full effects of a system of mal-distribution of life's goods, have become manifest. The Church, once more, is in the system which made that inevitable. It has given its benediction and blessing to institutions which have had a devastating effect on millions of human beings. The great half-heartedly raised its voice against an order of society which is essentially selfish and soulless. Christian people, men and women of Christian life and ideals, need courage to stand against the current, and say before the world, the things which come to them in the conscience.

In doing this, we may have to go against One four hundred. But even so, one with God is a majority.

ELIJAH'S DISCOURAGEMENT

It was a great tribute to the prophetic movement and organization of the day, that there was, at least, one of the religious leaders who had courage to advise against an unpopular course of action and to go against the will and the wishes of the majority. It is never an easy stand to take, and yet the whole trend of history is that men of courage, conscience and conviction have been vindicated in future events. Only let a man be true to his conscience, true to the inner light as he sees it, and he will find himself often enough running counter to popular opinion, but on the side of eternal values.

In every walk of life, today, there is a clamor for men and women who have courage to stand against accepted traditions and popular movements. The prophets of God, the leaders of the church, have need to evaluate the extreme nationalism in the world in the light of the Gospel of Jesus. Of course, it will be argued that there have always been wars, and that there are times when it is necessary to fight. DESERONTO

Highway Accident

On Sunday evening, July 15th, Miss Emma Maracle, Tyendinaga, was knocked down and sustained serious injuries when she stepped in front of a car driven by Ed. Howard, of Deseronto. Howard was driving his car westward along Highway No. 2, about two miles south of Marysville, when Miss Maracle, who was walking with a gentleman, suddenly stepped in front of the car in an attempt to cross the highway. The driver sought to avoid hitting her, but the front right fender hurled her to the pavement. Mr. Howard took the injured lady to the doctor's office in Deseronto, where treatment was given her, and then took her to the Belleville General Hospital. X-rays revealed that Miss Maracle was suffering from slight concussion. It is believed that when she was thrown to the pavement she must have struck her head. Latest reports from Belleville are that she is progressing favorably.

Field Day

The field day, sponsored by the Deseronto merchants, and held on Wednesday, July 11th, at Woodbine Tourist Park, was a decided success. About 300 picnickers were present. A programme of sports, including a 440-race for men and boys, married men's race, old ladies' race, old man's race, children's races, potato and shoes race, sack race, punt race, and punt tilting, were keenly contested. At the end of the sports baskets were brought out and supper was served on the lawn.

The Belleville Canada Dry softball team met and defeated the Deseronto Grads at the school ground on Wednesday evening. In the first three innings it looked like an easy victory for the home team, as they were leading the Drys 8-4, but in the sixth innings the Drys came to life and, brought their total up to 13 runs by the end of the game, whereas the Grads failed to get into the score column again. Final score was Drys 13, Grads 8.

The male chorus, under the leadership of Mr. Crossman, of Empey Hill, took part in the church service in Wilton on Sunday evening, July 15th. The service was conducted by the W. M. S., owing to the absence of the pastor, Dr. Fletcher, visiting. Three splendid musical numbers were rendered by the choir. Mrs. T. Tunnicliffe taking the solo parts, while Mrs. Robinson performed at the organ. Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Babcock entertained the choir at the close of the service.

Mr. Martin Hart, caretaker of the postoffice for the past 31 years, has just been superannuated. He received the appointment in 1903, under the Laurier administration. He is succeeded by Harry Fraser, son of Mr. and Mrs. B. A. Fraser. Mr. Fraser was a C.N.R. junior railway employee, having spent a number of years in service in the north country, and since his retirement from railroad work he returned to and has resided in Deseronto.

In police court, Harvey Scriver was given a two years' suspended sentence and was placed under bail of $500.00 bond to keep the peace, on a charge of resisting the police in he performance of their duties. Scriver was given a sentence of seven days in jail, as well, for driving a car while under the influence of liquor.

With deep regret the many friends of A. G. Bogart learned of the passing of his sister, Mrs. R. Siler, on Saturday afternoon, at Peterboro, in her 74th year, at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Thos. She leaves to mourn her passing one daughter, Mrs. T. Mark, of Peterboro; three brothers, A. G. Bogart, of Deseronto; Alonzo Bogart, of Toronto; Reuben Bogart, of Brantford; and one sister, Mrs. Buchanan, of Belleville.

The community is proud of the showing of its entrance pupils, as a result of the recent examinations, when Miss Ruth Boyce, who passed in her examinations both locally and departmentally, with honors, is to be especially commended. Those who passed on recommendation are Harold Blakely, Edith Blakely, Jack Salt, Ruthven Hall, Jean Hodgson, Leola Leverton, Norman Purdy, Jeannette Rendall, Mary Tracy, Millie Roach; and those who passed on written examinations are Robert Blakely, Ruth Boyce (hons.), Jean McVicker, Jim Mitchell, Bob Sharpe, Gene Sneed, Rene Therrien, Aase Thompson, Jack Whitton.

ENTERPRISE

Enterprise, July 23. — While at work in the highway in the vicinity of Erinsville, Clarence Bell had the misfortune to have the thumb of his right hand severely injured when it was struck with a sledge while he was holding a drill while drilling in rock, preparatory for blasting. It was at first thought that the thumb was so badly crushed that it would be necessary to amputate it, but, after being treated, it is thought that such an operation will not be necessary. He will be laid up for some time as a result of his injuries.

During the past few days this district has been visited by several severe electric storms. Fortunately no great damage has been done. The residence of Fred Wagar, northwest of here, was struck by a bolt of lightning, which knocked several bricks out of a chimney, but caused no further damage. Daniel Kennedy lost two head of cattle, and Fairlie Bros. one cow, killed by lightning during the recent storms.

Chas. Crandall, Principal Master of Victoria Lodge, A. F. & A. M., at Centreville, was in attendance as a delegate at the session of Grand Lodge, which was held in Toronto during the past week.

On Thursday evening a meeting of the Directors of the Addington Agricultural Society was held at Centreville, and plans were made in connection for the annual show, which will be held in September. This show has been an annual event for some years past.

A number from here attended the social on Tuesday evening of last week, which was held under the auspices of St. Anthony's Church, at Centreville. A very large crowd was in attendance.

On Thursday evening a very successful social

YORKSHIRE PUDDING
Yorkshire pudding, made in the right way, should always be light. It should rise high above the edges of the tin in which it is baked. If the pudding is solid and heavy, when served, like squares of yellow putty, there has been a mistake somewhere. Many Yorkshire puddings are spoilt through a too liberal use of flour; others because the oven is too cold.
Always measure the flour carefully and allow one slightly heaped tablespoonful for each person who will be present at the meal. If eggs are plentiful and a specially nice pudding is wanted, allow one small egg per person. If, however, economy must be practised, use one large egg to every two tablespoonfuls of flour. Put the flour and a pinch of salt in a bowl and add the eggs, one by one, unbeaten. Mix with a wooden spoon but do not beat. Now add milk slowly, and stirring all the time to prevent lumps) till the batter is like a thick cream. Add a bare dessertspoonful of water for each egg—this will make the pudding much lighter than if milk alone is used—and allow it to stand for at least half an hour. Do not use baking powder.
Take in a hot oven, in a wide, shallow tin in which just enough fat for the bottom has been previously been melted and made hot. Place the tin in the upper part of the oven, or wherever the greatest heat will come from above, and bake till a pale golden brown. Cut into family of four, will usually take about fifteen minutes.
Cut in squares and serve immediately, either, with gravy, before the meat—as it is served in Yorkshire—or with the meat, vegetables, and gravy.

Notes From The Agricultural Office

Prof. H. Ell and Mr. Jas. Bryden of the Chemistry Department O. A. C., Guelph, visited the demonstration plots of fertilizer with barley, on the farm of Mr. J. B. Elliott and with potatoes on the farm of Mr. James Foster, Moscow. At Mr. Foster's, thirty farmers gathered after supper on Friday evening and enjoyed a talk on the use of commercial fertilizers. Samples of different materials used in the makeup of the commercial mixtures were used to illustrate the talk.
While no results are available on the plots as yet, Prof. Bell used charts compiled from hundreds of experiments conducted all over the province during the last five years. These charts were valuable in showing the grade and quantity of fertilizer that give the best results on the different crops. The results of the plots will be watched with interest by the farmers of the Moscow district.
At Mr. J. B. Elliott's the plots of fertilized barley are ripening earlier than the check plot. The growth of straw was much stronger and having attained the height of four to six inches throughout the season. The heads are longer and the all appearance the yield will be from eight to ten bushels per acre more.
Another point noted was a better stand on the Alfalfa seeding on the fertilized plots. Portions of the plots and the check plot will be cut this week and the yield taken.
Prof. Bell expressed the opinion that commercial fertilizer could be used to advantage on the cash crops and vegetables grown in the county.

THE BITER BIT

The large number of people who like to read of "biters being bit" may be interested to know that the poetic justice they relish is quite often handed out by nature. In different parts of the world owls have recently been found dead, choked by rats which they had failed to swallow. It is, of course, just possible that death was due to the rats having been poisoned and the poison having reacted in the owls. But that does not seem likely, as the rats were still in the owls' beaks or stomachs and were the rats mind feet and its tail hung from different corners of the bird's beak. A seagull which had behaved in much the same way was once found by an acquaintance of the writer's. The gull was lying dead on the foreshore with a rat stuck halfway down its gullet.
Herons often spear and eat water voles, but a few weeks ago a heron which had been killed by its prey was found. The vole had bitten the heron's throat on the way down the bird's gullet," and this and the death of the heron, though it did not save the vole. At various times numbers of herons have died miserably as a result of biting off more than they can chew; when fishing in pools fit by the retreating tide the birds have thrust their sword-like beaks right through large flat fish which they could not shake off.—Miscellany.

"NATURAL PRODUCTS"

The term "natural product" in the Natural Products Marketing Act, 1934, includes animals, meats, eggs, wool, dairy products, grains, seeds, fruit and fruit products, vegetables and vegetable products, maple products, honey, tobacco, lumber, and such other natural products of agriculture of the farm, forest, field, orchard, and any article of food or drink wholly or partly manufactured or derived from any such product that may be designated by the Governor in Council, in accordance with the provisions of the Act. The Natural Products Marketing Act, in the words of the preamble, is "an act to improve the methods and practices of marketing of natural products in Canada and in export trade, and to make further provision in connection therewith."

In the Live Stock Pavilion at the Canadian National Exhibition there is accommodation for 2000 head of cattle, 1500 sheep and 1200 swine.

Canada's Economic Future

Canada's industrial future is based on the development of her natural resources, on rich stores of hydro-electric power, a widely-spread system of transportation and communications, and on the character of an enterprising and virile population. Coasts, lakes and rivers furnish an abundant supply of fish which have won their fay into the food requirements of many countries. Wild life and fur farms form the last great fur preserves of the world. Great industries include the production of flour, packing products, fish products, tobaccos, wines and distilled liquors, refined sugar, clothing, lumber, pulp and paper, automobiles, rubber tires and footwear, and leather footwear, gasoline and fuel oils, fertilizers and heavy chemicals. Canada's home trade is ensured great expansion, and the external commerce of the Dominion ranks high among the trading nations of the world.
Canada is one of the largest exporter of wheat among all the countries of the world, and her agriculture produces far more than sufficient for exports. Canada also produces large crops of oats and other grains, but mainly for home consumption. The dairy herds of the Dominion supply the home market with butter and cheese, and exports of the latter have risen so high as $23,980,000, pounds, with more recently home demand has absorbed the greater part on an increased scale. Canadian poultry has just lately increased her exports of cattle and meats, sales of bacon to the United Kingdom having grown phenomenally since the coming into force of the Empire trade agreements in 1932. Sugar beets grown in Canada supply about a seventh of the refined sugar produced in the Dominion. Canadian apples hold a prominent position in the markets of Great Britain, and Canadian leaf has won an established place in the tobacco industry of the world.

Mineral Production

Canada stands first in the production of nickel, first in asbestos, second in platinum, gold and zinc, third in silver and copper and fourth in lead, among the world's producers. The mineral production of Canada in 1933 was valued at $290,502,000. The newly-valued Canadian mineral production was recorded in 1929 at $310,850,000. The largest contributors to the 1933 total of Canada's mineral output last year were: gold $84,301,000, coal $35,881,000, copper $21,631,000, nickel $20,130,000, natural gas $8,263,000, zinc $6,346,000, lead $6,321,000, silver $5,731,000, asbestos $5,211,000 and petroleum $3,083,000. Canada is now one of the chief producers of platinum, which is also mined mainly from the nickel - copper ores; and quite recently cadmium and selenium have been added to the list of metals produced in Canada.
The Dominion is richly endowed with both coal and water power. The probable coal reserves are estimated at 80,000 million tons. The main measures are in Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, Saskatchewan, Alberta and British Columbia, and are chiefly bituminous. Annual production has risen from 2 million tons to over seventeen million tons. Canadian mines supply about half the coal that has been used, the rest having been imported, chiefly from the United States and the United Kingdom. The water power resources are conservatively estimated at 43,700,000 h.p., but only about 5,000,000 h.p. has so far been developed. The Province of Quebec leads in water power resources, but the other large reserves are in Ontario, Manitoba and British Columbia. The total installation in Canada at the end of 1933 was 7,332,000 h.p., and the production of electric energy in 1932 is estimated at 16,052 million kilowatt hours.
The products of the manufactures of Canada in 1930 were valued at $3,428 million. The peak value in the industry for manufactures was reached in 1929 with $4,629 million. The largest items among Canada's manufacturing industries, in point of gross value produced, is pulp and paper with a valuation in 1930 of $215,674,000. Slaughtering and meat packing ranked second in 1930 at $164,029,000, and flour and grist mills third at $144,855,000. The largest source of raw materials for manufactures is vegetable products with forests second, while iron and steel ranks third, animal products fourth, fifth, and mineral materials for textiles and iron and steel are largely imported, but the bulk of the value of the total output of industry are native products of Canada.

HIGHWAY COMPLETED THROUGH ROCKIES

Sunwapta drive, the completed section of the Jasper-Banff highway, has become very popular since its opening.
Besides its unusual scenic attractions, which include a close view of the tumbling, roaring Athabasca Falls, there are glimpses of Mts. Ramsay and Brazeau in a narrow gorge under the highway ,this road affords easy access to lovely little lakes and streams where fishing is a thrill. These have been hidden from the main arteries of travel and are now made available by the guided parties.
Bigger rainbow trout have made their home undisturbed in these lakes and splendid fishing can now be enjoyed. Many parties already have been made there this season.
Countless other such beauty spots lie hidden from the fascinating sport to find these hidden places, and Jasper Park, with its thousands of acres of woodland, mountain ranges, lakes and streams, still has much to be discovered by the visitor.
It is good to have money and the things it can buy, but it is also good to be able to look back and discover that you haven't lost something that money can't buy.—George H. Lorimer.

WALLPAPERS AT BARGAIN PRICES — AT HOOPER'S DRUG STORE

A Woman Sees For The First Time

Blind All Her Life, She Is In a London Hospital Learning To Identify Objects and Soon Will Get New Insight Into Sightless.

For the first time in history, a woman, who has been blind all her life, is learning to see.
As she learns she is discovering ideas, impressions and beauty that always been blind have of the world about them; and when her long lesson is finished, doctors will have an entirely new insight into the psychology of the blind.
No one before has ever "seen" things first entirely through their fingers, then through the more reliable flash of form and colour.
The woman, who is more than thirty is a patient in the Central London (England) Ophthalmic Hospital, where a Welsh surgeon, Dr. Tudor Thomas, has grafted two healthy "corners" from the eyes of two elderly patients on to her eyes.
The first operation was performed in November, the second in January, and four months since her eyes were unbandaged, and, though it is now certain that the operations have been successful, it will be a long time yet before muscles and brain have adjusted themselves fully to the strange act of seeing.

Blackboard Lessons

She has a room at the hospital full of blackboards of all sizes, many draw pictures of ships and flowers and faces, teaching her what they are.
Sometimes she is asked to fill in the details. For example, a steamer will be drawn complete with funnels and she will fill in the smoke—and perhaps the sun rising in the background. Other days she will study pictures of those traditional animals which grace any children's picture book.
Even the "letters of the alphabet must be learned afresh. For though she is an expert at Braille, she had no previous idea of the shape of any ordinary letter.
She has now got to the stage of "the cat ate the rat," and can herself write out simple sentences, sometimes with the "P's" — bugbear of every child—inverted. The letters on which she started to read were a foot long. She has now got down to letters of two inches.
She is in the position of a baby learning to see with the added drawback that the necessary muscles have been idle for thirty years. Thus she can use them at all is as much a miracle as the restoration of movement to a lifeless limb.
Her greatest surprise is that people's faces are so different, and parallel with that is her new love of man's.
No description, she says, had ever conveyed to her how individual is the sum of a nose, mouth, and two eyes, which she had always imagined must give very much the same answer. Even now she is only just learning to distinguish the faces of those who come to see her.
Similarly she found it hard to believe that a cat and dog could really be so different when each was made of a body, a head, four legs and a tail. And this is a woman of trained intelligence and active brain. She has only been blind.

Color a Delight

One of the greatest difficulties which her teachers have had to overcome has been that of making her see things as a whole.
The reason? Blind persons run their fingers over and round, and up and down, anything they want to know, gradually building up their impression. She wanted to do the same thing with her eyes.
Passing is another difficulty, and our almost instinctive habit of translating a flat picture into solid forms. But once she has seen anything she will always know it again, although she likes to feel it also to compare the old impression with the new.
Her greatest pleasure is in color, although curiously enough she was the one thing which her eyes could before distinguish, but only in the mass — for example, the difference between the red of a fine sunset and the green of fields.
Now there is vividness and contrast as well, and her greatest desire, as her bandages come off, is to be unblind, is to see the country in its fullness.
Already she has more than once been taken out of London for the day. But, although she can in a measure see landscape, she finds that there is too much to be taken in at once. Another difficulty is that she must still wear dark glasses when in a bright light, to protect her eyes.
Although her identity is known only, at present, to the hospital staff and a few close friends, it can be stated she has been actively concerned in the work for the blind and hopes to return to it, when she has learned to use her eyes more fully, with renewed zest.

SALMON RUN MAKES NEW RECORD

Vastly improved over last year, so much so, in fact, that there is no comparison, the sockeye salmon run in Prince Rupert district during the first ten days of the 1934 season, has given promise of a production which will compare favorably in volume with the previous big cycle year of 1930, when a pack of 1,000,000 cases of this variety was recorded. All indications now point to an exceptional run and pack. The daily average for the first ten days on the Skeena and Nass rivers has been placed at from twenty to twenty-five fish per boat with the highest boat reported as having had 75 fish. There are slightly over 1,000 boats fishing on the Skeena river and some 225 on the Nass river. Early reports from the southern areas of Prince Rupert district also indicate a good run of sockeye.

Radio broadcasting stations will be seen in operation in the Electrical and Engineering Building at the Canadian National Exhibition this year.

COOKING FOR ONE OR LESS

BY WEARE HOLBROOK
N. Y. Herald Tribune Magazine

One of the standard wedding presents thirty years ago was "The Family Cook Book and Compendium of Household Knowledge"—a big fat volume bound in white oilcloth. Usually it was given to the bride by some distant relative who was skeptical of the young woman's culinary abilities. It was a veritable encyclopaedia, designed for "emergencies" of heroic scale; every recipe sounded like the piece de resistance for a bridge party.
Later, as the typical American home shrank to a kitchenette apartment, this monumental work was supplanted by a slimmer volume entitled "Cooking For Two." It did not assume that the housewife made her own butter, soap and candles. The proportions of the recipes were cut down, the processes were simplified and no attempt was made to disguise the fact that there was, after all, a delicatessen shop just around the corner.
But now it's about time for an even slimmer volume entitled "Cooking for One." And the book is to serve as a wedding present it should be given to the bridegroom, not the bride. In spite of getting showered with cards, woman's place is in the office more often than in the home. When she rarely has bread to be sawed on her nose, man is thrown upon his own resources—sometimes as early as eight o'clock in the morning.
It is almost impossible for a married female to remain permanently on the much vaunted 50-50 basis. The division of responsibilities may be clearly defined at first, but soon it is blurred by what is known as "emergencies" — social, economic or physical.
If both husband and wife are employed outside the home they invariably start out with a definite system, and what's more, they tell you about it—that is, unless you've had to know that she does not slight her domestic duties and the husband learns to make it quite clear that he is no comic-strip spouse in apron and mad-cap. "Of course, I have to get up before he does," says she "but I always fix his orange juice before I go out, and slice the bread for the toast, and make the coffee." "It's very simple," says he.
But then there comes a morning when she oversleeps and is obliged to dash away without performing these homely rites, and the husband is faced by the dismal prospect of getting his own breakfast alone in a silent apartment with no one to turn to for advice or encouragement or even argument. This is on such occasions that a treatise on "Cooking for One" would be a comfort. Even though the assistant chef might not use it as a guide, he could refer to it after the smoke had cleared away and find out what he should have done.
Until this much-needed book is published, men must muddle along and learn while they burn. But the intermediate stage is not quite so few instructions in the rudiments of breakfast getting which may help them to keep alive at the least shock of masculine independence.
A man may be a fantastic impressionist painter, but he is a witty raconteur during the cocktail hour—and he learns early and often that at eight o'clock in the morning. The ideal breakfast getter is the strong silent who stands flat-footed and resolute, ready to cope with any contingency .He does not whistle to keep his courage up, and in the moments of emotional stress he uses the simple Anglo - Saxon expletives of his forefathers.
Before starting to prepare breakfast it is advisable to make out a tentative menu, such as orange juice, iced cantelouge, cereal, scrambled eggs with bacon, toast and coffee. Then eliminate the canteloupe, the eggs and the bacon. After all, a light breakfast is better for the digestion and much easier to assemble. If you eat a hearty breakfast it gives you a sort of contented feeling that you don't care whether you put across any Big Deals or not, for remember, discontent is the mother of progress and the best way to achieve the progress of discontent is to get your own breakfast.
Let us assume then, that the meal will consist of orange juice, toast and coffee. If you are in the habit of taking your orange juice externally, or through the eye, simply cut an orange in two and dig into it with a pointed spoon until you feel thoroughly sticky; then give yourself a brisk rubdown with a dry bath towel.
But if you prefer to drink the juice, you must hunt up the orange squeezer, which is on the top shelf behind the woodwinds and brasses. It is a small glass object with a corrugated dome surrounded by a trough. When you press half an orange against the corrugations the juice runs down the corrugations into the trough; then, when you attempt to pour it into a glass you find the trough clogged up with by-products and the juice runs over the tablecloth. (Note: Keep a tablecloth handy.) Wash with soap and water, bleach in the sun and apply potassium permanganate. Or cover with plate and say nothing about).
The cereal is probably the most attractive part of the breakfast because it requires no preparation. You merely open the breakfast food and shake it right out of the package into the bowl. And then you read the blurbs on the box as you eat, and persuade yourself that the stuff is doing you a lot of good.
Eating cereal without milk or cream is about as comfortable as eating sawdust sprinkled with sand, but we do not recommend it—unless you happen to be a horse. There are two methods of opening a milk bottle: (1) by incision, or (2) by pressure, and usually it is necessary to use both before you get the bottle open. The former consists in sticking the blue of a fork or the point of a knife into the cap and prying it up. Sometimes the cap leaps from the neck of the bottle like a clay pigeon released from a trap; but more often it refuses to budge. Then the pressure method must be resorted to. Grasp the bottle firmly with the left hand, place the thumb of the right hand on the cap, close the eyes and press down. The cap will give way suddenly, and the white geyser will spurt ceiling-ward. This means that you have struck milk All you have to do it to mop up the overflow and pour the remainder of the bottle over your cereal.
Thus far your meal has been cold; you have managed two courses without the aid of fire. But this sort of thing cannot go on forever, unless you belong to one of the raw-food cults. In order to make coffee you must use heat, and in order to get heat you must light the stove.
Have no illusions about gas stoves; they are every bit as formidable as they look. It is not for nothing that their makers give them such names as "Perfect," "Ajax," "Defender" and "Invincible." Unless you know your stove, you should practise lighting it before filling the coffee pot, because you may never need the coffee pot after all. Gas stoves seldom blow up nowadays, but they like to give the impression that they could blow up if they wanted to. They have a playful habit of popping at you when you try to light them. Women apparently don't mind being popped at, but the average man finds it extremely disconcerting.
Before lighting a gas stove you should look it over to see which handle belongs to what. If, for example, you turned the handle marked "Oven" and then attempted to light one of the burners, nothing would happen for a long time—but when it did happen you would never forget it.
As soon as you have chosen your burner (the corner ones are preferable because you always felt a breeze in the summer time) turn it on and step back quickly to avoid immediate asphyxiation. Then strike a light and advance cautiously toward the stove, with the match extended at arm's length as if it were a piece of meat and the stove a large dog that you don't know very well. Many men use a fencing position, with the feet far apart and the knees a-limbo, ready for a spring backward, and the match held like a rapier.
When the match has burned to your fingertips, step back, light another, and resume your lion-tamer's pose, bringing the match gradually closer to the burner until it is almost touching the ring. Just as you are beginning to think that the gas must have been turned off—Puff! Flash! and the burner is lighted and roaring like a little furnace.
Now for the coffee pot again. Take the percolator to the sink and fill it half full of water. Place two heaping tablespoonfuls of ground coffee in the top of the percolator and set it on the stove. Then hitch up the percolator, get out the bread and cut off two wedge-shaped slices—one for burning and one for eating. Put a slice of bread in the toaster and then duck around and have a look at the coffee. If the percolator is not plugging yet, turn the gas higher. It should glug at ten-second intervals.
While you are timing the percolator you will become aware of a new smell; this means that the toast needs attention immediately. As you dash back to the toaster you will probably crack your head against the open door of the cupboard above the sink, knocking your back fillings loose and bringing tears to your eyes. (This will happen to you several seventeen times before you develop what is known as the "Kilchenette crouch," so you might as well get used to it.)
After scraping and turning the toast, or inaugurating a new piece, return to the stove and investigate the coffee situation again. The old saying that a watched pot never boils" does not apply to percolators; it is only by watching the glass top that you can tell how strong the coffee is.
As soon as you think the coffee is done, go to the china closet and get a cup. On your way back you will drop one of the cups on the electric toaster—but never mind; cups come in sets and most of the chain stores sell stuff of them. Get another cup and carry it back to the table, which may be located by smoke signals from the toaster. Then turn off the gas, pick up the percolator gingerly and bring it over to the table.
The rest is quite simple. First you tilt the percolator over your cup and pour copiously at the spout for symptoms of coffee. Nothing happens. After that you till it a little more—and suddenly the glass top and all the internal mechanism of the percolator drop into your cup with a splash, spattering the china and spraying damp coffee grounds all over the table.
Then you put on your hat and totter over to that haven of emancipation, cafeterias and emaciated men—the corner drug store. There you get a 25-cent club breakfast consisting of orange juice, toast, coffee and paper dollies.
And if you hurry you may get back in time to pay your wife a check.

Nowhere else in Canada is the unquestioned business recovery so emphasized as at the Canadian National Exhibition. The uptrend was quite apparent last year and Exhibition officials assert that there is ample indication of further progress toward normalcy this year. The agricultural section is particularly marked in the industrial section.

"Exploring" in the park of the Canadian National Exhibition is one of the new thrills. People who have been accustomed to visiting only certain buildings and exhibits in which they are most interested find new sensations and delights in most unexpected quarters. It takes two to explore days to "do" the Exhibition properly.

It did not take long to convince the directors of the Canadian National Exhibition that the withdrawal of the Strolling Troubadours on Prince Edward Island was unpopular. Public opinion demanded its return last year and this year the national groups of singers and instrumentalists in the costume of their respective countries, singing their national airs, will again be an attraction on Music Day.

DOMINION-WIDE LAW

By the rescinding or regulation No. 40 of the Meat and Canned Foods Act, the provisions of Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, and Prince Edward Island at their own request will be governed by regulations established under the provisions of this Act respecting the inspection of meats in the same manner as the other provinces of the Dominion. Up to the present, these provinces were exempt from the export regulations applying to the inter-provincial shipment of carcasses, portions, or products between these provinces. So far as regards the provisions of the Act, each of the maritime Provinces, in future, will be treated as a separate unit in line with Dominion-wide law.

THE MUSKOKA FOREST

During their investigations of an outbreak of the eastern hemlock looper caterpillar in the region of Muskoka Lakes in the province of Ontario, the results of which are published in the June number of Scientific Agriculture, officers of the Dominion Entomological Branch noted that the regional forest might be divided into three main types. One type included old sands of hemlock, either pure or mixed to a small extent with white pine and different hardwoods, such as the sugar maple and American elm. This type of forest is mostly over 80 years old and has not been cut-over. It is the most exposed to the recent hemlock looper attack. The undergrowth is composed of the mountain maple, blueberries, and in the very dense stands the soil is covered with needle of the fir. Natural reproduction of hemlock occurs in places where windfalls have occurred in the stands.

Wild stands of white pine which cover mostly the south and southwest sides of the hills and the valley situations represent the second type. These white pine stands also contained old age growth and were suffered only little from fires. Frequently the stands are mixed with hardwoods such as white and red oak, yellow and white birch. Hemlock is scattered here and there only and was not attacked by the looper.

The third type covers land recently burned over that consists of hardwoods with scattered hemlock and white pine, principally in the pre-pasture story stage for either the first or second type. Very few old hardwood stands can be found. Birches and poplars begin the process of reforestation on the bare land, on account of their light seed and their ability to grow on poor soils. Maples come next in succession and some oaks occur here and there. In most situations these young stands are mostly so dense that no other flora is able to exist beneath them. On south slopes and in dry places, this process of natural reforestation, mostly many obstacles, the soil being covered by blueberries and weeds which are strong competitors with forest reproduction.

APPLE PRODUCTION SATURATION POINT

Canadian commercial apple production in 1933 was one of the largest on record, due mainly to a record crop in Nova Scotia. The average annual increase of recent years in Quebec was maintained, while Ontario also produced a somewhat larger crop than the previous season. In British Columbia, however, production fell short of the record yield of 1932, and the total crop was smaller in 1933, and the realization that production in the Okanagan Valley will equal if not exceed the 1933 figure, illustrates quite clearly, says a Dominion Fruit Branch report, that the saturation point of profitable marketing on both domestic and export markets will, at least, be approximated, assuming, of course, that competitors of Canada in export markets will, at least, maintain present production and export levels. Production during the coming season in Ontario, and probably other parts of Eastern Canada, may be less than previous seasons. In British Columbia, however, production fell short of the record yield of 1932

Sales of Branded Beef
Show Decided Increase

Consumer appreciation of top quality beef is indicated by the steadily increasing demand for branded beef.

Sales for May, 1934, amounted to some 4,766,360 pounds as compared with 2,754,878 pounds for May, 1933. The increase in sales of branded beef for the first five months of 1934, as compared with those of the same period last year, amounts to approximately thirty-three per cent. Such figures, of course, apply to domestic sales only.

Garden Poison Mixture

Young seedlings in gardens are frequently destroyed by cutworms which eat through the stem, just at the surface of the soil. A good poisoned bran mixture for their control is made as follows: Mix thoroughly 1 lb. Paris Green with 20 lb. bran, while both are dry. Dissolve one quart of molasses in 2 gallons or more of water, then pour this into the poisoned bran and stir until all the bran is moistened thoroughly. Use smaller quantities than a quart of bran, 1 teaspoonful of Paris green, and one tablespoonful of molasses with enough water to moisten the poisoned bran. Spread on the surface of the ground near the plants as soon as they are set out. The cutworms come out at night, eat the poisoned bran, and are killed.

Sandy Soil Management

For drifting sands a plant known as sea-sand reed or beach grass has been used with considerable success. It is valuable because of its root-stock growth which enables it to grow up through rapidly accumulating sand. When the sand has been fairly well controlled, there are two other grasses, namely rattail and wild rye, which have been found useful. Unfortunately the supply of the seed of these plants is scarce.

There are many areas of blow-sand which will never be fit for anything but the production of trees. It may be necessary, even, in the establishing of desirable types of trees, first to plant quick-growing kinds, establish them and then by other methods to control the sand until the young permanent trees can secure a proper foot-hold. As to crop yields on sandy soils, there appears to be little difference in the amounts as a result of the various methods of ploughing.

One Fertilizer Analysis
Now Takes Place of Three

At a recent meeting of the Ontario Advisory Fertilizer Board, relates George R. Paterson, Assistant Director, definite forward step was taken in the adoption of a suggestion from the buyer of the fertilizer industry, namely, too many analyses of practically the same formulae, be eliminated.

The suggestion was to the effect that the analyses 0-12-4, 0-12-5, and be abolished and the analysis 0-14-4 substituted. The Board greeted this suggestion with unanimous approval, and it is now being acted upon by the entire fertilizer industry in Ontario.

Promising New Grains at the Central Experimental Farm

The Central Experimental Farm at Ottawa — home of our most noted varieties of wheat and of certain potato crops — again offers much of special interest in the way of new creations in the crop world. As the season advances the peculiarities of these new forms are gradually being unfolded revealing in many cases indications of superior commercial values.

Probably of greatest interest to eastern farms this year are the newer varieties of barley and oats, some of which promise to excel our old established sorts in the very near future.

Canadian Honey Exports
First in United Kingdom

Canada, so far as world export of honey to the United Kingdom is concerned, has risen from fifth to first place in the period between 1928 and 1932.

The 1928 figures, being the latest available, indicate New Zealand as being the heaviest exporter of honey to the United Kingdom, followed in order by the United States, British West Indies, Soviet Union, and Canada.

It is interesting to note that, while New Zealand exports declined from 20,871 cwt. in 1928 to 1,845 cwt. in 1932, Canadian honey exports to the United Kingdom increased from 3,161 cwt. to 19,648 cwt. during the same period.

High quality, and improvements in the blending and grading of Canadian honey, in addition to a vigorous sales policy, are stated by the Ontario Honey Export Association as reasons for this product's increasing popularity in the British market.

Danger in Poison Baits

Timely warning has been given of danger to livestock on farms where poisoned grasshopper baits. It is dangerous to leave mixing utensils where live stock can reach them and ought to be carefully guarded against. This also applies to bags in which bait is transported. Poisoning of live stock is also possible when poisoned bait is put out in lumps instead of being spread finely. If cattle are well supplied with salt they will be less apt to be attracted to bait in which salt is present. There is also danger to the farmer himself of getting the poison into his mouth and nose when mixing the bait. This danger can be obviated by tying a cloth over the nose and mouth, or by wearing a protective mask.

Improving Ontario Bacon

The department has been making strenuous efforts to get better prices for its bacon hogs on the British market. About the first move in this direction was made in the summer when the department purchased a carlot of the Canadian National Exhibition winners and distributed them per type to make up a shipment of highest grade Wiltshire sides for the British market. The hogs were killed, cured, and shipped overseas under government supervision at every point and the special co-operation of Ontario House in London.

The Ontario Marketing Board has been studying the situation and several meetings of packers have resulted in the appointment of forming an Ontario Bacon Export Association with the idea of creating a greater demand for Ontario bacon of the best type as distinguished from the ordinary run of Canadian bacon. As Ontario has done with apples and honey, the province plans to establish and control a super grade or bacon which will place Ontario bacon in a price range class equal to the highest now on the British markets. This will mean many thousands of dollars additional to the raisers whose price ranges are fixed by the lower export prices now unfairly applied against the better type of hogs because there is no way of distinguishing it from the ordinary Canadian bacon. A second experimental carload of bacon, this time shipped under the super grade of "O" Brand, is to be sent over to Great Britain shortly.

The Dominion Department of Agriculture has announced a future policy of bacon grading and inspection for export which will check the present tendency of the manufacturers to equalize their British markets with low grade shipments. Whatever grades may be established at Ottawa, the Ontario Board will have higher grade requirements and it is the aim to place Ontario bacon in a class above the standard set by the use of this brand to packers fully meeting its requirements.

HOG VALUE FLUCTUATIONS

One of the main causes of fluctuations in the hog trade in Canada has been the excessive marketings at certain seasons of the year, says the Handbook on the Hog, published by the Dominion Department of Agriculture. The production of spring and fall litters only has become almost a settled policy with many farmers resulting in excessive spring and fall marketings. However, the usual disappearance of a number of early winter priced for hogs, as compared with the spring and fall prices, has had the effect of inducing many farmers to diversify their breeding operations, so that some farmers' periods rather than during the spring and fall months. This is tending to distribute hog marketings very satisfactorily, but a great many more hog raisers could still breed their sows so that farrowing dates will permit of finishing the litters with a better chance of obtaining a higher average price.

CANADIAN HONEY IN U. K.

According to statistics just published, Canada was the Great Britain's chief source of supply for honey in 1932 with 19,426 cwts. The British West Indies (18,918 cwts) and Chile (15,433) came next in order. Remarkable declines were shown in the cases of New Zealand and United States, which in 1928 held first and second place, respectively, and together accounted for 60 per cent of the total imports of honey for that year. In 1932 Canada supplied 40 per cent of the total United Kingdom honey imports as against 19 per cent in 1932. Canadian honey, says the Canadian Trade Commissioner, has made steady progress in the British market during the past five years because of its quality, and also to the improvement which has been effected in blending and grading. Solidified or "set" honey is preferred in Scotland although in Northern Ireland and some parts of the south of England "liquified or "clear" honey is in most demand.

LAMB FEEDING SUCCESS

It will be remembered that at the request of the Southern Saskatchewan Wool Growers' Association, Maple Creek, Sask., last fall, the Dominion Department of Agriculture at Ottawa, undertook the responsibility of locating groups of farmers in Ontario who would feed and fatten lots of feeder range lambs. The scheme proved a great success, and the Southern Saskatchewan sheep breeders are so well satisfied with their venture that they intend to increase the number of lambs to go into the feed lot this year. True, at a recent meeting of the Southern Saskatchewan Wool Growers' Association, at Maple Creek, it was decided to again put out from 5,000 to 7,000 lambs to feed among the Ontario farmers this fall; and at the same time to establish a co-operative feeding station at the coast for 5,000 more lambs. The Maple Creek Association expects to market some 400,000 lbs. of wool this month.

VEGETARIAN CUTLETS

Fry a minced onion and a grated carrot in half an ounce of butter till tender, stir in a dessertspoonful of tomato ketchup and then add a teacupful of breadcrumbs, a teacupful of boiled and drained rice, an ounce of shelled nuts that have been put through the mincer, a little chopped parsley, and pepper and salt to taste. Mix well and bind with part of a beaten egg. Turn on to a plate, leave till cool, and then shape the mixture into thin cutlets. Coat with egg and breadcrumbs, fry on both sides in hot shallow fat, and drain on paper.

A SANDWICH SPREAD

This will keep for days if put into jars and covered with clarified butter. Cut up a quarter of a pound of fat bacon and half a pound of lamb's liver into small pieces, peel and slice a small onion. Fry the onion in a little dripping until soft, add the bacon, a sprig of parsley, a pinch of dried herbs and pepper and salt. When the bacon fat looks transparent but is not hard, put in the liver, and fry all together, stirring occasionally and taking care that the liver does not harden. Remove most of the onion and the parsley, and mash or chop the rest of the ingredients. Then put them through a fine sieve. When done, a fine paste should result and there should be no lumps. The paste is then ready for use.

LEFT-OVER CHICKEN

Any scraps of left-over chicken can be used in making risoles, which are excellent for lunch. Melt one ounce of butter and stir in smoothly one tablespoonful of flour. Add half a cup of milk and allow to thicken. Then add four or five ounces of minced chicken, salt and pepper and a level half teaspoonful of herbs. Stir well, and when cold form into cakes. Roll in egg and breadcrumbs in the usual way and fry. These chicken risoles might be served with left-over vegetables, such as carrots, parsnips, or turnips, which have been fried at the same time.

LOCAL AND DISTRICT NEWS OF WOMEN'S ORGANIZATIONS

ERNESTTOWN L. A.

The July meeting of the Ladies' Aid was held in the Institute rooms on Wednesday, July 18th. There were twenty - six members and children present. The meeting opened with the scripture lesson, read by Mrs. Clarence Thompson. A verse of hymn was sung, after which Mrs. G. Spring read the story of the lesson, from the tenth chapter of Mark. The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved. One new member was added to the list and a letter of thanks read from Mrs. Joe. Rogers, for flowers she received while ill.

Miss Mona Thompson delighted the gathering with an instrumental and Miss Norma Thompson, in her clever way, recited "Smile."

A dainty lunche was served and the fees amounted to $2.05.

The August meeting will be omitted and the September meeting will be at the home of (Rev.) Mrs. W. Smart, Bath.

ADOLPHUSTOWN W. M. S.

The July meeting of the W. M. S. was held at the old church, Wednesday afternoon, July 4th, in the form of a basket picnic, with a very good attendance. A lovely picnic dinner was enjoyed in the grove on the Bay shore, near the cairn erected to Sir John A. MacDonald's memory. The meeting opened with the Old Hay Bay Church. Rev. Smart and Mrs. Smart of Bath, were present, and Mrs. Smart gave a fine address on mission work in Trinidad which was much appreciated by those present. Miss Lilian Carr and Miss Alice Sanders contributed readings to the programme.

The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Ercell Foster, in August.

MOSCOW WOMEN'S INSTITUTE

Moscow, July 19. — The July meeting of the Women's Institute was held at the home of Mrs. F. Darling, with Miss Marguerite Patterson, R.N. presiding. Moscow and Colebrook members of the Institute regret that Miss Patterson will not be president for the balance of the year, as she was resumed her duties along the line of her chosen profession, in Mexico. During the two years of her life among her home surroundings, she has been an influence for goodwill and cheer. She has demonstrated executive ability, tact and a power which gives her the right to win, to comfort and command. Much appreciation was expressed to Miss Patterson and then Mrs. Jackson of Colebrooke, vice-president was introduced to fill the chair for the remaining meetings. The programme was an all-Canadian one. Some of the exhibits of all home-made products were the printed programs, in old coat-shawl, vinegar, maple syrup and honey. Papers were read on the lives of important Canadian women, who have become famous in the history of Canada. Roll call was responded to by a short account of a member of the Confederation. This proved an interesting review and refreshed the memory of all who realize the importance these pioneer parents played in laying the background of the present cultural civilization. Mr. Charlie Darling gave a paper on Canada, covering briefly the history of Canada from nine hundred and thirty-four years ago, until the present day. It makes us proud of Canada, our fathers' land of old, where our children own their birth. Mrs. H. M. Prentice of Philadelphia, made a few remarks on Canada, as viewed by Canadians now living in the United States. She mentioned the three thousand miles of unguarded boundary line with no expenditure for armaments, such being the established confidence and goodwill between neighbors. She mentioned that Canada was known for her lakes, climate, and for the hospitality of her citizens. The historic fact that at the time when the Land of Atlantis existed in the Atlantic Ocean and Maya in the Pacific, Canada was known as the Land of Love, the home of music, and it was also called the land of the Canaanites, some twenty thousand years ago. The Atlanteau Research Society have much information concerning the lost lands which were submerged in the sea, and later the great Pyramids built in Egypt, as a monument to these lost races. After the delightful program, a most delectable tea was served by the hostess of the Women's Institute.

BRUIZING OF APPLES

A change favourable to Canadian apple exporters overseas exhibitors has been made in the judging of entries in the British Empire section of The Imperial Fruit Show which will be held this year at Leicester, England, from November 2 to 10, inclusive. In past years, Canadian entries have been unable to compete successfully with native fruit, owing to the inevitable bruizing which resulted from the tight pack and long journey. Such bruizing could be noted in the just prior to the show, transported carefully on rubber tired vehicles, and arrive in perfect condition. It was impossible, under these circumstances for overseas fruit to compete successfully, and therefore, in future, entries will be segregated by countries of origin, judged separately and a prize awarded to the winner. The first and second awards from each country will then compete for the Empire Championship, but points for freedom of bruizing and other damage will be ignored, thereby eliminating the handicap. The Imperial Fruit Show says the Canadian Fruit Trade Commissioner in London, is of tremendous value as an advertising medium for Canadian apples, and it is hoped that Canadian growers and shippers will cooperate towards bringing the Canadian section of the 1934 show into better proportion with the exhibits of other Dominions.

UNFINISHED POULTRY

There is too much poultry being marketed in an unfinished condition. This is unprofitable to the producer, and the consumer, displeased with the lean, tough fowl. The result is a decrease in the demand and in the price. In the early part of 1900 many Ontario farmers had their own feeding crates and finished their own birds. As a result, there was a good grade of poultry marketed and the farmer received most of the profit. Much of this crate-fed poultry was exported to Great Britain, where it gained a high reputation. But with better times, the farmer seemed to want to get rid of the work, and have someone else, who would take the trouble of feeding and killing, take the profit. Unfortunately, the attitude has resulted in the fact that too little of the poultry has received any extra feeding and, therefore, a pamphlet on finishing poultry before marketing has been issued by the Dominion Department of Agriculture with the double object of having the necessary finishing done, and not by the producer himself. The pamphlet has been prepared by two members of the Dominion Poultry Board namely, Mr.W. A. Brown, Chief, Poultry Services, Live Stock Branch, and Mr. F. C. Elford, Dominion Poultry Husbandman.

BARLEY MARKET IN UNITED KINGDOM

Canada has a tariff preference in the British market of 10 per cent. between barley being dutiable at 10 per cent ad valorem, while Canadian barley is free. The United Kingdom is one of the leading barley importers, drawing supplies from all parts of the world. During the past calendar year, 1933, imports from all sources totalled nearly 16,000,000 cwts of 112 lbs. each, the leading source of supply being Soviet Russia, followed by Roumania, the United States, Persia, and fifth by Canada. The barley requirements of the brewing and malting trade are described fully in the various reports of the Canadian Trade Commissioners, but all these requirements cannot be filled locally in the United Kingdom, because a six-rowed barley must be blended with the English barley. This must all be imported. Canadian six-rowed barley has been experimented with, and indeed with great success, but as it is seldom offered on the London market, little interest is shown in it. Moreover, it is normally rather high in price. If, however, writes the Canadian Trade Commissioner in England, steady supplies of the requisite quality were available, the prospects for developing a market would be more favorable. Detailed information regarding the barley situation in Great Britain is set forth in separate reports of the Trade Commissioners at London, Glasgow, Liverpool, and Bristol, and may be consulted at the offices of the Departments of Trade and Commerce, at Ottawa.

FARM PROPERTY ASSESSMENT

The general property tax, under which the tax on farm property is administered, is essentially, a tax on ownership or possession, the total basis to be raised being allocated on the basis of the value of the property possessed by the individual taxpayer. The major responsibility for an equitable distribution of the burden of taxation under this system rests, therefore, with the assessor who evaluates the holdings of the tax payers. Assessments in Ontario are on the township basis. Each township, incorporated village, town, and city appoints its own assessor making a total for the province of about 800 assessors, not including deputies.—The Economic Annalist.

TREATING IVY POISONING

A few people are immune from the effects of poison ivy, but most campers know to their sorrow that poisoning by this mean plant is no joke. Many remedies are suggested to allay the burning and irritation, the simplest being the immediate washing of the parts affected with good strong yellow laundry soap. An application of absorbent cotton saturated with a solution of common baking soda is simple and effective. Use a teaspoon with a 3 per cent solution of potassium permanganate is widely recommended. Recently tincture of iodine has also been found to be useful. Once the blisters have appeared, all rubbing should be avoided and care taken not to localize infection by painting iodine around the edges of the rash. However, in cases of severe poisoning, the aid of a physician should be obtained. On returning from a camping where there was danger of meeting poison ivy, the liberal use of the strong yellow soap will prevent much suffering. Indeed, it is a good plan for campers and other holiday makers to carry a piece of this soap with them. As a protection when going among poison ivy, says the Dominion Botanist, it is well to wash all exposed skin surfaces with a 3 per cent. solution of ferric chloride in water, allowing it to remain on. This, of course, is not a preventative measure, intended to neutralize the poison ivy oil. If oil is suspected to have reached the unprotected skin, scrubbing with laundry soap under running water is recommended to remove it before it penetrates. During dry baking powder or boracic acid on coating sores should be avoided, as they appear to seal the sores over with a hard crust, thus aggravating the condition. The exposure of the sores to air, gives relief.

Innocence is never undermined by truth, but always by lies. — Dr. Edward Lyttleton.

NATIONAL NUTRITION

The nutritive and health promoting value of milk and other dairy products is an accomplished fact, so far as the people of Canada is concerned, thanks in a modest way to the activities of the milk publication service of the Dominion Dairy Branch but it has been left to the United States authorities to show the attitude of nationalities to dairy product consumption. In a survey of the consumption of dairy products, in terms of whole-milk equivalent, among metropolitan cities in New Jersey, it was found that negroes and Italians consumed relatively small per capita quantities of dairy products, being 1.8 and 1.58 lbs. per day respectively, as compared with 4.07 lbs. for native whites and 3.75 lbs. for Irish, and 3.22 lbs. for German families. Italian families were heavy consumers of cheese, but relatively small consumers of milk and butter. Negroes preferred buttermilk to sweet milk. Jews were heavy consumers of bottled milk, but such consumption included the use of dairy dairy products. Poles were fond of sour cream.

CANDIAN APPLES IN BRAZIL

Under an exchange of notes of December 4, 1931, Canada receives the minimum tariff and certain favoured-nation treatment on imports into Brazil. As a result, Canada is accorded duty-free entry of fresh fruit, including apples, because Brazil admits fresh fruit from Argentina duty free, and Canada as a most-favoured nation is entitled to the same tariff treatment. However, by a Brazilian decree of March 1934, duty-free entry for apples or other goods is suspended, pending new arrangements or reductions will, in future, apply only to quotas for amounts consigned to individuals or firms. Goods consigned "to order" will be subject to the full duties equivalent to about $2.13 per 100 pounds at the present rate of Exchange.

Harvesting Soybeans For Seed

(Experimental Farms Note)

Soybeans for seed are generally harvested with a grain binder. The sheaves then go to the stall tied rather loosely, especially when the crop is cut before all the leaves have fallen, set up in small shocks to complete the curing or, if the seed is very dry, matured, hauled directly to the threshing machine. If the crop is short it may be necessary to use the mower, although its use will cause considerable loss of seed through trampling. A self-rake reaper would be much more satisfactory.

In harvesting soybeans it is very important that the moisture content of the seed should be as low as possible. It is usually much easier to dry the seed on the stalk than in the granary. The natural dropping of the leaves which occurs in practically all varieties as they approach maturity should automatically remind the grower to prepare for harvesting the crop. It may be advisable, however, to allow the crop to stand for some time on the stalk in order that the moisture content of the seed may be reduced as low as possible before harvesting actually begins.

Immediately following the final dropping of the leaves, seed was harvested from a variety grown in a field test conducted by the Division of Forage Plants, Ottawa, Ontario, and was found to contain 18% of moisture. Two weeks later the moisture content of seed taken from the standing stalks of the same variety had dropped to 14%. At this stage the seed was harvested, threshed at once and stored in bags throughout the winter in an outside barn. At no time during this period of storage did the moisture content drop below that at which it had been harvested. The seed stored perfectly and germinated 100% in the spring. This serves to indicate that under favorable conditions the use of good judgment in harvesting may result in improving the quality of the seed and largely remove any worries concerned with storage. Seed containing more than 13 to 14 per cent of moisture should not be stored in deep bins but should be spread out so that it can be easily turned, if necessary.

Diver's Daring Feat In Wrecked Ship

Sir Robert Davis, speaking of "Deep diving and under-water rescue" at the Society of Arts, London, told how a diver working on a wreck sixty feet under the sea had the nerve to unscrew his mouthpiece and to get drunk on champagne he had found.

"Tom," said Sir Robert, "had sent up no cargo for the last couple of hours and everybody became anxious about him. At last he shot suddenly to the surface and was dragged to the ladder. Then it was seen that he was drunk. Yet he went down as 'sober a horse at a funeral,' and the chief salvage officer set about cleaning up the mystery."

A Pocket Of Air

"This is how 'Tom' did it. As the ship sank she had heeled over slightly to one side. Some of the air in the hold, instead of escaping out of the way when the water poured in, had been trapped in the angle formed by the side of the ship and the lower deck. When the cargo was worked out of this side more air was released. Some of this, instead of making its way up the hatch in bubbles, was also trapped under the lower deck. This was also augmented by the air from the escape valve of the diver's helmet, until a pocket of air, perhaps fifteen inches deep, was formed in the angle.

"The diver, working under the lower deck, suddenly discovered that his hands were out of water. Not long afterwards he discovered the cases of whiskey. Having carried up a case and broached it, he sat on top of the cargo and, with water within an inch of the bottom of his mouthpiece and 60 feet of water above his head, unscrewed the mouthpiece and knocked the neck off a bottle.

Risks He Ran

"To avoid interruption from the surface and to defeat any attempt made by the salvage officer to pull him up unexpectedly he took a turn with his life-line round a convenient stanchion. He was then free to enjoy himself—with the knowledge that if he slipped if there was any sudden movements in the water, if for any reason the air should escape from under the deck, he would be dead and miscalculated his own capacity and failed to screw the mouthpiece on again, he would be drowned like a rat in a trap. But divers cannot afford to suffer from nerves," added Sir Robert.

Sir Robert, speaking on submarine mines, said that the greatest measure of safety was provided by making every man independent of the other by equipping him with a fully contained apparatus. The Admiralty had succeeded in passing their entrance examinations.

Miss Helen Clarke entertained her friend, Miss Reed of Bay, on Sunday.

Quite a number from here attended the Ball Game at Melrose last Friday afternoon.

ETRURIA

Professor Pirontit's discovery of the key to the Etruscan language will, it is hoped, open the door to a new view of ancient history. There may be of interest, however, to note briefly what has been already known or is suspected of the Etruscans. Perhaps in modern interest is the theory that Shakespeare's Tempest is ascribed the introduction into Rome along with the gold-spangled robe which the Emperor Claudius wore the white horses, of the curule chairs, the litters, and the cacus. The logs itself, too, is said to have come from Etruria.

The imperial city of Rome stood at that point of the Tiber where the Etruscans, the Latins, and the Sabines met; and on the junction of those tribes was based the Roman polity. The Etruscans held the right bank of the Tiverer. The civilisation of Etruria," says the historian, "disappeared from the sight of men to be rediscovered at the end of twenty centuries among the buried tombs of forgotten Lucumons."

Fresh Sweet Corn Has Its Day

By
BARBARA B. BROOKS

The season is approaching when fresh sweet corn will be on the market. This is important news because corn is one of the few vegetables that still has its season. Nearly everything else can be found in the markets all the year, some price the year around. However, corn is neither fresh nor sweet after it has been picked for many hours, and most of the crop is sold as it ripens near the place where it is grown, or it is canned or dried for out- f-season use.

When we bite into the first juicy corn of the season we decide then and there to have it every day. We feel that we could never tire of corn. Perhaps, we really do not tire of it. The fact remains, however, that after the first week or so of the corn season we begin to think of ways of serving it that are different.

Succotash and corn fritters with maple syrup or honey are time-honored ways of using corn cut from the cob. Many cooks have discovered that cooked corn left-over or freshly cut from the cob is delicious if heated in cream and seasoned with salt, pepper, and, a little butter if the cream is not too rich. Well-seasoned corn stuffing is good with tomatoes or peppers. Corn has its placein cream or vegetable soups. It adds a certain something to muffins, biscuits, griddle cakes and waffles. In fact, if you will list your favorite recipes for meat and vegetable dishes, for soups and for quick breads; many suggestions for using corn will occur to you. When you wish to feature corn in the menu and want something different, the following recipes will help you.

PREVENT CHILDREN FROM DANGEROUS FUN

Announcement is made by the Investigation Department of the Canadian National Railways that a drive will be made to stop children from the dangerous practice of stealing rides on freight trains. While this form of amusement is more prevalent in, and about cities and large centres of population, it also prevails in rural districts, children attempting to board long freight trains when they slow down for grades. Freight conductors state that in many instances, those juvenile offenders are not to be educated to the dangers of their sport.

The Investigation Department asks the co-operation of parents in an attempt to eliminate this practice and states that unless this form of amusement ceases, drastic action will be taken to protect the children from their own folly. The average offenders are in the neighborhood of about twelve years of age.

Wise mothers who know the virtues of Mother Graves' Worm Exterminator always have it handy because it proves its value.

Nova Scotia Guides Provide Real Thrills

Time: During the full moon of August.
Place: Lake William, Lunenburg County, Nova Scotia, Canada.
Scene: A beautiful woodland lake with sloping banks clothed with evergreens and silver birches.
Performers: The licensed guides of Nova Scotia, true sportsmen, celebrated for their skill in the woodcraft arts of hunting and woodcraft.

Lake William, Nova Scotia, has become well known in recent years as the scene of the Sports Tournament of the Nova Scotia Guides. These men stage a full week's program unique on this continent in atmosphere and appeal. Hundreds of tents are set amid majestic pines and birches, and at night the scene has irresistible charm. Numberless camp fires light up the surrounding forest and lake and the moonbeams strike the water and trees through the trees. Crowds gather around the camp fires and hearty community singing is a pleasing feature.

The days are given over to a varied and interesting program. 200 yard ranges are provided for heavy rifle contests and separate ranges for the .22 rifle and revolver contests. The Trap Shooting Association of the Maritime Provinces of Canada hold their annual shoot in connection with these sports. A sheltered cove affords a fine setting for fly-casting from a float along a line of markers to show distance. Last year Bill Edson, champion fly-caster of New England, broke the world's record for distance at this Meet. Exciting canoe races and burlesque, and spectacular contests furnish fun and variety. Tub races, greased pole contests, greased tilting, kettle boiling and landing the human fish are amongst the regular stunts. The latter is a strenuous contest between the boat fly-caster and a powerful swimmer with a special harness over his shoulders. The Nova Scotia Government exhibits at this Meet native wild animals including moose, deer, bear, raccoon and others, also native birds.

Many who attend the Nova Scotia Guides Tournament bring tent and blankets and rough it among the big trees. Others find abundant hotel accommodation in nearby hotels, country inns or, farmhouses. Of course the best of fare is served on the grounds. The dates for the 1934 Meet are August 20—25.

Cereal Crops For Annual Pasture .

Interesting data on cereal grain crops for annual pasture are given in the June number of Scientific Agriculture as a result of investigations by Dr. Kirk, Dominion Agrostologist, Ottawa, J. G. Davidson, assistant superintendent Dominion Experimental Farm, Indian Head, Sask., and S. Hamilton, Dominion Dairy Laboratory, Ottawa. It is pointed out that annual pasture crops are important in many parts of Canada, and that, while the superiority of oats as the one best annual hay crop has been generally recognized throughout Canada, it is not so clearly appreciated that oats are still the best annual pasture crop. The Data submitted in Scientific Agriculture supports the view that the oats crop is even more valuable for pasture than for hay as compared with other cereals.

There are certain questions relating to the use of cereal grains for pasture that have not been investigated. Definite information is lacking on the relative productivity and nutrient value of the different cereals. It is not known which of them has the greatest power of re-growth after having been eaten off and which of them will produce the greatest number of pasture crops in a single season. Several other questions also require answering. What is the best time for pasturing ? How does the percentage of protein in the herbage compare at different stages of growth ? Will the fresh young growth provide a high protein feed as is the case with perennial grasses, and if so, is the total seasonal yield of protein satisfactory ? Are the results better with early than with late seeding, and do the different cereal crops compare in this respect ?

In order to answer these questions an experiment was started in the spring of 1932 at the Dominion Experimental Farm, Indian Head, Saskatchewan. Four cereals were grown, namely : oats, barley, wheat, and spring rye. These were all grown under the same conditions. Provision was made for five plots of each cereal, clipping to begin at different dates thereafter as the growth reached 7 to 8 inches. These measurements refer to the leaf mass, and the following is the summary of the results obtained. Oats, barley, wheat, and spring rye were compared with reference to yield, feeding value, and utilization as annual pasture crops. With respect to yield of dry matter per acre and percentage of protein, oats were always superior to barley followed in order by wheat and spring rye. In total average yield of protein per acre from the early seeding, oats exceeded barley by 54 per cent, wheat by 96 per cent, and spring rye by 112 per cent. At the later date seeding, oats exceeded barley by 23 per cent, wheat by 53 per cent, and rye by 85 per cent. Oats produced 5 cuttings in 1932, and 7 cuttings in 1933, as compared with 4 cuttings in both seasons of the other three crops. Largest yields of protein per acre were obtained from oats when pasture cuttings were begun at the 5-leaf stage. Oats from the early seeding produced 3,000 lbs. of dry matter per acre with an average protein content of 25 per cent. This is equivalent to agreater carrying capacity than was obtained at Ottawa on good quality native bluegrass sod. Young oats herbage may be regarded as a highly concentrated protein feed.

Breeds of Bacon Hogs

The three recognized bacon breeds namely Yorkshire. Tamworth and Canadian-type Berkshire, all compare favorably well to the specifications demanded by the British Wiltshire trade. However, all the bacon breeds have defects common to each, of which bow-leggedness should be more especially now that a superior quality product is in demand. The Yorkshire is a particularly popular bacon breed from the standpoint of the farmer and the packer. Typical Yorkshire hogs, when properly fed and finished for market produce a carcass which carries the right balance and proportion in relation to length, an even distribution of fat, and a wealth of lean meat. The quality of bone, which is associated with quality in the skin and hair, leaves the carcass with a coat showing a clean, attractive appearance on the rail.

Although a percentage of individuals of the Yorkshire breed has attained perhaps more closely to the desired standards of perfection, there is still too great a percentage of market hogs of Yorkshire breeding that falls short of the requirements. Some strains lack the desired length of body. Others lack constitution and thrift. The Yorkshire breed offers are reasonably large number of strains to choose from so that discretion can be exercised in the choice of animals that have the desired length, a vigorous constitution, and a smoothness of conformation essential for the making of economical gains that result in a carcass saleable at the top price for Wiltshire sides or best Canadian cuts.

Tamworth hogs have always maintained a high reputation for the production of high-class Wiltshire sides. Unfortunately, in Canada they have never been produced extensively, and while there are many individuals of outstanding merit and quality, there are comparatively few strains from which to select. Tamworths, as a breed are inclined to be slightly heavy in the shoulder. Some strains are apt to be short and set and market hogs from such breeding invariably carry too heavy a fat covering if fed to weights of 220 pounds. Tamworths are prolific, are economical feeders, have good quality of bone and skin and are considered less subject to sunscald than white hogs. An infusion of new blood on the part of pure-bred breeders would appear advisable, and should be followed up with the objective of developing strains with smoother and lighter shoulders, slightly more length of side and better balance of body throughout.

Possibly fewer hogs of Berkshire breeding conform to bacon standards than any of the other two recognized bacon breeds. This is due to the fact that only a few breeders have confined themselves definitely to the development of a bacon type hog. There is still a percentage of individuals from even the best strains that revert back to the short thick type. However, says Mr. A. A. Macmillan of the Dominion, Live Stock Branch in the handbook of the bacon hog, "with persistent selection along proper lines, this difficulty will undoubtedly be overcome. Berkshire carcasses from improved strains carry over a large proportion of lean meat to fat, and the yield of dressed meat is high. Owing to the black hair, there is an objection on the part of packers to the Berkshire carcass, as it does not present the clean and attractive appearance necessary for first-quality products. Berkshire hogs will not stand close pen feeding and forcing with a heavy carbonaceous grain ration. Under such feeding practice, individuals of this breed do not develop sufficient length and the hog at market weight produces a carcass possessing an excessive fat covering."

RAINING SOMEWHERE

Lack of rain at the present time would not be likely to affect the wine bills of our judges, who are probably agreeably well to the conditions as those of members of the Supreme Court of the United States are receiving. We have been in the early days of that august assembly. The judges of the Supreme Court used to dine together during the session, and for some reason unstated were served to abstain from wine with their meals except when it was raining.

One evening, however, Chief Justice Marshall asked Associate Judge Story to look out of the window and see if there was any indication of rain. "Not a cloud in the sky," reported Judge Story, gloomily.

"Never mind," said the Chief Justice "Never an hour passes without raining in some portion or another of the area over which we exercise jurisdiction. Let us have some Madiera !"—Miscellany.

CHECK TO CHAUTAUQUA

A famous United States institution had hit by the depression and said, in effect, that many other things at the intensive rate of two or three days a year for many farm and small-town dwellers this orgy of "culture" was one of the brightest events of the year. Flivvers, cars, and radio hit it hard, and now the big bad wolf threatens to flgal folding and fading away of the Chautauqua tents.—Miscellany.

Canadian National Exhibition authorities have arranged for a rodeo the equal of which has not been seen in Canada. It will be the feature in front of the grandstand each afternoon, commencing Monday, Aug. 27. Cowboys, roughriders, trick and novelty riders, cow ponies, outlaw horses, roping, etc., will supplant the usual afternoon vaudeville. The performers are being brought from the plains of the Western States and Western Canada.

County Teachers Will Benefit By New Regulations

Second Year Normal Course Abondoned

Hon. Dr. J. L. Simpson, Minister of Education for Ontario, has announced the abandonment of the second year normal school requirement for Ontario teachers.

The second-year normal school course, made compulsory last year, for certain teachers, was purely experimental. There has been considerable difference of opinion as to its necessity and value and, after careful consideration, its abandonment has been decided upon.

The statement from the department says:—

"In the meantime those teachers-in-training who secured Interim First and Second Class certificates after having attended an Ontario Normal School for one year in any of the years 1927-28 to 1933-34, inclusive, and have not yet completed the second-year course in an Ontario Normal School, will have their Interim certificates extended for one school year, 1934-35. The conditions upon which these Interim Second and First Class certificates may be made permanent will be announced by the Minister of Education at some time before June 1st, 1935.

THE GOVERNMENT AND THE C. N. E.

The people of the Province have watched with no small degree of satisfaction the efforts of the present Provincial Government to curtail expenses. Undoubtedly many of the economies put into effect since the turnover were justified in view of the financial condition of the Province. But there is a point at which economy may seriously cripple the nation's life. The attitude of the government to the Canadian National Exhibition is a case in point. The Toronto Fair is, in every respect, a national institution. There is no other organization of its kind which can at all compare with it. Over a million people visit the fair every year to see the progress of science, to observe the development of modern life as reflected in the exhibits of forest, soil, sea, and their manufacture into articles of use and ornament. It is one of the great educational institutions on the continent. The old Chinese proverb has it "one seeing is worth ten thousand hearings". And at the C. N. E. thousands of visitors see and remember.

The City of Toronto, the Province of Ontario, and the Dominion receive world-wide attention because of this unique display. It is a recognition which has gradually, painstakingly been earned through years of toil and optimism on the part of the leaders, and cooperation on the part of all organizations and institutions in the Province who have in any way responsibility for the public welfare.

The phenomenal success of the Fair could never have been attained had it not been for the support which the government has given it through the years. But it has been money well spent. And now that support is to be withdrawn. The Prime Minister has indicated the Fair has been costing too much. Last year it cost the Province approximately $25,000. This is a lot of money, of course. But the loss which will come from the lack of support on the part of the government, while it cannot be estimated in dollars and cents, will far outdistance the financial saving to the government.

Had the government even curtailed its expenditures on the C. N. E. exhibit it could have effected a considerable saving without withdrawing its support, as it appears to have done by ordering no exhibit this year.

PANDERING TO THE MORBID

Comments in the British press on the slaying of Dillinger in Chicago are practically unanimous in two respects. They agree that the death of public enemy No. 1 was a good thing for the state. A man who was directly, or indirectly, responsible for the death of fifteen people and who had stolen over $300,000 in two years, had forfeited his right to a place in organized society. But people who have been brought up under the British tradition of law administration find it difficult to accept, as lawful, the shooting in cold blood by the police of even as serious an enemy to the community as Dillinger.

In commenting on the British attitude one metropolitan daily asks the question as to whether a person should stop to argue with a mad dog. Of course that is not done. And while the procedure in Chicago may appear crude and unorthodox, yet so elusive and dangerous was the quarry that we are tempted to sympathize with the officers of the law on this occasion.

But whatever justification there was for the killing of Dillinger, there can be absolutely no reason for the manner in which his body was subsequently displayed to the public. A United Press despatch from Chicago, of July 24th, describing the display, said :

"Thousands passed through the County morgue Monday night to view the gangster's body and today a long queue was still in front of the building. The body was propped up behind a plate glass window, much like a dummy in a department store window. Authorities refused to turn the body over to his father until it had been exhibited.

"Thousands saw the sheet shrouded corpse. Children were in the crowd and women by the hundreds. Perspiring policemen joked with the crowd as an endless line inched past the plate glass window.

"Behind the glass Dillinger lay, supported in a half-standing position by a table used in post mortem examinations. His eyes were closed. His hair, dyed a jet black, was as curly as in life. Two jagged face wounds, suffered as he fell dead, were cleaned and only slightly noticeable".

There is a certain respect due the dead, even a dead gangster. Nothing was to be gained by such an exhibition, save to satisfy the morbid. It is this, rather than the killing of Dillinger, which is hard for those outside the United States to understand.

THE ASSASSINATION OF DOLLFUSS

The assassination of Dollfuss, the Chancellor of Austria, was a dastardly, cold blooded, brutal act. It was another evidence of methods to secure power, which have become all to prevalent in Europe of late. Dollfuss was a strong man of mild manner, giant intellect, and inflexible will. He was moved by nothing but the highest motives of patriotism as he conceived it. As Minister of Agriculture he had made a name for himself. But for the last two years his skill received international significance. At the London conference, and at the League of Nations, he surprised the world by his ability and his skill in international affairs.

Dollfuss had seen his country raised from communism in 1919 by the smallest margin. This was a powerful factor in determining his policy with other groups which sought power. Fearing the country would finally fall into the clutches of the Nazis he dismissed parliament, and ruled as dictator with a small cabinet. In his endeavour to crush all opposition he first turned his attention to the Socialists last February. This was the beginning of the end for Dollfuss. The Socialists were in power in Vienna. They had succeeded more than any administration in the world in solving the vexed housing problem. They had warded off communism and discontent by making the lot of the working people more happy and contented. Had Dollfuss really known it, these Socialists of Vienna were his greatest ally against Russian communism and German Nazism. But Dollfuss, seeking to consolidate the country, turned the guns against the Socialists in Vienna, and alienated the public opinion of the largest municipality in the nation. When the Nazis, fresh from new triumphs in Germany, thought the hour had come for them to seize power the Socialists never raised a hand to help Dollfuss, whom they regarded as their bitterest enemy.

Germany and Austria are, in many ways, the same people separated only by a national barrier. They are of the same racial stock, and speak the same language. They are ultimately destined to become a united people. But under the present leadership in Germany the powers will not permit such union, and are pledged to the independence of Austria. Germany, however, looks with eager eyes towards these people, whom they regard as one with themselves. There is reason to believe that the attempt of the Nazis in Austria to seize power was closely associated with the recent uprisings in Germany. The fact that the German Minister at Vienna was the intermediary in asking safe conduct for the Nazis, who attempted to seize power, lends color to that belief.

It is one of the tragedies of history that at a time when the sane progressive Socialist movement in Germany and Austria was gradually moving in the middleroad of communism on the one hand and the ultra reaction on the other, their influence, which alone could have brought Middle Europe through the storm, has been thwarted and retarded by a ruthless dictatorship, both in Germany and in Austria.

What the future for the world may be as a result of the present upheaval no one can foresee, but sure it is that "those who take the sword shall perish by the sword";

NAIL 'EM ON THE FENCE

The farms in sixteen States of the United States are suffering from drought. The cattle are starving, the farmers are discouraged. The government steps in and purchases 1,100,000 of the cattle. These are turned over to the packers, who process them and prepare them for distribution to the Federal relief agencies. So far so good. There is no interference with business, as the meat is kept out of the regular channels of distribution.

To pay the packers the government allows them the hides and the by products. To get cost the packers sell the hides. The market at once becomes glutted with raw hides and protests begin to flow into Washington. The problem is a knotty one for the administration. The packers need the money and must sell. The hide dealers don't want the hides on the market. The cattle continue being slaughtered and hides are piling up. The government is now considering a plan to store the hides for future use. But they have no storage room. Besides, to store hides and then dribble them out to the market, would put the government in the hide business, which is to be avoided at all costs.

In this dilemna we would suggest nailing them to a fence. Fences would, of course, have to be built, but that would give work to men who would erect them, to mill hands who would cut the boards, and to the lumbermen in the Michigan area who are in need of just such a boom to put their business on a paying basis again. So why not "nail 'em to the fence ?"

The great lesson of biography is to show what man can do, at his best. A noble life put fairly on record acts like an inspiration to others. It exhibits what life is capable of being made. It refreshes our spirit, encourages our hope, and gives us strength and courage and faith—faith in others as well as in ourselves. It stimulates our aspirations, rouses us to action, and invites us to become co-partners with them in their work. To live with such men in their biographies, and to be inspired by their example, is to live with the best of men, and to mix in the best of company.—Smiles.

The daily duties of some Canadian aviators, performed without publicity, would have been heralded a few years ago in some other countries with great acclaim. Whether from excess of modesty, or because they had no such machinery of publicity, Canadian performers in the air have rarely been presented to the public in spectacular garb.—Ottawa Citizen.

WOMEN SAID TO OUTLIVE MEN

It is officially stated that of 91,000 persons over the age of 85 in England and Wales, old women outnumber old men by nearly two to one. A man's average expectation of life is now 56 years and a woman's 60. Eighteen centenarians died in Britain in 1932; of these, fifteen were women and only three were men. Medical men generally give reasons for the greater age of women : (1) Women are subjected to less mental strain than men; they do not worry so much. #2) Women almost all through life are stronger physically than men. Incidentally, this disposes finally of the old saying about women being the weaker physically. Humphrey Rolleston in a book recently published on "Medical Aspects of Old Age," says that of people over 80 there are nearly three women to every man. He adds the significant remark that old women do not feel so old as old men. The death rate recorded last year also confirm the statistics of past years, which prove that married women live longer on the average than single women. According to facts prepared by the New Health Society, each year about 1,045 boys are born to every 1,000 girls, yet when both boys and girls have grown up, there are nearly nine per cent more women than men—a surplus in fact of nearly 2,000,000 females in the population.

THE GLASS OF FASHION

("Can anyone explain the sense of the latest mode in hats, that of having mirrors set in the heels of one's shoes ?")

In view of the wearer's presumable
I don't see why mirrors in heels should perplex.
Their need is so constant and deeply
admixed,
A mirror is useful wherever it's fixed.
So don't look surprised at the mirror-heeled lass—
I warrant she'll find an excuse for the glass.
Cinderella wore slippers of crystal throughout—
This stunt is a modern revival, no doubt,
Or it may be from motives that all would approve—
A fine altruistic and sisterly move :
The looking-glass heels are provided, perhaps,
To save other people from social collapse,
So others who follow in rear of her gait,
Can see, in her heels, if their hats are straight.
Beg pardon ; I mean, if their hats are askew
As precisely the angle the fashions pursue.)
But I think it's more likely the need is in her own.
And that's why she shoe with the mirror is shown.
If the wearer is seated and crosses her legs,
Her face should be seen in her glittering pegs.
So that both of her hands would be free to repair
Any signs of distress and undue wear and tear.
In short, she'll be able to take up a pose
Which thanks to the mirror, conclusively shows
She can kick up her heels as she powders her nose.

THE COLOUR QUESTION

(A Warsaw professor says that 93 per cent of European criminals are blue-eyed, and that races and peoples whose intellect is to oppress and plunder others always have blue eyes.)

How tradition was mistaken
When it praised the eye of blue
As the sign of souls unshaken,
Ever constant, ever true !
Lo ! the information quoted.
Though it may seem rather odd,
That the shade is widely noted
Among criminals in good.

What is more, with that as basis,
This too penetrating Pole
Also adds that blue-eyed races
Have an blunder in their soul:
Yes, from Warsaw our professor,
Sees to the matter through,
Says the tyrant and oppressor
Is the bloke whose eyes are blue.

Yet this dictum may be doubted;
For it may perchance at times
Be that what is charged as blunder
Is but the mistake of crimes,
For his contemplated crimes,
And oppressors, bent on plunder,
May acquire (and can you wonder?)
Eyes indubitably black.

" OVERPRODUCTION "

"Now, I dissent fundamentally and wholly from the idea that there's overproduction of food stuffs in the world. From the very broad general point of view I am all too conscious, in my own country and European countries, that there are great deficits of food: and, therefore, to talk of overproduction of food is something fundamentally wrong. We are not going to meet the great evils that the world is suffering from by shortening still further the supplies of these fundamental articles. One could say, indeed, thinking of wheat itself, that when great supplies fell upon the market in 1929, had that flood, as it might have been, flowed itself more evenly over the world population, it would have been simply one of these ever-lasting floods with which we are familiar. Damned as it was by tariffs and restrictions of one kind and another into a narrow channel, it became a devastating flood in the part it flowed over."—Sir Daniel Hall at the Regina Conference.

SCENTED SLUMBERS

It is now possible to get one of the standard anaesthetics which, instead of having the characteristic smell which is so hateful to most people who have experienced it before, is marked by nothing worse than the aroma of eau-de-Cologne. Nor is it only patients and doctors who may feel a legitimate interest in that development; writers of sensational fiction may also sit up and take some notice. For long enough, some of them have been laughed at for their mysterious anaesthetic (quite unknown to medical experience), which, when sprinkled on a handkerchief, is used to instantly throw an intended victim into deep slumber as soon as it is applied to his or her nostrils; they have been told repeatedly that no such disarming "dope" exists outside the pages of dime novels." Nevertheless, for the purpose of such pages, it seems necessary to invent a fluid capable away with the minimum amount of fuss and inconvenience to every body concerned— and the eau-de-Cologne anaesthetic may at last make its bow before the public.

"Do you not adore the smell of eau-de-Cologne, madam ?" says the doctor, amiably, as he openly brushes the new mixture on to an unconscious lady's handkerchief. "Refreshing, is it not ? There, madam—take a good deep breath of it !" And, though the victim may not "go off" instantaneously, she will presumably be far from suspecting the real object of his odorous attentions—until it is too late to scream for help. Of course, she may detect the eau-de-Cologne in any event—but doubtless the same old dope can be duly hitched to newer perfumes. He will have to find out what her favourite scent is and adjust the sleeping draught to match it.—Manchester.

BLUEBERRY CULTURE

While commercial blueberry culture is a new and thriving industry in the United States, Canada is not behind in investigating the possibilities of establishing the industry in the Dominion. Experimental results for the past few years at the Dominion Experimental Station at Kentville have created considerable interest in Nova Scotia, and attention has also been drawn to the planting of cultivated varieties of the blueberry at the Central Experimental Farm at Ottawa. In Nova Scotia there are three experimental plantings where most of the varieties are hardy comparatively free from any disease or pests, and properly handled may be depended on to give a good yield of large fruits. The soil for blueberries is important. The plant, apparently requires a good moisture supply but not a water-logged soil. At Kentville the bushes are thriving on an upland soil that originally grew wild blueberries and one planting at Yarmouth is on the edge of a well-drained bog Very deep beds of peat do not seem to be satisfactory. According to the experience gained the cultivation of the blueberry should be similar to that for gooseberries and currants.

Cutting Soybean Hay

With an increasing number of farmers growing soybeans for hay, it is important that growers should cut the crop at the proper time. According to the Union of Prairie Plants soybeans for hay should be cut when the pods are about half filled out. The most desirable combination of quality and feed value is obtained at this stage. Cutting should be done with the mower in the morning, after the dew is off. It is usual to leave the crop in the swath for a day, or until the leaves are thoroughly wilted, then rake into windrows and then put into small cocks. The hay should be thoroughly cured before hauling and handled in such a way as to preserve the leaves as much as possible.

INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON, AUGUST 5th, 1934

II KINGS, 4 : 1-7 ; 42-44.

"ELISHA HELPS THE NEEDY"

The life of Elisha and his work has been summarized a good deal by his more spectacular predecessor, Elijah. Elijah was brilliant, impetuous, enthusiastic, and dynamic. Elisha was more quiet, and more sympathetic, but equally effective in forwarding God's Kingdom. While Elijah storms and fumes, Elisha quietly and sympathetically enters into the hearts of the peoples' sorrows and problems.

In today's lesson we see Elisha in the capacity of interested and helpful minister. A widow, in a difficult situation, came to unburden her heart. She had lost her husband—the bread-winner of the family. Added to that was a heavy debt, which she could not pay. Her creditors were pushing her hard, and had threatened in no wise her two children and sell them into slavery unless the money was raised in some way or other. Elisha listened attentively and sympathetically to her story. He pondered the true inkling of the minister. He knew the satisfaction and the relief which comes when one can unburden his heart to a kindly and sympathetic auditor.

More than that, though, he not only listened, but he set about helping her. He went about the matter in a way which was thoroughly consistent with modern methods of relief. He first found out her resources. What had she in her house ? Having ascertained the facts he might very easily have given her some gift which would have tided her over. But that would not have solved the problem. Gifts of that kind had been expended she would have been in the same position of poverty and want. The best way was not meant to place her on a permanent basis of support. So he set her to work on small oil business. She was to sell the oil and pay her creditors.

It is of course, the duty of the church to minister to the needy. Many a church has been founded on the principle of helping the poor. Many a church has been founded on the principle of helping the poor. Many a church has been founded on the principle of helping the poor

Width Of Railway Tracks

Have you ever wondered why the standard gauge of railways should be 4 ft. 8½ in.?It is a curious figure; it does not fit in exactly with yards or feet or inches, nor has it anything to do with the metric system used on the Continent. Yet 4 ft. 8½ in. is the gauge not only of British railways but of many of the world's important systems.

The question of the railway gauge has formed a puzzle for nearly a hundred years. When Stephenson was asked by the Railway Gauge Commissioners why he had adopted 4 ft. 8½ in. for his first railways, he replied that that was the gauge of most of the tram railways in the Newcastle colliery district. But neither he nor anybody else knew why or when the old tram railways had adopted it.

Recently the true explanation has been found, and it shows that the standard gauge goes back for at least 1,800 years in Great Britain, whilst in other countries it may even be traced hundreds of years further further back.

Before the coming of the steam engine, colliery waggons were hauled by horses over rails made sometimes of stone, and very occasionally of metal. It was clearly an advantage for Stephenson to make his steam railways of the same gauge. The first built were for colliery work, and the old vehicles could still be used. But why was the gauge of 4 ft. 8½ in. the traditional gauge for tracks used in connection with mines found all over the north of England?

The explanation came to light during excavations of parts of the Great Wall built 1,800 years ago by the Emperor Adrian, from the Tyne to the Solway Firth. Chariot tracks were found in many places and when these were measured, it was discovered that the distance from wheel to wheel was 4 ft. 8½ in. And then the true explanation came to light.

The Roman army's unit of distance was the "pace" or double stride — left-right, left. The Roman mile was a thousand paces. We know its exact length since many of their milestones remain; from this it was found that the pace was 4 ft. 8½ in.

All Roman chariots and all military vehicles were made with a standard track of one pace, or 4 ft. 8½ in., to facilitate the supplies of roads and causeways. The Romans worked lead and iron mines in the north of England, and some of their mines were still worked in the Newcastle district in Stenhenson's time, for nailed their hob nails? sandals, and to make the grooves of these easy over soft ground, they laid down tracks made with slabs of stone measuring 4 ft. 8½ in. from centre to centre. Similar tracks, of the same width are found in Pompeii and Herculaneum.

Perhaps the most curious part of the whole story is the influence exerted by the Roman soldiers' pace on the subsequent history of railways. It almost seems as though the chests of those who first built the great roads determined that the old gauge should be retained.

Many attempts have been made to depart from the standard gauge, but none has succeeded, although a wider gauge would clearly make for more comfortable travel and great speeds. The Great Western Railway adopted a gauge of 7 ft. over all the important parts of their system, and it was in use for many years. But not a yard remains.

British engineers despised the Continental railways, giving them almost exactly the 4 ft. 8½ in. gauge Britishers took this gauge all over the world. It may, in fact, be said that the Roman soldier stepped out the railways of the world.

NEW BERET REMINISCENT OF OLD TAM O'SHANTER

It is so rare that Jean Patou ever gives a hint about what he is doing, that if ever he does, you can count on it.

He has just made a hat, which he calls a beret, in navy blue velvet, trimmed with three bows of velvet. A beret, however, in the general mind, is small and round and stands for only a very little twisting or overtrimming. Patou's "beret" outgrows this conception and becomes what we were wont, in olden days, to call a tam o'shanter. These are large enough to twist and roll around in many odd shapes, held in place by bows or pins, flowers or clips, or stitched from beneath.

If you will keep your eye out for variations of this hat fame, you will note some rather interesting ones for fall. Whether you prefer to call it a beret or a tam the hat of the winter will consist of a more or less loosely draped piece of velvet, felt, plush or fabric with no distinct crown. It may be stretched over the head, and with a brim that is double and more of a fold of material than an independent shelf above the face and around the head.

The shallow crown for hats of larger types, will probably prevail, but at the last moment someone may decide that coverslips will make a dark-horse debut. All that we can conscientiously do is protect you against possible shock as to leave you the slogan, "Be Prepared." — Then, come what may, you have at least been forewarned.

Time Measuring Devices

Probably the first sundial was the invention of some Chaldean shepherd who stuck his staff in the ground and marked by stones the progressive shadows of the sun's day. An early historical instance of a sundial is that of Ahaz (2nd Kings 20-11), who reigned over Judah from 741 to 725 B.C. "Two hundred years after the time of Ahaz, our next historical sundial appears in Greece, and we find Diogenes presenting that Anaximander of Miletees invented gnomon.

The sundial of the Chaldean astronomer, Berosus, who lived about 349 B.C., remained in use for centuries and four specimens have been found in Italy, one of which was unearthed in 1762.

The Romans obtained dials from the Greeks, which divided the day into equal portions. Papirous Caesar placed a sundial in the Court of the Temple of Quirinus, in 293 B.C., and during the first Punic War a sundial was captured by Valerius at Catania, in Sicily and set up in the Forum in 263 B.C.

By the time of the Roman occupation of Britten, the knowledge of dial construction had advanced greatly. A most interesting example, dividing the day into twelve parts, was found done in Mosaic on a tessalated pavement in a Roman villa in the Isle of Wight, in accumulation about the third of fourth century. Hundred of years go to Bradine to see it. There is also a piece of a broker Roman sundial in the museum of Chester, which divided the day and night into twenty-four hours.

The above showed dials in the seventh and eighth century, some of which can still be seen. They are of Norish stone pillars, with lines or them to divide the day into four parts.

The most ancient dial in England is on the Cross at Bewcastle, Cumberland supposed to date from about 675 A.D. The Anglo-Saxons followed the decimal and duo-decimal system, but the little church at Kirkdale, Yorkshire, one of the few pre-Conquest churches in existence, is a most remarkable and valuable one, made about 1056, with a long Anglo-Saxon inscription to the right and left, a most valuable example of the pure English of the eleventh century.

About this time Mass clocks were introduced into the land. Probably every church had one, for, so far as we know, they formed the only means then known, for the measurement of time. They were cheap easily constructed and durable, but except for what can be learned from the remains of them carved on our old church walls, nothing is known of them. When the Normans conquered England, they brought with them the duo-decimal system of measuring time, which had long been in force on the Continent. The day being now divided into twelve hours, the old Anglo-Saxon dials, with their four tides to the day, became useless. But on many ancient dials of this period, the two systems have been found combined, somewhat puzzling to the antiquarian.

Notwithstanding the decay of centuries and exposure to the weather, hundreds of these little time-markers are still extant. Alfred the Great had constructed candles marked off with divisions that, as the stem burned down to the time could be measured. But only the wealthy could afford such a luxury. Mass clocks are much more numerous in England than in Scotland. In Hampshire scores of dials still remain and there are 224 in the County of Somerset alone.

After the introduction of clocks Westminster Abbey had one in 1288, and Wells in 1390. We may almost say that the practical mission of the sundial was at an end. By the end of the 14th century clocks were fairly common in towns, but in country places the people still clung to the picturesque sundial.

Our "Jean-as-could" port has not overlooked the sundial. A ring dial which could be carried in the pocket, and told the time when hung up in the sunlight, is mentioned in "As You Like It," act II., scene VII. :-

"And then he drew a dial from his poke
And, looking on it with lack-lustre eye
Says very wisely, "It is ten o'clock."

Fresh Water Important

When all classes of live stock do not have access to fresh water, they suffer considerably during the hot weather. The owner, in turn, suffers, as the animals, deprived of the required amount of water, do not put on flesh or produce milk as they otherwise might. A good water supply is a necessity on every live stock farm, and provision should be made to make it available to the animals.

WEDDING BELLS

McINNIS — RUSSELL

The home of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Russell of Carman, Manitoba, was the scene of a very pretty wedding on Wednesday, July 18th, when their second youngest daughter, Mary Ethel, was united in marriage to James Ray McInnis, second son of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. McInnis, of Elm Creek, Man.

Promptly at four o'clock, the bridal party entered the room, to the strains of the Bridal Chorus from Lohengrin, played by Miss Muriel Porter, and took their places under an arch of pink and white streamers.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, looked charming attired in a gown of shell pink silk organdie, tiered with double ruffles from knee to hem, with matching capelet and accessories of white. She carried a bouquet of cream Sweetheart roses. Little Berniece Pierson, niece of the bride, was flower girl, carrying a basket of cream gladioli, while little Frank Pierson accompanied her as ring bearer.

Rev. W. J. Morgan, of Carman, officiated, and during the signing of the register, Miss Dorothy Jones sang "I Love You Truly."

After the ceremony the guests were served with a dainty buffet luncheon, the bride's table being centered with a three-tier wedding cake and decorated with pink roses and sweet and white streamers.

The groom's gifts were, to the bride white cameo ear-rings; to Miss Jones, white gold and emerald earrings; to Miss Porter, a silver-plated bangle; to the flower girls a ring and to the ring-bearer a silver pen-knife.

Out-of-town guests were, Mr. and Mrs. J. C. McInnis and family, of Elm Creek; Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Russell and Miss Irene Miller, of Thornhill; Mr. J. M. Ferris, Sperling, and Mrs. D. S. Peerson and family, of Glenboro.

After a short honeymoon spent at Thornhill and Kenora, Mr. and Mrs. McInnis will reside at Barnsley.

King's Accession Anniversary Plans Well Under Way

London. — Although plans for the celebration, next year, of the 25th anniversary of His Majesty's accession, have received no official confirmation as yet, the general outline of them is already well advanced.

On Accession Day, May 6th, it is proposed there shall be a state procession to St. Paul's Cathedral for a Thanksgiving service. It is possible this will be held in the open air before the west door of the Cathedral. This was the manner in which Queen Victoria attended the Cathedral on the day of her Diamond Jubilee, June 22, 1897. The function furnished a magnificent spectacle.

On subsequent days the King and Queen will make two drives through London, one in the north and the north-west districts on one day and the south and south-eastern districts on another day.

Representatives of the Dominions and colonies and special envoys from foreign countries will be in London for this royal festival. A special banquet at Buckingham Palace and a gala performance at Covent Garden are also held over until 1935. The King and Queen are likely also to hold a special assembly for the presentation of certain loyal addresses. An exhibition of the gifts which will come to the King from all over the world is also likely to be one of the activities. Probably a public holiday will be declared for May 6th and commemorative medals will be struck.

Bouquets and Wedding Bells

HUNTER—EMBERLEY

The United Church at Yarker, Ont., lovely with cut flowers, baby's breath and ferns, was the setting for an interesting mid-summer wedding on Wednesday afternoon, July 18th, at 2 o'clock, when Miss Madeline Emberley, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alva Emberley, Yarker, was united in marriage to William John Hunter, only son of Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Hunter, of Kingston. The marriage was solemnized by Rev. G. McKelvie. The wedding march was played by Miss Isabelle McEnroe.

The charming young bride entered the church on the arm of her father, and looked lovely in a pale pink gown fashioned in princess style, with its blue silk sash tying gracefully to the short train. Her hat was a large pink model, with white accessories to match, and she carried a round bouquet of pink roses, lily-of-the-valley and maiden hair fern. They were married under an arch of evergreens intertwined with pink, white and blue flowers and white streamers. During the signing of the register, Miss Ruth Cairns and Miss Helen Grinder, lifelong friends of the bride, sang very effectively "I love you truly". The ushers were Mr. Courtland Sedgewick, of Yarker, and Mr. Hawley Brothers-in-law of the bride. The groom's gift to the bride was a handsome silver tea service, and to the ushers gold pianist shape compacts.

Immediately after the ceremony the bridal party, with guests numbering thirty-five, motored to the home of the bride's parents, and were received by the mother of the bride gowned in a navy blue silk crepe ensemble and wearing a shoulder bouquet of roses and lily-of-the-valley, while the groom's mother was attired in dubonnet crepe and also wore a shoulder bouquet of roses and lily-of-the-valley.

The table looked lovely with pink and white decorations and large white wedding bell, and was centred with an attractive wedding cake. There was a profusion of cut flowers about the reception and living rooms. Seven girl friends of the bride served a dainty buffet supper luncheon. Rev. Mr. McKenzie proposed a toast to the young couple, to which the groom ably responded.

Immediately after the luncheon the happy couple, amid a shower of confetti, left by motor for Toronto and points west. The bride travelled in a navy blue crepe suit with grey plaid trimming, and grey accessories to match. On their return the young couple will reside in Odessa, where the groom is a prosperous druggist. They were recipients of many beautiful gifts.

Prior to the wedding Odessa community presented the couple with a Gilbard solid walnut tea wagon. This function took place in the Odessa Library on Thursday evening, July 12th, when Miss Helen Sproule read an appropriate address, while Mrs. Shelly Jones and Mrs. Anna Clark made the presentation.

On Friday evening, July 13th, Mrs. John Fairbairn, Bicknell's Corners, was hostess for a variety shower to the bride elect. At the tea the recipient of many lovely and useful gifts, and a very delightful evening was spent.

A DIFFICULT TONGUE

The Statute of Autonomy for which a plebiscite was held, recently, in the three Basque provinces of Spain contains a stipulation that all officials at present ignorant of the Basque language shall, within five years, learn it in which to learn it. That is exactly five years more than the time taken, according to an old tradition, by the Devil to learn two words of that most difficult tongue at the end of seven years, runs the legend, his satanic majesty had mastered no more than the words for "yes" and "no" which, incidentally, he forgot again as soon as he sat foot out of the Basque country.

In the eighteenth century a Basque grammar was published, a silver-dad engaging title of "The Impossible Vanquished". A book printed as recently as 1910 at Saragossa, holds out a greater incentive than the retention of a Civil Service post to those who aspire to "vanquish the impossible," for it seeks to prove that Basque and none other is the language spoken in Paradise. It would, therefore, be advantageous to learn the other life ignorant of its tongue and to have so difficult as Basque to learn on arrival.—Bairnsley.

Hopes to Capture Rarities During Expedition

(Montreal Daily Star)

Dr. Raymond Lee Ditmars, curator of reptiles and reptile house at the Bronx Zoo, New York, celebrated the thirtieth anniversary of his arrival at the institution, recently, in making a list of the outlandish snakes and frogs which he hopes to capture on his forthcoming expedition to the Caribbean Sea.

The most peculiar specimen which Dr. Ditmars expects to secure is the Surinam toad which he said "looks as if an elephant had stepped on it, and has small beady blue eyes like pinpoints."

Mother's Back 'Incubator'

Dr. Ditmars said that the toad, which is about six inches long, is unique in the manner in which it disposes of its eggs. The female of the species lays the eggs in the water, each egg floating by itself. The male then secures the eggs, one by one in his forefeet, and imbeds them in the back of the female, where a retaining membrane forms immediately. The young toads remain in this refuge until they are sufficiently developed to fend for themselves. More than two hundred eggs have been found on the back of a single female, he said.

Huge Frog Bellicose

"Another rare species, which we shall try to secure, is the huge giant horned frog, which attains a length of more than ten inches. It is bright green, with yellow horns, barks like a dog, and can inflict a very severe bite. It is apt to jump at you while you watch, no warning whatever."

"We are also trying to catch a tropical spider (Grammastola Longimana) which is three times as large as the common tarantula. In addition to being very active, this spider is also highly poisonous, and its bite may have fatal results."

Will Hunt 'Poison' Frog

Dr. Ditmars said that another of his objects was the capture of the brilliantly-colored tree-frog of the Harlequin family. The skin of these frogs exudes a poison which is used by Indians in the north-eastern part of South America, to coat their poisoned arrows. The venom is said to be as deadly as strychnine if it reaches the blood stream, and is fatal within ten minutes. Dr. Ditmars added that the belief that American Indians use deadly poisons to coat their arrows is nothing but a popular fallacy.

THE SECOND DUKE OF MARLBOROUGH WAS A WOMAN

The Manchester Guardian, in commenting on the famous family, says: "the second Duke of Marlborough was a woman.

"The present Duchess of Marlborough, when she married Churchill," the paper says, "The first Duke did not have a son, and the title descended by special Act through his daughter, Henrietta Godolphin, who had been married to the son of Churchill's famous colleague, the Lord Treasurer. Henrietta left no male issue, and the title then passed to her great-nephew, Charles Spencer, fifth Earl of Sunderland.

"So little importance did the Spencers appear to attach to their Churchill descent that it was not until the early 19th century that they added Churchill to their name, which thus became 'Spencer-Churchill'."

Referring to the recent death of the ninth Duke of Marlborough, The Manchester Guardian says: "The late Duke was extremely proud of his celebrated ancestor, and 'devoted the later years of his life to editing and preserving his great house of Blenheim and his magnificent library, which was designed by Sir John Vanbrugh, is a typical rococo structure in its exterior and architecture.

"The late Duke loathed fast driving, and in one approach to the house he arranged for the building of two almost invisible ramps in the roadway. These combined with the fact that the road was never properly made up, effectively discouraged speeding. It is said that pursuant to his shooting parties who ignored the warning notice about the ramps arrived with their car springs injured and themselves somewhat shaken.

"The Duke was fully conscious of his rights and duties as a great property-owner. He kept so tight a hand on his important family papers that even Professor Trevelyan was not allowed to see them. Only Hilaire Belloc and Winston Churchill have been permitted to quote from them since the war. Recently the late Duke collected a fine library to replace the famous Sunderland collection that was sold, many of the volumes were always kept locked through fear of robbery."

ASPARAGUS IS A LONG TIME JOB

The importance of asparagus may best be judged by the rapidly increasing demand both in the fresh and in the canned state, and during recent years also there has been a greater interest than at any time taken in culture by home gardeners as well as by market and truck gardeners. Asparagus is of various kinds, but as by Mr. T. F. Ritchie, of the Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa, "The in-and-out grower is precluded from dabbling in this venture. This branch of industry is not adapted to the practice of growing a crop one year when the prospects of a rising market induce methods, and out of it the next season if the probabilities of a lucrative return seemed poor. An asparagus plantation should last from 15 to 20 years. Asparagus can be grown on many kinds of soils, but the most desirable are those well supplied with humus, deep, rich loam, and with sufficient moisture. The organic soils, such as peat and muck, contain abundance of plant nature and should show a definite reaction where the addition of one or more chemical fertilizers are applied.

History Of The Umbrella

The umbrella, anciently the symbol of sovereignty, slave-borne above dread despots in the hoary East, is now the very acme of the utilitarian commonplace, the badge of dull, bourgeois respectability writes Anthony Clyne in the Yorkshire Post. Rightly-rolled, it completes the "Sunday best" of the tradesmen on the afternoon promenade, or accompanies the cautious bank clerk from the suburbs, though the mornin' reefer the fairest promise.

The heyday of the umbrella in Great Britain passed away with the Victorian age. Did not the Duke of Cambridge once review his troops beneath its shelter? Imagine a field-marshal today taking the salute with side-de-camp thus protecting his plumes from the drizzle. The cult of the open air combined with motor transportation has completed its decline in popularity. Though I once observed on a road remote in the Cotswolds — it will scarcely be believed, but it was no hallucination — a sturdy hiker, complete with shorts, pack and road map, bearing umbrella upraised against a passing shower.

Prosaic as it is, the umbrella in these days is not wholly destitute of associations humorous and romantic or at least sentimental. We have all heard many a jest whereon the umbrella plays a part. And it has, in countless short stories of sentiment, held aloft the yellow duster and yet utterly denoded as opening gambit for a novelette.

The attention of umbrella manufacturers whose sales have presumably suffered from the decline in fashion, might be directed profitably to a recent report of the Governor of French West Africa, urging the French Ministry of Commerce to foster umbrella export, since "there is not a workman, fisherman or agricultural laborer who does not devote his first savings to the acquisition of an umbrella"—not, be it remarked, as a shield from tropical sun, still less from tropical rain, but solely as "a mark of elegance."

This Bantu predilection may spring from something much more profound than the mere imitative instinct which moved the African chief not long since to hanker after a European top hat to crown loin-clothed head-dress—indeed, it may be discovered in the far-off past, for in Africa and in Asia the associations of the umbrella were exalted indeed.

On Assyrian bas-reliefs, in carvings of Persepolis the regal umbrella appears. In China it has been traced back to the eleventh-century B.C. When the emperor's heir was captured in the second Tartar invasion of China, he was compelled to carry the barbarian chief's umbrella when he went hunting. There is a Chinese legend attributing the invention to a lady, who exhibited her handiwork to an architect, and invited him to devise a similar. "Sir, you are clever at constructing houses for men, but they cannot be moved. Mine is a shelter that you can be carried a thousand leagues."

In Burma the umbrella attained its apotheosis, so to speak. Every Burman is surmounted by what is really an emblematic meat umbrella. Its essential article of the regalia, the umbrella carried only over the monarch and perhaps his principal wife was of dazzling white and some six feet in diameter. The King of Ava, once a mighty Burmese potentate, was hailed as "Lord of the Ebbing and Flowing Sea, White Elephants, and Monarch of the Twenty-four Umbrellas."

The king possessed twelve golden umbrellas, other members of the royal family and vassal chiefs a smaller number, while lesser personages had red umbrellas and permission to add a fringe was conferred as a mark of distinction. One astute sovereign had the idea of issuing a succession of different edicts regulating the diameter and length of handle permitted, his treasury reaping a rich harvest of fines imposed on those who failed to follow the rapid changes.

It is extraordinary how the legend persists, despite continual corrections that Jonas Hanway introduced the use of the umbrella into England. What he did accomplish by his temerity in carrying one in London streets some fifty years was to initiate its adoption by men, though the practice did not become at all common for thirty years or more.

Disraeli the elder, who was born in 1766, was that in his youth few but the macaronies of the day, as the dandies were called, would venture to display one. At first a sign of effeminacy, the umbrella was kept at a coffee-house for some extraordinary occasion — lent to a chair or a coach in a heavy shower.

But women had carried umbrellas before Hanway was born, as may be seen from that graphic picture of Queen Anne's London, Gay's "Trivia, or the Art of Walking the Streets," Good housewives, he writes, despised wintry weather and "underneath the umbrella's oily shade (safe through the wet on clinking pattens tread."

New Blood Test Diagnoses Early Cancer Symptoms

Diagnosis in Early Stages When Disease Frequently Curable, Assured By Discovery in United States

New quantities in cancerous blood, discovered by the spectroscope, a scientific instrument which astronomers use, were reported today to the Conference on Biochemistry meeting at Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

The spectroscope, which accurately tells the kinds of atoms on distant stars, indicates that cancerous blood is different from that of cancer-free subjects. These spectroscopic studies were made on rats mostly, but a few have very recently been tried on human beings, and indicated that the same full tale of differences exist there, too.

Early Diagnosis

The implications are that the spectroscope may be developed into a practical method of diagnosing cancer in its early stages when it is frequently readily curable by ordinary medical treatments. Such early diagnosis does not exist now.

The report was made by Dr. R. B. Sanigar, of the University of Pennsylvania.

The work started, Dr. Sanigar said with no idea of looking for differences between cancerous and non-cancerous blood. Instead it was hoped to identify a somewhat mysterious substance believed to exist in cancerous blood.

The spectroscope was used because its technique of breaking a beam of light into its rainbow reveals the presence of substances through characteristic lines in the spectrum. The whole plasma and placed in the spectroscopic beam of light.

The light from Mars is absorbed by the plasma. Dr. Sanigar showed that the absorption differs radically from normal when blood is from cancerous rats. His formal report was made on rats only.

In the rats some of the spectroscopic studies showed the cancerous condition as much as a week after the beginning of the malady, and when the cancer itself was only a barely visible spot.

Science Restores Largest Known Land Mammal

(The Montreal Star)

"A model of a prehistoric creature—baluchitherium by name—that is believed by paleontologists to have been the largest land mammal of which any record remains, will soon be on exhibition at the American Museum of Natural History. Dr. Walter Granger, curator of fossil mammals at the museum, reported recently. The reconstruction will be baluchitherium's first appearance in its three dimensions, since he roamed the plains of Central Asia 25,000,000 years ago.

Although the museum possesses a variety of fossil parts of from 25 to 30 of the gigantic animals, there is no one specimen complete, and no attempt will be made at present to erect a mounted skeleton. There is always too much danger of mistakes, Dr. Granger said, in assembling such a creature without the bones of a single entire animal.

The Museum's scientists, therefore, are now engaged in making a partial restoration from which a paper model will be constructed and put on exhibition, early in the fall. Accompanying the model will be some of the principal skeletal parts of chief interest. The size of these fossil remains indicates that the larger members of the tribe stood at least 15 feet high at the shoulder.

Kin Of Rhinoceros

"Baluchitherium is a regular member of the rhinoceros family, of gigantic size and without horns," Dr. Granger said. "He is a strictly Asiatic animal. He is a close relative, though probably collateral and not a direct ancestor, of the modern rhinoceros, which is found both in Asia and in Africa.

"His modern history dates from about 1910, when Foster Cooper, head of the Zoological Museum of Cambridge University, England, found the first fossil remains in Baluchistan. Hence the name given him by Cooper. Further explorations have since found similar fossils in Russian Turkestan, north and northeast of the Aral Sea.

"On each of the five expeditions of the American Museum to Central Asia, in 1922, 1923, 1925, 1928, and 1930, we have found some remains of baluchitherium in the Gobi desert. Fossil skulls and fore and hind feet have been in the Mongolian exhibit hall of the museum for many years. Now we have fossils from thirty skeletons of many sizes, but it is difficult to determine the creature's normal size, which certainly differed in species and art well as in age."

No doubt scientists, however, the curator said, that when the animal ranged the Asiatic wilds in the Miocene era, the prehistoric period of geologic history, he set a record for size among land mammals. Compared to him such other prehistoric creatures as the mastodon and mammoth were little fellows and baluchitherium's present day cousin, the rhinoceros, scarcely deserves mention except for the family relationship.

THE GENEVA TOUCH

Whatever else the holding of international conferences in Geneva is effecting, it clearly seems to be having some influence on current modes of speech. Recently it was announced that the French owner of a race horse, had decided "to run" at the races, his horse would not run in the Derby—an ingenious statement that left the hearer in doubt upon the question whether scratching "in principle" is or is not to be followed by scratching in fact. Even more gloomily closely to recent diplomatic usage it this sort of thing spreads, few phrases of plain language in the near future should be expected.

Dr. Dafoe's Confession Again:
Good morrow, friend. Touching that matter of the animal in the 3:30, in which you have a financial interest, I am happy to inform you that though the "de facto" position remains as I formerly stated, a comparatively considerable effort to leave not a stone unturned, to move on every avenue, to open up . . .

Second Turf Commission Agent: — Shucks!

First Turf Commission Agent: — You have indeed said it. So, since it lasts for diminishing returns to attempt it, I think you may take it that the animal is in principle, like-ly-

Second Turf Commission Agent, (rudely): It's the only place where he is likely to be, principally, like me for ? A disarmament conference?

MAKING GLOVES A RURAL ART IN MANITOBA PROVINCE

Members of Women's Institutes Show Development of Handicraft

Fashioning of gloves from fine materials, such as chamois, is one of the intricate handicrafts in which rural women have become proficient, according to a demonstration at the Red River Valley district Women's Institute meeting.

Mrs. M. Wallace of Emerson, Manitoba, appeared wearing a pair of home made pull-over gloves. They were of fine chamois, outsewn, with brown silk stitchings and a neat motif on the gauntlet. The suit she wore looked like tweed from a distance, but close up it proved to be tweed-effect wool, and the whole thing had been made by herself. Women admiring her at the meeting asked if she had made the hat she wore but she scoffed at that idea.

How did she learn to make gloves? From reading descriptive articles in a Canadian women's magazine. Where did she get the skins? From a British Columbia group of women who also make gloves and who import fine chamois and suedes from England.

Asked what was the hardest part about this intricate work, Mrs. Wallace replied "Oh, the tailoring! That's the advantage of hand-made gloves—you try to judge the person's hand for whom you are making the gloves and then make them to suit the style of hand, as well as fit it."

Mrs. R. Masterton, also of Emerson, wore gloves of her own make. They were of white linen with blue thread cuffs. And the Winnipeg visitors went home in high enthusiasm, wondering if there was anything country women could not do.

HOW TO WASH TAFETTA SUCCESSFULLY AT HOME

No matter when or how Fashion decrees it should be used, besides being attractive taffeta is at the same time most practical, as it can quickly be restored to its pristine loveliness by a simple method at home.

The best way to tackle this is to have plenty of soap jelly or soap flakes and a good supply of hot water. The taffeta should first of all be soaked in cold salted water for half an hour, to fix the colors and prevent them running during washing. If, however, the colors are found to be loose, just quickly rinse the material in large bowls of water, then carefully squeeze the water out, after which the garment should be turned to the wrong side. Rinse in lukewarm water to which has been added a cold blue water if the silk has blue in it. For all other colors vinegar in the proportion of one tablespoon to a gallon of water should be added instead of the blue, as this removes the color. A little methylated spirits added to this water restores the natural gloss and stiffness to the fabric.

The taffeta should now be rolled in a towel and left for about an hour, then ironed on the reverse, where the colors are not fast, iron as quickly as possible on a cold sheet and dry air thoroughly. The iron should not be too hot, as silk scorches very quickly and it is generally ironed on the right side. But when it is found that the material glares badly, it is advisable to iron on the wrong side.

A SOUTH SEA SOAP BUBBLE

It has just been disclosed by a lecturer on the peoples and customs of the Western Pacific that the natives of the Solomon Islands are "now too busy—mainly making soap bubbles and other ornaments which they used to make for themselves." The result is that ready-made articles are sent out from Birmingham and Austria.

Well, that is a little better than the old story about Birmingham which used to allege that the Christians were in the habit of exporting brass idols to foreign parts because enterprising traders had found that there was a considerable demand for the mass-production article There can be no ethical objection to the export of ornaments from Birmingham—particularly as cleanliness is next to godliness and the Solomon Islanders are apparently so fond of the former that they are using their own soap to have any time for personal decorations. Do they export any of their soap, one wonders? It would be a singularly pleasing example of the solidarity of man, the virtues of Free Trade, and the interchangeability of articles of commerce if the brass-workers of Birmingham made themselves dirty in their efforts to ornament the Solomon Islanders with soap, the Solomon Islanders exported soap in order that the workers of Birmingham could keep clean again. — Manchester Guardian.

HONEY DAMAGE DEFINED

As applied to honey, the word "damage" is construed in the regulations under the Fruit and Honey Act, 1934, means injury caused by overheating, any objectionable flavour or aroma from floral source, honeydew, taint of smoke, or other flavours or aroma foreign to honey, "Serious damage" means any injury or defect that seriously affects the eating or shipping quality of the honey, such as fermentation, excessive foreign substance, or honeydew, and in turn, "foreign material" means visible pollen, wax particles, insects, or other substances foreign to honey.

According to the regulations, also, containers must be clean and sound. This means containers free from rust, dust, stains, leaks and unsightly dirt. Containers caused by rough handling, and free from any danger of impairing any foreign odour or flavour to the honey contained therein.

Head the Hive With a Prolific Queen

The foundation for the next year honey crop, says the Dominion Apiarist, is laid by making sure that every colony is headed by a young and vigorous queen early in August so that she has sufficient time to produce a large force of bees before the end of the brood rearing season. To perform the duties expected of her the queen must have ample room for maximum egg production and there must always be an adequate supply of food available for the brood she produces. Other conditions being satisfactory, strong colonies headed with young vigorous queens in the fall are the best assurance of strong colonies the following spring and a strong force of field bees in time for harvest.

DOMINION EXPERIMENTAL FARMS WEEKLY NEWS LETTER

Take Out The Weeds

Although modern seed cleaning machinery will do a great deal to take out weed seeds from grass and clover seed, it will not make perfect separation in all cases. In fields for seed, weeds should be taken out in the summer so as to make possible high grades and best prices. Such weeds as mustard, daisies, ladder campion, white cockle, and others classed as noxious, should be removed in the summer so as to keep them out of seed crops and, what is just as important, keep them from sending themselves down again.

At What Stage of Maturity Should Crops be Harvested

Experiments by the Field Husbandry Division, of the Dominion Experimental Farms, show that crops cut at the following stages give highest yields of best quality.

HAY—Alfalfa one tenth in bloom, red clover full bloom, timothy when in full bloom, and timothy for hay when the kernels are in the milk stage.

GRAIN—All grain crops should be cut when the kernels are firm and before the heads are too easily shattered.

SILEAGE—Corn late dough, sunflowers 50 per cent. in bloom, red clover full bloom, alfalfa full bloom and wilted five hours after cutting, oats and peas when oats are in the dough stage.

ROOTS—As late in the fall as possible.

Potatoes—When the tops are all dead.

WATCHING BROKEN BONES

Broken bones are now shown in the process of knitting by x-ray motion pictures which are made by a new camera perfected by Doctor Arthur C. Pillsbury, naturalist and photographer of the University of California. Doctor Pillsbury's camera works on the same principle as the one used to photograph the unborn baby in the x-ray movies. In the case of single pictures at intervals, of a movement impossible to the human eye, and then running them off as motion pictures to show movements which may have taken several days, all encompassed in a few moments. The first motion picture made with the x-ray camera showed the growth in the interior of a rose. It took seventy-two hours to film, as only one picture at a time could be made in intermitten exposures. To avoid damaging the rose during the filming, Doctor Alfred D. Goolidge, inventor of the Coolidge tube, designed a special x-ray tube.

New Furniture For Book Lovers

Modern furniture has been cautiously accepted by conservatives, enthusiastically by interior decorators, whole heartedly by the younger generation living in small apartments and gratefully by all book owners. Never has furniture or decoration so ably aided and abetted a love for books and a desire to have a library. Books, with their gay colors, fit amiably into the modern decorating scheme and help to emphasize the vertical trend. Because of the limited space in the old-fashioned glass-enclosed bookcase, many books were piled on closet shelves, and the newangles formed by the set-backs (modern design's almost basic line), make a good place in which to assemble groups of colorfully bound books, and they find their way into every corner of the modern room.

The new bookcases are remarkable for their erratic outlines. Some start sedately at the end of a couch and then, after a fairly upright climb, go straying across the wall to the other end of the couch, descend, ending sometimes in a desk or cabinet. A recent innovation of wiring the underside of the shelf above the couch for an electric light has proved an interesting solution for the booklover who wants to lounge comfortably while reading.

Shelves of black or clear heavy glass are often used, and the housewife finds these a boon, not only because they do not warp and are easy to clean. Fireplaces, always more attractive with bookcases on either side, lend themselves to modern treatment, with shelves mounting to the mantel in steps on both sides and a row of books across the mantel. To keep the fireplace composition from becoming monotonous, the shelves sometimes end in a cabinet on one side and a broad seat or desk on the other.

The set-back shelves with uneven distribution of space offer many possibilities for introducing decorative notes of odd china animals, small plants or pieces of pottery from foreign lands.

Almost every piece of furniture now has its book nook! Modern desks of all kinds have been equipped with bookshelves, a writing move, for reference books could not possibly be more conveniently placed. Low-built upholstered or wicker chairs include space for small sized books and magazines, and are now utilized. Shelves may also run along the wall the length of the bed, an arm's reach above it. It is hard to tell whether we read so many books that we must find means to be invented for taking care of them, or whether the attractive displays and bookcase plans make us read and buy more books, but it is certain that never before have books been so simple accepted for the adornment of good taste.—Boston Evening Transcript.

FACTORS IN FRUIT JELLY MAKING

(Experimental Farms Note)

Three substances are essential to a good jelly. They are pectin, sugar and acid. Pectin is the primary jellying agent. It varies considerably in fruits both in quality and quantity. Analysis of small fruits in the chemical laboratories of the Central Experimental Farm, has shown how readily pectin deteriorates. To retain their maximum jellying capacity, these fruits should be picked when just ripe and should be used as soon as possible after picking.

Sugar plays an important part in jelly formation. Texture, flavour and yield of jelly are largely determined by the amount of sugar added. Ordinarily, the best jellies contain about 65 to 68 per cent of sugar in the finished product, but the necessary amount of sugar is added will vary with the composition of the fruit. Too much sugar in proportion to pectin and acid is one of the most common causes of failure in jelly making. Other things being equal, a weak jelly results from the addition of too much sugar and a tough jelly from the addition of too little.

The acid content, or more correctly, the active acidity of fruits is the third essential of jelly formation. If it is too high "sweating" will occur; if it is too low, the jelly will not "set". All fruits contain acid in varying amount. In general the acid in the fruit provides sufficient active acidity for the making of a good jelly, provided that sufficient pectin and sugar are present.

Investigations in the chemical laboratories have shown how important it is to obtain a proper balance between pectin, sugar and active acidity to produce the best jellies.

A combination of 0.2 per cent acid and 0.3 per cent pectin with 65 per cent sugar was found to give a very satisfactory product.

BALANCED FERTILIZER

There are two main factors which must the possibility of ever being able to take the results of any fixed experiment and of using them as a basis for a rule of thumb recommendation for general application, says Mr. M. B. Davis, the Dominion agriculturist, in a treatise on balanced fertilizer practice as an aid to better keeping quality of fruits. The first factor is the variation of the composition and food content of the original soil on hand, and the second is the past treatment of history of the soils after they have come under the control of man. Instead of judging the results of our fertilizer treatments entirely by yield and growth records, it seems far more reasonable to consider also the quality of the fruit on the one hand, and the keeping quality of the fruit after it has been picked. A large crop of poor keeping fruit is of little value to any one. Although the proper date of picking for proper storage conditions may be used to influence the keeping quality of apples, fertilizer and cultural practice during growth, have a greater effect. Proper picking dates may, of course, iron out some of the results of unbalanced fertilizer treatment, but it is doubtful if all the ills due to unbalanced practice can be ironed out in this manner.

HIGH-CLASS CANADIAN HONEY

In order that the high standard of Canadian honey may not be imperilled, the following sanitary conditions are to be observed and maintained in accordance with the regulations under the Fruit and Honey Act, 1934. All buildings or rooms in which honey is extracted, packed or stored must be maintained in a clean and sanitary condition. All appliances, including extractors, pumps, uncapping machines, or other equipment used in the handling of honey from the time it leaves the combs until packed also be kept clean and sanitary. All operations in connection with the preparation and packing of honey must be carried on carefully and with strict cleanliness. All persons engaged in the preparation, handling and packing of honey must be free from all communicable diseases and the coverings used by them to protect their clothing or persons must be kept scrupulously clean and be kept reasonably clean. No lavatory, sink, cesspool, or buildings in which animals are housed must be so situated or maintained as to permit drainage or sewage therefrom to pervade any room or building in which honey is being extracted, packed, handled, or stored, or which is intended to be used for food found by an inspector in any apiary, packing plant or warehouse, to be in any way unfit for food purposes, will be placed under detention and held for disposal as the Minister of Agriculture may direct. All transportation vehicles must be clean and sanitary.

PREVENTION OF MOTH DAMAGE
The prevention of damage by clothes moths requires the exercise of care, foresight, and vigilance. Articles of clothing and other materials, subject to attack, should not be left undisturbed for long periods, particularly during the summer months, in such place as cupboards, attics, trunks, etc., unless adequate precautions have been taken to protect them from moth injury. Such articles, after having been thoroughly brushed and beaten, preferably in strong sunlight, should be placed in well-made trunks or chests with tightly fitting lids, or enclosed in cotton or paper bags or in cardboard boxes sealed with paper strips. Woollen clothing in two thicknesses of strong wrapping paper, taking care that the edges are turned so that no moths may gain entrance, is also recommended as an alternative measure. One pound of naphthalene flakes or a similar quantity of paradichlorobenzene scattered among the contents in an ordinary sized trunk, assures perfect protection from moth injury. When using mothbags, several ounces of either the above chemicals may be enclosed in each bag as an additional protection. —Entomological Branch, Dominion Department of Agriculture.

SABBATH-BREAKING VISTAS
Though a committee of the Free Church of Scotland has reported unanimously in favour of closing all shops on Sunday and prohibiting Sunday motor-coach excursions, it is doubtful if Sabbatarian usages will ever again become so drastic in the northern kingdom as they were half a century ago. As an instance of the extremes to which Sunday observance was practised, James Payn used to tell how, on his first visit to Edinburgh, he was struck by the fact that on Sunday morning he found the majority of houses had the blinds down. He concluded that most of the citizens must spend the day in bed, but was enlightened when his landlady reproached him for having raised his own blind.
It was not usual in Edinburgh, she told him, to draw up the blinds on the Sabbath, when idle gazing out of the window was considered an irreligious practice, and she did not wish to have neighbours commenting on "the unlawful appearance of her establishment which had heretofore been a God-fearing house."—Miscellany.

NEWS AND INFORMATION FOR THE BUSY FARMER

(Furnished by the Ontario Department of Agriculture)

Value of Orchards

That good fruit farms are worth owning is the advice of a well-known agricultural authority. Owners should make every effort to keep them, for money will be made from them in the future as in the past. Further he points out that growers who sell nearest home get the best prices. Culls sold in the home markets often net more than fancy fruit shipped to distant cities. But selling culls anywhere is a very poor policy as it brings the price down badly, and lessens the desire of the buyer for the fruit.

Weekly Crop Report

Fall wheat is ripening fast but returns will be definitely below average. Spring wheat is progressing satisfactorily. Coarse grains, the acreage of which has been considerably increased to supplant the feed shortage, are filling out well. Pasture has improved with the warm weather and shows satisfactory growth and color. Pastures show considerable improvement but still need more moisture. The yield of canning peas will be less than normal. Tomato plants are coming along nicely and forming well. Root crops are promising with the exception of sugar beets which are patchy and a poor yield is fore-shadowed. Damage to orchards due to winter kill was more severe than anticipated and light crops of apples, peaches, pears and plums, are indicated. Tobacco plants are showing good growth, but due to the activity of the cutworm a small percentage of the crop will be spotty and in Norfolk County some scattered damage has resulted from winds.

Expensive Marketing

The carrying over of cattle from one market to another is an expensive business, detrimental to the interests of both producer and trade. It is the opinion of the department that livestock marketing would show a much more even trend if the habit of loading up every Monday with the week's supply were discontinued. Better distribution of deliveries to the stockyards would seem to be the answer. In the Province of Ontario, motor truck deliveries have reached a very heavy volume. At Toronto almost all the supply of cattle, during the month of May, was received off trucks, and a large percentage arrived at the market without prenotice.

Water for the Poultry

Extremely warm weather often causes heat prostration among fowl. Therefore an abundant supply of clean, fresh water, should be available to the growing and laying flock. Water, making up 66 per cent of an egg, makes its use imperative to good [illegible] and also helps greatly [illegible] In the assimilation of poultry feeds. Clean water is necessary, not only from a sanitation standpoint, but also to help control egg flavor.

Century Year at C. N. E.

Under a new arrangement the competition class of field crops, fruits and vegetables will be brought together at the Canadian National Exhibition, Toronto, August 24 to September 8. About 60,000 square feet of floor space in the western annex of the Agricultural Coliseum will be used for display.

To encourage growers to co-operate in the securing of a larger and attractive exhibit to feature "Century Year" celebrations, additional classes, with offerings supplemented by $1,000, have been provided for fruit and vegetables, and the field and farm crops divisions have been revised and brought up to date, also championship classes for sheaves, with special prize moneys. Prize money in the Ontario Vegetable Growers' Association branch exhibits section has also been extended and bronze medals are added awards for vegetable collections. Fruits and vegetables for the first week showing are to be staged and ready for judging on Monday, August 27, at 9 a.m., and for the second week showing the date of staging and judging is Monday, September 3rd. Ontario Department of Agriculture officials and heads of departments are co-operating to the fullest extent to make the new showing attractive and successful.

Judges for fruit and vegetables are: Field crops and farm crops, Prof. W. J. Squirrell, O.A.C., Guelph; Ontario Vegetable Growers' Association, Mr. O. J. Robb, Vineland; garden vegetables, W. Harris, Jr., Humberside, and Thomas Delworth, Weston; commercial packages of fruit, P. Piser, Burlington; apples, except commercial packages, E. F. Palmer, Vineland; peaches and grapes, except commercial packages, F. J. Sheppard, St. Catharines.

Good Outlook for the Poultry Business

Mr. P. C. Elford, Dominion Poultry Husbandman, and Mr. George Robertson, chief assistant, who have just completed a tour among farmers and poultrymen throughout Ontario, report a tendency among the farmers to increase their poultry flocks, due chiefly to the fact that their poultry has been their chief source of ready revenue in the past two or three years. However, due to poor hatching results this spring, they report a shortage of early pullets and in many cases a lack of uniformity throughout, which leads them to believe that, there will be a general shortage of fall and early winter pullet eggs.

Trade Is Reciprocal

The trade in apples is reciprocal. Canada sending fresh crop apples to New Zealand in the months of November and December, and New Zealand sends supplies from her new crop by direct steamer to Halifax for distribution and sale in May, June and July when domestic grown competing varieties are practically off the market and new Canadian apples are not ready for marketing until August or September.

Advices to the department indicate that New Zealand desires to increase her purchases of Canadian apples annually and the credits established by the sale of apples help Canadian export trade. The value of this trade is invariably in favor of Canada—for the fiscal year ending March, 1933, Canada sold to New Zealand goods to the value of $4,490,000 and New Zealand sold to Canada for the same period goods to a value of $2,575,000.

Ontario Cattle Raisers Organize For Exporting

County organization meetings of beef cattle raisers are now being held throughout the interested district in Western Ontario. Middlesex and Wellington led off a short time ago, while within the last fortnight Kent, Lambton, Huron and Bruce, each have held meetings. The remaining counties will be shortly are organizing shortly. The meetings are being held to form county organizations to be later co-ordinated under an Ontario Cattle Export Association. Only cattle raisers interested in export will also be represented on the Association. The object of the Association is to restore confidence and stability in the export market among beef and dairy cattle raisers of both pure breds and commercial grades. Facilities for providing means within the Association for direct export of cattle alone have followed so successfully by Ontario cattle and honey producers, are also being carefully considered.

THE CONTROL OF BROWN HEART OF TURNIP

[illegible] Experimentalist, Vineland Station

Brown heart of turnips is serving as an important limiting factor in the production of turnips in Eastern Canada. Affected turnips are unfit for table use. Unlike other turnip troubles there are no visible indications of the presence of this condition on the external portions of the plant. The earliest symptom is a water-soaked area in the central portion of the root. Affected areas may extend until the entire interior of the root is involved. In advanced cases, affected portions may develop into a soft brown, pulpy mass which may eventually break down with the formation of a cavity. Physiological tests conducted at the Dominion Laboratory of Plant Pathology at Fredericton, N.B., revealed that this trouble is linked up with the element boron. Extensive field tests showed that ordinary borax applied at the rate of 10 pounds per acre effected a favourable degree of control of this trouble. The material used for these tests was a high grade finely powdered borax which can be obtained at any drug store at approximately 10 cents a pound. In order to afford sufficient bulk for easy application the correct amount of chemical should be mixed with five to six times its own weight of dry earth which has been passed through a fine screen. Thorough mixing can be achieved by sifting the borax into the earth during the mixing operation, from a small tin or other suitable container with several holes punched in the cover. The borax mixture should be applied directly in the drill and thoroughly raked in to avoid concentrating the chemical in any one place. The treated areas should be allowed to stand for 3 to 4 days before planting. Further information on this subject can be obtained by communicating with the nearest Dominion Laboratory of Plant Pathology.

HAIR ORNAMENTS STILL POPULAR IN PARIS

Hair ornaments show no sign of disappearing. Antoine of Paris is still making them out of all sorts of things, from hair itself to gay and dazzling bits of gold and silver, twisted leaves, crystal flowers and lacquered lace.

At one of the elaborate balls during the Grande Semaine, there were quantities of flower wreaths for the hair (regular crowns of the May at fairs, some of them), as well as pins and coronets and diadems and tiaras, all of which vary only slightly from the main idea.

Bracelets and rings are being used other places besides on arms and fingers, for it is quite proper and decorative to use them now for purposes of draping and holding in place material of the corsage and skirt, sashes and folds of fabric of a frock or coat. Likewise, they may assist in the trimming and [illegible] functioning of a hat, gown or shoes.

Evening bags remain small and inconspicuous, just sufficient to contain powder, lipstick, hanky and a wee comb. For further reparations of disarranged rich[illegible], one is supposed to withdraw to the privacy of a "Ladies Room" where in the smarter establishments, beauty preparations are provided.

Beautiful Pottery A Fine Art

What exactly is meant by chinaware, many a one asks? China is name given to a hard translucent pottery, but often wrongly applied to domestic dishes and ornamental pottery. There is a difference between earthenware and what is known as real china, and earthenware sometimes coming quite thin often passes to the unitiated as china. One of the outstanding features of the china ware is its translucency; the outline of an object when held at the back of a piece of china and exposed to the light allows the shades of the article to be visible to the naked eye. A more professional and accurate test is that of applying red ink to the ware under the glaze. If the ink is absorbed this is proof positive that the ware is not china.

Closely related to china is porcelain. This ware is difficult to define in scientific terms owing to its varying composition. Many countries are justly proud of the pottery they produce and the special characteristics attached to the composition of various wares in relation to materials and decoration connected with each centre of production.

That the pottery industry has taken a strong hold on people of all nationalities cannot be denied. This industry has for centuries attracted the patronage of royal personages and governments.

At present let us concentrate our interests on England alone, and study one aspect of her chinaware industry, namely bone china. Porcelain, in which bone ash is an important constituent, is manufactured almost entirely in England, and experts claim that it has more durable and better wearing qualities than the feldspar china of Europe.

This particular type of porcelain was introduced into England by a man now famous in the pottery world, Josiah Spode, of Stoke-on-Trent, born in 1779. It is related by authorities that Spode produced a better porcelain than any that has yet been made in England. He was ambitious and rested not until he created a soft porcelain resembling Sevres in quality, finally producing a ware now known as Spode stoneware. Spode's success and influence caused an upheaval among porcelain manufacturers, and the beautiful rural landscape of Staffordshire was shortly to be transformed into a vast industrial centre owing to his untiring labors. New factories came into existence until to-day Stoke-on-Trent, Staffordshire is the pottery centre of the world.

Josiah Spode himself was a punil of Whieldon, the man universally acknowledged as the father of Staffordshire pottery. Rising from an apprentice, he became owner of a vast plant, and shortly perfected the art of underglazed printing; this he [illegible] Successfully, and Spode also developed outline printing, a method materially reduced the work of the artist. Much time was saved as well as labor in this way, because by having the outline printed it was only necessary to fill in the color. A detailed description of [illegible] same lines which had been carried on unsuccessfully, and Spode also developed outline printing, a method materially reduced the work of the artist. Much time was saved as well as labor in this way, because by having the outline printed it was only necessary to fill in the color. A detailed description of [illegible] very [illegible] pattern. And his formula is [illegible] has since been adopted by the leading porcelain manufacturers throughout the five towns in north Staffordshire, and also by the Coalport, Derby and Worcester factories.

Volumes upon volumes of original designs by Spode may now be found in the archives of the Spode factory. It is a father to son craft and the workmen are descendants of the craftsmen who worked for Spode. They have inherited the skill and talent of their forefathers as well as their safely guarded secrets of firing and glazing.

It is the hand of the artist that gives the final touch to the finish and formation of porcelain pieces, and it is by feel and touch and not by mechanical weight that each individual piece is finally produced. A china body consists of nine parts bone, five parts stone, one-half part frit glaze, one-half ball clay, one part special china clay, and six parts of a different nature. Spode ware is composed of a mixture properly measured, and this ware presents a wonderful glaze, guaranteed for one hundred years. Unlike so many of the cheaper grade chinas, despite use and abuse, Spode china never cracks and it passes through years of service still harboring to itself its pristine freshness.

The history of Spode reverts to early English days, and what is know as the Charlotte shape received its inspiration from France and was modelled on the lines of old French silver. Spode has ever designed his pieces from beautiful old shapes and styles of silver largely, and he conceived his idea mainly from observing noted silversmiths' work both as to design and outline. His ambition was never to be offset by the seemingly impossible and although needed by many difficulties, he always held his stand that nothing was impossible in notting. Take for example scalloped edges, the most difficult problem to overcome, and to make perfect, entailing much tedious labor.

When we eat our afternoon tea and eat our thinly cut bread and butter from scalloped china plate, let us remember that each little scallop had to be carefully gone over by hand with a special tool, in order to insure the perfect regularity and form of these Spode treasures.

Why suffer needlessly? Douglas' Egyptian Liniment brings quick, sure relief to scald feet, soft corns and warts. Relieves inflammation. Removes proud flesh.

MOSCOW WOMEN'S INSTITUTE

Mrs. T. Armstrong was the hostess to the members and visitors of the Moscow Women's Institute on July 5th.

The meeting was of a patriotic nature, and opened in the usual manner, after which "O Canada" was sung.

The roll call was answered by each member naming a "Father of Confederation" and giving some interesting incident in his life.

Reports were then heard from the Standing Committees.

Mrs. T. Armstrong gave an interesting account of the convention held in Kingston by the Ontario Historical Research Society.

Short papers on Canadian Women of Note were given. Pauline Johnson", by Kaye Baker; "Laura Secord", by Etta Judge; "Marie Dressler", by Nellie Lakins; "Marie Hebert", by Marian Shane.

After singing "The Maple Leaf", Mr. C. Darling gave an excellent address on "Our Dominion", for which, he was rendered a hearty vote of thanks.

A large number of exhibits were displayed for the exhibition of "Canadian Made Goods".

An expression of appreciation of the members of the Moscow W. I. was given the President. Miss Palard governess, who left for success in her new work in Mexico.

A former resident of the community, Mrs. Fesmire, of Philadelphia, gave a brief and interesting account of "Canada's Child" in her home city, and mentioned especially the good will between the U. S. A. and Canada.

The meeting closed with the National Anthem, after which a delicious lunch was served by the hostess and committee.

MAPLE RIDGE W. I.

The regular meeting of the Maple Ridge Women's Institute was held at the home of Mrs. B. Calder, Wednesday, July 11th. The meeting was opened by singing the ode, followed by the creed, in unison. The roll call was answered by 15 members and which spread. The minutes were then read and approved. The usual business followed; two letters of appreciation being read from sick members. An invitation from Mount Pleasant Pioneers, was extended to Maple Ridge to attend a lawn social at Mr. Bridge's, on August 2nd.

Mrs. Merle Dennison then gave a very full report of the District Annual Convention, held at Bath.

A duet by the Misses Cooke was much enjoyed by all. Mrs. Jaynes gave interesting current events concerning many countries of the world.

[illegible] very pleasant hour with by Miss L. Rockwell, on "Education." The theme around which the speaker's address was the responsibility of parents and teachers in education, and the truthfulness and obedience could not be taught too early in life.

A novelty feature of the program was a house-dress parade in which most of the members took part.

After singing the National Anthem a dainty lunch was served.

Dust Causes Asthma. Even a little speck too small to see will lead to agonies which no words can describe. The walls of the breathing tubes contract and it seems as if the very life must pass. From this condition Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Asthma Remedy brings the user to perfect rest. It relieves the passages and normal breathing is firmly established again. Hundreds of testimonials received annually prove its effectiveness.

PRUNING FLOWERING SHRUBS

(Experimental Farms Note)

Shrubs should be pruned to promote development of strong branches and good foliage. Old or dead wood should be removed annually from the centre of the bush, so that light and air may circulate freely.

If the new growth is too crowded this also should be thinned out.

It is not advisable to "trim" a shrub all round as this tends to make the growth more dense and the graceful habit of the shrub is lost. Of course, branches that have grown too long can be shortened but as a general rule growth should be cut out either from the ground or within a few inches of it.

Spring flowering shrubs form their buds early in summer for next season's bloom so that pruning must be done immediately after the bloom is over. If delayed until winter many of the flower buds will be destroyed and next year there will be little bloom.

Among the shrubs that should be treated in this way are lilac, mock orange, spiraeas and viburnums.

A fairly safe rule is to remove one-fifth of the oldest stems each year.

Lilacs the difference between the size of the flowers on old wood and that on younger branches, is so great that it is difficult to believe they come from the same bush.

Summer bloomers which bloom on shoots of the current season's growth should be pruned (or formed) while that strong new growth is formed in spring; hydrangea paniculata, hybrid tea roses and the various forms of Tamarisk come under this class. Hydrangea arborescens is cut down to the ground each year at the Central Experimental Farm and makes new growth of enormous size each season.

Many rose species, barberries and honeysuckles only need the dead wood removed. Old plants of rose rugosa should have the old wood cut out near the base so that new strong shoots will grow and renew the plant.

Royal Bachelor Girl Still Aloof From Dan Cupid

Princess Juliana of Holland—girl whom no princeling wants, or girl who wants no princeling?

That's the cross-word puzzle which has intrigued royal match-makers of Europe for the past six years. And a month ago, after a visit to London with her royal kinfolk and friends she left the gossipers more in the dark than ever. And the recent death of her father, Prince Consort Henry, Duke of Mecklenburg, has brought up the question anew.

Juliana is as much the bachelor girl of Europe as the Prince of Wales is the royal bachelor; neither has followed the rule of their respective houses and married early. The Princess' Queen-mother succeeded to the throne when she was 10 and married when she was 21. Juliana at 25 is full heart-whole and fancy-free.

Puzzle to Her People

The Dutch don't like it. They would prefer to see her wedded, settled down and raising a family, so that the throne would fall into the hands of those in the direct line of the House of Orange.

Also the Dutch don't understand it. Not only is she the heiress to the throne of a tidy little country with immensely rich colonies, but she is rich in her own right, is attractive in appearance, is brilliantly educated, charming in private conversation and full of fun. Any prince, they say, ought to be glad to marry her. Only—there is the doubt as to whether she wants to be married. In the past few years a whole procession of protestant German and Swedish eligibles has passed in review and not once did Juliana "bat an eye," indicating

"I'll have that one."

Guided by Family Experience

It may be that what occurred in her own family life has made her hesitant choosing a Prince Consort. When her mother, Queen Wilhelmina, married the late Prince Henry, a German, the Dutch were none too pleased. Germany was too powerful and too dangerous a neighbor. Poor Prince Henry had to efface himself. He had the name of near - royalty, without the game. He was the hyphen in the family. The husband of Princess Juliana would have to play a similar role. Juliana will be Queen some day, if she lives, but if she gets married her husband will be only Consort.

In the meantime, she is not pining away, not Princess Juliana. She went to a Dutch university, mingled with her fellow students, and had a lot of innocent fun. Incidentally, she perfected herself in languages, history and economics. After she graduated, she lived at home in her mother's palace. Then her grandmother, the late Queen Emma, put in a word for her and she was given a palace of her own in which to set up her own establishment. It is called a palace by courtesy. As a matter of fact, it is but a nice petit-chateau in one of the most attractive old-world squares in The Hague.

Takes Holidays Abroad

Every year now for some time past she has been going over to England, just for a real holiday. There is less restriction in London than in The Hague. The latter is a real little city, but it's a whispering gallery where every move is discussed. London is so big that a whisper doesn't carry far.

Here she can do what any London girl does—go to dances and parties and lead the kind of life a rich well-born young woman normally likes to live. Of that there can be no doubt, because last year after her regular London visit, she wrote to one of her friends:

"For twelve days I have lived in a continual whirl. Life has been gloriously free and riotously gay."

Again, like the Prince of Wales, she is making the most of it. Both of them know that when they mount a throne their lives will not be particularly free or gay. They will be lonely and fettered by the things that a ruler must and must not do.

When you consider the fierce white light that beats upon a throne, perhaps you cannot blame the Princess Juliana for gathering her rosebuds while she may.

HELPING VINICULTURE

Of not a little significance in the culture of the grape in North America is a vineyard, an acre in extent, planted at Macdonald College, P.Q., in 1909 and now nearly twenty-five years old. It originally consisted of thirteen varieties, and to these, from time to time, were added other varieties, mostly new ones. A new vineyard was started two seasons ago containing only four varieties of the original planting but has over a dozen of the newer kinds. The reasons for planning this vineyard, says Professor T. G. Bunting, were not that the old vineyard was too old, or had passed its usefulness, for the vines are still in excellent vigour and health, but to increase the varieties that have been found the most useful in their qualities of fruit, the shape, size, and colour of the berries and bunches, the vigour and habit of plant growth and their adaptability to our shorter season of growth; or, in other words, those varieties which, owing to their earliness, are more certain to ripen their fruit in our normal season.

A FAIRYLAND
OF FUN
Although primarily and basically an industrial, cultural and agricultural exhibition, "Canada Builds a Nation" is a rendezvous of entertainment for everybody.
The colossal pageant, with a cast of 1500 costumed actors depicting the evolution of our Dominion from the wilderness Cartier discovered to-day, is an arresting array of brilliant action and colour, a vivid story of the development of this great Dominion.
The merry mile-long midway of thrills, of strange sights and weird sounds, is a fun-fair for young and old, and as a grand finale, glittering domes, towers and flagstaffs of the Exhibition's magnificent display palaces pierce a multi-colored sky afire with brilliant illuminations and crashing, booming, sparkling pyrotechnics. The Beauties of The St. Lawrence and The West Indies

Down the Picturesque and Historic River Which Was Followed by Jacques Cartier, to Beautiful Caribbean Islands

It is not so very long ago when a long water cruise was considered a luxury and could be undertaken only by the well-to-do, but with the development of modern steamship travel at low rates, such a cruise is now-a-days looked upon as almost a necessity for those who wish to become travel-wise and reap the benefits of greater health and happiness resulting from decided changes of atmosphere and scenery. An additional factor of considerable value to such travel is the opportunity of forming friendships at sea and ports of call which often become life-long and open up new avenues of interest and stimulus.

A cruise to the West Indies, via the St.Lawrence route, offers such a change at comparatively little cost of time and money, carrying the vacationist into areas totally different from accustomed scenes and moving well-worth the time and expense involved. But even this expense is very moderate, for, as an appreciative passenger recently remarked, "you don't have to be rich to take a cruise to the Caribbean."

Thus, the vacationist wishing to enjoy as many fascinating and varied features as possible on a 28-day holiday cruise, where personal service and the beauties of nature are combined to the utmost, cannot do better than take the "St. Lawrence-Berwuda-Nassau-Jamaica" cool-breeze cruise, according to Victor E. Ekes, passenger traffic manager of the Canadian National Steamships. This cruise, passing through great historic areas of the north and south, combines all the wonders of rugged northern scenery and the more smooth tropical loveliness, rolled into one grand vacation. Such a cruise blends all the charm of yesterday with the comforts of today and will change your vacation problems into vacation happiness.

Start From Montreal

Sailing from Montreal every other Wednesday, the "Lady Somers" and "Lady Rodney" cruise liners, enter the mighty St.Lawrence River, born millions of years ago and famed from the earliest historical days of Jacques Cartier as a great artery of commerce and one of the scenic wonders of the world. Here is presented, during the two full days each way—going and returning—a background of romance redolent of the days when adventurous Frenchmen planted their first colonies.

As the tugs pull the liner away from the pier and the ship gets under way, we pass, as if in review, the vast water-front of Montreal, with its miles of docks and wharves, grain elevators and interesting panorama, marked by the beautiful twin towers of Notre Dame Cathedral and the rugged background of Mount Royal surmounted by its great cross. On the right we pass Longueuil on this continent Shore, once a fort, built in 1689 to protect the seigneury from the marauding Iroquois Indians. A few miles further on is Boucherville, a seigneury granted in 1672 to the Governor of Three Rivers. Varennes, in fair meadowland on the same side of the river, is next visible. Its parish church, with its two towers, is one of the most beautiful edifices in Quebec. Still on the south shore lies Vercheres, famous in history and bearing a statue of Madeline de Vercheres, the heroic girl of 14 years who successfully defended the manor house against an Iroquois attack. On the same side of the river, and at the entrance to Lake St. Peter, stand on the banks of the great Richelieu River, one of the chief tributaries of the St. Lawrence, whose history links Canada with the United States.

Quaint Villages on the Shores

Here the river widens out into one of the most beautiful parts of the St. Lawrence, known as Lake St. Peter, dotted with numerous picturesque islands. At the mouth of the St. Francis River is Port Crevier, a military fort erected in 1667 as a protection against the Indians from the south, now known as Notre Dame de Pierreville. Steaming through this broad lake, we see Nicolet, which possesses one of the oldest houses in the country and is an interesting cathedral town. On the opposite side is Yamachiche, set picturesquely in magnificent farm land. Pointe du Lac is nearby a pleasant settlement and favorite resort in summer. During the invasion of Canada in 1775 by the American forces, this village figured in an exciting skirmish.

Half-way to Quebec City, we come to Three Rivers, with its miles of docks and excellent harbor, founded in 1634, with a fort to protect it. Looking north we see Batiscan, founded in 1670 and still as calm and peaceful as it was over 250 years ago. Here begin the first red cliffs, with the blue hills behind. Opposite, a little further on is Cap la Roche, near where Jacques Cartier made his winter headquarters on his second trip to Canadian shores. Near here stone cliffs appear and in the distance Laurentian mountains. Along the shore are old manor houses which figured in the American invasion of 1775. Batiscan lies on the north shore at the mouth of the Batiscan River, which runs back into the rich unexploited hinterland of Quebec. Ste Anne de la Perade and Deschambault are visible further down on the same side ,while opposite is Pointe au Platon, built on picturesque little terraces.

The Marvellous Quebec Bridge

We notice a slight commotion among the ship's passengers, for we are approaching one of the world's greatest engineering achievements—the Quebec Bridge, which is an object of never-failing interest and wonder. This bridge has one of the longest clear-centre spans in the world and is 150 feet above extreme high water level. As the ship approaches the bridge an optical illusion is created and the passengers get a thrill for it seems impossible for the tall masts of the ship to pass under it.

Just beyond the bridge, on the shore, enters the Chaudiere River down which, during the Revolution American forces, under Benedict Arnold went to join Montgomery's army before assaulting Quebec. Close to the mouth of the river are the picturesque Chaudiere Falls.

On the opposite side, in the first hint of Quebec City. Here is Sillery an ancient village founded in 1637 quite close to the frowning rock of Quebec, and possessing the oldest manor house still standing in Canada.

Picturesque Quebec

In a short time the ship arrives off Quebec, one of the old and most picturesque cities in the New World. Dramatically it overshadows on its rocky heights, the swift historic river from which it presents an almost mediaeval appearance. Quebec City was founded in 1608 by Samuel de Champlain in 1629 was captured by the British and five years later was restored to France. In 1759 the battle of the Plains of Abraham finally gave Quebec and Canada to the British. In 1775 American revolutionary forces under Montgomery and Arnold attacked the city but were defeated by British troops and local militia. The famous Citadel at the top of the rock commands the St. Lawrence for many miles, while the ramparts, the high gabled roofs, lofty spires and narrow climbing streets, give Quebec the charm of an Old World fortress city.

From this point to a part of the river beyond Metis, if it be daylight, we see the fertile Isle of Orleans just before the ship passes along the south side of this island we glimpse Montmorency Falls, which are, over 100 feet higher than Niagara. On the north shore about 2 miles from Quebec City, is Ste Anne de Beaupre not visible from the ship because of the Isle of Orleans. Ste. Anne's is one of the most famous shrines in the world. Each year it is the scene of many miraculous cures and thousands of pilgrims journey there each summer.

Next we pass Cross Isle ,the site of the Dominion Government Quarantine Station. To starboard is Montmagny, and to the north above the bank of the river rises abruptly over 1,000 feet into the promontory known as Cape Tourmente, the first of a number of similar capes stretching endlessly away northward in good weather, Pointe-au-Pic can be discerned from the ship, better known as Murray Bay, the annual influx of tourists not having spoiled the simple beauty of this French-Canadian village.

Other Historic Villages

On the south shore are Kamouraska, Riviere du Loup and the pretty Metis, famous for its gardens, visited by Cartier in 1535 and by Champlain in 1602 and in 1628. The river is now 700 feet deep and the precipitous banks are 1,600 feet above the water, a scene of solemn grandeur unsurpassed on this continent. The majestic Capes Eternity and Trinity are names well-known all over America. Looking southward is Trois Pistoles, Bic and Rimouski, a very picturesque town dating from 1701. On the south shore the ship slows down at Father Point, to meet the Government boat and after dropping the pilot the ship makes off northeastward. Following the Gaspe Coast quite closely, we see several villages, the chief of which are Metis and Matane, famous salmon resorts. Practically the last point we see on the Gaspe Coast, is Fame Point.

Sailing the Atlantic

The ship now passes the south shore of Anticosti Island and the coast and islands of the Maritime Provinces into the Gulf of Canso, skirting the shore of historic Nova Scotia, while on the opposite bank is the tourist paradise of Cape Breton. We are now in the broad Atlantic and our next port of call is Hamilton, Bermuda, where nearly two days are spent.

Bermuda, the "Coral Island of the North Atlantic," is unique. One drives through the streets of Hamilton, the capital, behind a span of horses, driven by a negro coachman, which reminds one of the "Gay Nineties," and is so different from the hurly-burly of the motorized world in which we live. Just imagine a city today where there are no automobiles to dodge and where transportation is mainly by carriage or bicycle, although for that matter a person on foot might traverse Bermuda from end to end in a day. Houses and other buildings are made from the coral stone, of which Bermuda is composed, and roof with their white-topped roofs amidst the green cedars which abound throughout. The roads are endless and, cut through the coral rock, wind between cedar groves or hedges of red and white oleanders, while flowers, familiar to the northerner only in hot-house, grow in profusion everywhere. And then, on all sides, is the sea, so clear in the water that the wonderful marine vegetation may be seen plainly at a depth of thirty feet. And one of the things everyone should do in Bermuda is view the gardens in the depths of the ocean through the glass-bottomed boats, provided for the purpose.

Another town of importance is St. George, founded in 1612, situated on St. George's Island, which is connected with Hamilton Island by a stone causeway, and is about twelve miles from Hamilton. The natural attractions of Bermuda are endless. Apart from the beauty and remarkable variety of its vegetation, there are also the most marvellous caves, which, having been lighted and made easy to traverse, hold the visitor spellbound by their myriad crystal columns and snow-white stalactites.

The Blue Caribbean

Sailing from Bermuda, two and a half days are spent in blue Caribbean waters and then a call at Nassau, capital of the Bahama Islands, which lie to the east of Florida and the north of Cuba. This group of islands may be called "The Cradle of the New World," for it was from San Salvador or Watling Island there flashed in the darkness on the night of October 11, 1492, a light which was the first sign to Columbus that he had discovered a great New World, and which later became the ancient home of pirate and buccaneer. The land of hidden treasure has endeared the Bahamas to the heart of every adventurer as he sets foot on the sands trodden by Henry Morgan, Captain Kidd, John Teach (known as Blackbeard) and many others, who sailed under the folds of the "Jolly Roger."

Nassau, on the island of New Providence, is the capital and principal port. Should the visitor desire active outdoor life, the clear and beautiful waters surrounding the islands provide ideal yachting facilities, excellent fishing, and the "Bather's Mecca," famous paradise beach, has been declared to be unsurpassed the world over.

A further two days voyage in the Caribbean, brings the vacationist into the port of Kingston, Jamaica where two and a half days are spent before commencing the trip homewards. An ancient legend has it that Jamaica was built as the workshop of the gods, and here was made and set adrift, all those islands of the Caribbean, which are, each in itself, so beautiful.

Jamaica, the "Island Jewel of the Caribbean," possesses in itself almost everything that is an attractive feature of the tropical colonies of the Caribbean — the regal Blue Mountains that rise to a height of 7,000 feet above sea level, where all is cool peaceful and serene. There are also broad valleys, tumbling rivers and brooks, luxurious vegetation, majestic colors of land and water, and almost every degree of climate, from cool to the most temperate, until, as regards climate, one might imagine oneself in the most northern province in summer. History and romance meet us at the very entrance to Jamaica, for as we enter Kingston harbor, our ship literally passes over the submerged city of Port Royal reputed to be the wickedest city on earth, rendezvous of the buccaneers and emporium and mart of the illgotten wealth, which was destroyed by earthquake in 1694 and disappeared under the waters of the harbor.

Jamica's capital, Kingston, is, in many respects, a comparatively new city, with a colorful cosmopolitan street life that never fails to interest. Among the attractive spots nearest Kingston are the Gardens of Hope and Castleton, Newcastle, Bog Walk and Spanish Town.

Wonderful Scenes in Jamaica

A noteworthy trip is from Kingston to Newcastle, 19 miles away. This road winds up the mountainside to an elevation of over 4,000 feet, unfolding in its ascent, as one ascends, a vista of mountain, plain and sea that only can be described as magnificent. Spanish Town, the ancient capital of the Island, founded in 1520, was already a century old when the Pilgrim Fathers landed in America. Lying about 15 miles along the coast from Kingston, Spanish Town may be reached either by motor car or train. Mention should be made of Bowden, in the St. Thomas district, with Fern Gully nearby. Montego Bay, close to which is the famous bathing resort known as Doctor's Cave. Among the many other delightful spots in that romantic little spot called the Blue Hole. Then there is that beautiful and unique place known as Port Antonio, where fresh and salt water bathing may be enjoyed almost simultaneously.

Reading River and Golden Vale at Milk River are two other spots which the tourist should visit, for there are always the sugar estates with their great mills, banana plantations, groves of grapefruit, orange and cocoanuts, and the Blue Mountain coffee estates.

Within 100 miles from Kingston is also the "dude ranch" at Falmouth. Good Hope, a 4,000 acre cattle ranch which has every facility for catering to the tourist and vacationist. Settled and named in 1754, Good Hope plantation has all the charm of centuries ago, while catering to the most modern needs of the traveller bent on rest and and a life in the great out-doors. Plenty of scope is afforded here for hunting, fishing, bathing or just lying-around having an easy time of it. The visitor also has a choice of many short motor trips from Kingston to delightful places or may take part in a variety of one-day circular motor trips from the Capital, embracing most of the interesting spots and be back to port again with time to spare before embarking the ship homeward bound.

Calls are made at the same islands on the return voyage affording passengers the opportunity of renewing acquaintances made southbound, and seeing again the panorama of beauty which greeted their eyes outward bound. We see again the lovely Bahama Islands; Bermuda, the island of peace and beauty; and sail again for two days the historic St. Lawrence River to the port of Montreal, completing the round-trip cruise of lasting memories in exactly 25 days.

GOOD GROWING YEARS

Dr. Carroll E. Palmer of the United States Department of Public Health, claims to have made the discovery that just as there are good and bad years for the growth of plants and crops, so there are favourable and unfavourable years for the growth of children. He is unable to offer any reason for this curious phenomenon, but a great deal of research on the subject has convinced him of its truth.

His investigations were made upon the growth and development of 2,500 children between the ages of six and fifteen, and of various social classes, and the results were the same in all cases. He declares that the year ending May 15, 1925, was a particularly poor one for child growth, but that the year ending May, 1926, was an unfavourable year. The best year, however, of the seven years under review was that of 1926-27.

It now only remains for some other expert to discover whether children improve in behaviour during the years when they increase in size; in other words, do they grow in grace as they grow in stature, or is it the other way round ?—Miscellany.

Badly frightened he fell off the tree on his back and not waiting to recover his pail, which had gone in the opposite direction, he beat a hasty retreat. The bear, apparently also badly frightened lost no time in making a hurried departure.

YARKER

Yarker, July 30. — Starting with the first of August the United Church minister takes his vacation, and during the time he is away the church services will be supplied locally. Also during that time the church is to be redecorated.

On Monday night of last week a special meeting of the Ladies' Aid was held in the hall, at which it was finally decided to have the church redecorated. Another meeting is being held tonight, to give the matter further consideration.

The people of this village learned with something of a shock of the sudden illness of Rev. Mr. Spencer, and of his operation in the hospital at Kingston on Sunday morning. We hope for his speedy recovery.

It is with regret that we look upon the wrecking of the Benjamin house, which was one of the largest and finest dwellings in the village. The house was built about forty-two years ago by the late E. W. Benjamin for his son, Albert, after whose death Mrs. Benjamin and family moved from Yarker, and the house lay vacant for a number of years. It was bought a few years ago by Mr. Ironsides, but was not occupied for any length of time. The building has now been sold to a contractor in Kingston, who is wrecking it and taking the material to the city. It is regretable that such a fine building should be torn down. But it was too large for these days, when smaller houses are in demand.

The story is told of a boy who went down to the river to swim. He laid the cigarette he had been smoking down on his clothes as he went into the water. On coming out all that was left of them were a few charred fragments.

NORTHBROOK

Northbrook, July 30.—The summer has been so delightfully hazy here that no one realizes it is nearing another month.

Crowds attended the kitchen shower on Friday evening on S. Thompson's lawn for Evangelist Ruthven and his bride. Many useful presents were received. The bride looked charming in a long, sweeping, ruffled pink voile dress, with hat and slippers to match.

Both cars were totally wrecked and all occupants of both cars were severely injured. The cause of the accident is still a mystery, as the driver of both cars had a clear view of the road. The injured were all rushed to Dr. Belden's office at Stanley Lake, where their injuries were attended to.

Mrs. F. F. Miller Writes Another Very Interesting Letter From India

She Attends an Indian Party

Gulmarg, Kashmir,
June 23rd, 1934.

Dear Mrs. Templeton,—

With all the moving we've been doing lately your last letter seems to have gone astray; expect I'll find it after this letter is posted. I wrote you May 14th and remember thinking when your letter arrived the letters must have passed each other on the way. Though we were not on a houseboat this year, I spent several days with different friends at Nageen Bagh. As the road to Negeem is badly in need of repair, and a tonga not the most comfortable way to travel, I'd much rather have gone by shikara, a much pleasanter way to go, but taking much longer. Each time I went I seemed to be late in starting. It was lovely out there, but still too cold for bathing and too early for the lotus flowers to be in blossom. When in Srinagar I saw the second snake I've seen since I came to India. This one was brought into our compound by the gardener's looking man you ever saw, who announced his arrival by twirling a sort of drum long handle he reached the bungalow. He was dressed in a long, full yellow gown, from each of his shoulders hung what looked like an exaggerated laundry bag the same color and material as his coat-dress. His head was bare and his black hair very long, wore any amount of silver jewelry and strings of fancy beads around his neck. Squatting on the ground, he took the snake into a flat basket from one of the laundry bags. The snake was fully ten feet long, quite three inches around and was a bright yellow with black spots all over, the head very small, black with beady black eyes. When the snake seemed to me to be doped, as all it did was to move its head from side to side and make a dive for its basket. The man told my bearer that there was another snake in our compound, and if I'd give him some money he'd have the yellow snake find and kill it. I didn't like the idea with his idea at all, as I'd heard the story before. What he does is to start the snake hunting, follow it up himself, and, after awhile, comes back with a dead snake, claiming the live snake has killed it, when all the time he has had the dead one concealed in his basket. I watched him and the snake from my upper balcony, and was thankful to be no nearer.

At an Indian Party

Early in June we were at a very lovely garden party in the Residency grounds. The Resident and Mrs. Lang received under a large sinanara (canopy). Walking further into the grounds we came to where over a hundred tea tables were set under the shade of four immense chanar trees, each table seating four to six people. There were five in our party and our table was near to the one reserved for the Maharaja of Kashmir (commonly known as H. H.) and his guests. H. H.'s State has decided in the distance, far away from where tea was served, not to interfere with the general festivities. At five o'clock the band played the Kashmiri National Anthem, we all stood, and H. H. arrived in his Rolls Royce, accompanied by his guests in other cars. Among them were the Prince and Princess of Hyderabad, the former the heir of the Nizam of Hyderabad, who is the richest man in India, if not in the world. The Princess is the daughter of the Sultan of Turkey, is tall, very graceful, and a very handsome young woman. She, of course, beautifully dressed in native costume, with wonderful jewelry. There were many number of members of Royalty there, the Maharaja of Jaipur being one. The women all wore gorgeous and beautiful jewelry. The most striking sari was, I think, one of white georgette with insets of black georgette all around the edge, each inset heavily edged with silver. These women all wore the sari over their heads, as, of course, none wore the purdah veil. Half an hour after H. H. arrived the band again played the National Anthem, this time for H. H.'s own song, who arrived with his English governess and Indian A. D. C. The Prince is almost three years old, a very manly little lad, very fair with black hair and eyes. He was dressed in native costume, an adak length coat of cloth of gold with a jeweled turban. There were several young Princes there with their English governors, home from England for the summer. H. H. and all the native Princes wore European clothes. H. H. is short, very dark, and inclined to be stout. The young Prince's mother was not there, as she still in Purdah, because of the return last year of the older Maharani. The Residency grounds are wonderful and very large, the lawns beautifully green in bloom and were a great addition to the colored flowers and to other lovely trees. At one time during the band played our National Anthem (it being King George's birthday) and we all did so, having had a very pleasant afternoon.

I missed the garden party given by the Princess and Prince of Hyderabad, in the grounds of the new Indian Club. This club house and grounds are far ahead of the European Club in Srinagar. I had arranged to come up here and couldn't very well alter my plans. It was held in the grounds of the new Indian Club, a very fine building in very spacious grounds.

I also missed going to see a tribe of Mongolians, who were holding a serais (auction) at 7th bridge. I heard they had lots of odd things to sell and get good prices for them. I hope others will be there when we go back in the Fall.

There have been several merchants from Thibet here, but none of them had anything very startling to sell.

The strawberry season is over and the cherries will soon be gone; both were extra fine. Apricots are ripe and pears will soon be. Melons are also in, but the nutmegs here taste very like watermelon.

Car Hits a Kyte

One day, when motoring with friends in Srina Gar, a huge bird alighted on the front of our car. At first I thought some small boy had thrown a stone at us. The big bridle its wing and was tangled between the light and the engine. The natives were asked to kill it, but refused, as they are forbidden to do so, as it is a scavenger bird and most useful in this country. It is called a Kyte. There were so many beautiful birds in Srinagar, but I never saw the brain-fever bird, or another bird that calls "I've got fever, decca, decco". I often saw a pair of Paradise flycatchers. The male bird is all white except for the head, which is dark. The female is a very bright orange, also has a dark head. Both have long, graceful, curved tails. There's another orange bird, very like the Paradise one, but a fatter bird, with practically no tail. The golden oriole is much larger than our oriole at home, is a very deep yellow with a blue breast. The whoopoe is very like our woodpecker in shape, but is a light brown bird with darker brown stripes horizontally across the back and diagonally across the wings, has a dark crest on its head, which, when it is startled, opens out like a fan. There were no king fishers at Srinagar, but I saw any number of them at Negeem Bagh. It is most interesting to watch them. They'll sit on a wire for ages, suddenly make a dive into the water and bring up either a small fish or part of one. In Srinagar there are also tiny brown birds, like ours, only about the size of a large humming bird. In Gulmarg we seem to have very few birds, but crows are numerous and very tame. They are a pest, as they'll perch on the railing of the verandah, and, if one isn't looking, will steal the bread or cake from one's plate.

Growing Rice

It is most interesting driving through the rice fields and seeing the rice at various stages. First the sections were made ready, each with a low earth mound around it, and then filled with water. When the rice is ready to be planted it is pulled up by the roots in small bunches of about a dozen plants, and these bunches are stuck in the mud very thickly in certain parts, the water sections filled with water, and the young shoots were transplanted, the natives going into the water up to their knees. Now the rice is about a foot tall. In different shades of green the fields look very pretty. A native came to the tent today with baskets of lovely apricots, plums and new walnuts. The latter are a specialty of Kashmir, said to be the best anywhere. They sell for four annas a hundred, and everyone gets a large supply to take to the plains for the next winter's use. I bought some for immediate use, also have a thousand and later will get more to take down with us. I didn't buy any plums, as they didn't look too ripe. Mother and I are both very fond of apricots, so I bought some, five annas a pound.

Going along the road the other day I saw a man with a shaved head except for a small tuft of hair on the crown, sticking straight out. Another man had bunches of green vegetables hanging down from each side his puggris, a very sensible idea, as they hung at the back of his head and neck from the raging sun. In Srinagar, I, with a friend, went to one of the merchant's work shops. His name is Subana and he advertises himself as the "world's worst woodcarver, etc." The first floor was given over to wood carving, from dining room or bedroom furniture to small trays and boxes, all made of beautifully grained Kashmir walnut, either plain or carved, as one prefers. Carpets, heavy and light, embroidery work, etc., was shown on the top floor. We spent about two and a half hours in inspecting and admiring everything, made a few purchases and then were treated to Persian tea and small chappies, a native biscuit very like our water biscuit. Once more we went through the terrible alleys, got into the tonga and reached our bungalow just in time for tiffin.

Life at Gulmarg

Since we came to Gulmarg the weather has varied between pop, little rain, and never too warm for comfort. Of course golf and treking are the two principal things to do as I do neither I spend most of my time on the verandah, knitting, reading, or writing. We are only within easy walking distance of the club. I go down occasionally, either

Memorial Service

On the afternoon of July 26th an interesting event took place at Picton, when an impressive memorial service was held in honor of the late Mrs. Letitia Youmans, the first President of the Dominion W. C. T. U. Mrs. Dwight and Mrs. Nicol, of Montreal, who had been friends of Mrs. Youmans' Band of Hope, at Picton, recalled anecdotes of her whole-hearted efforts in training the young life of our town in Sunday School and in dramatics. They paid tribute to her remarkable personality, the warmth of her heart, the breadth of her views and her far-reaching influence, as, later in her life, she addressed large audiences, becoming widely known both in the United States and in Canada.

To Miss Duff, Field Secretary of the Y's, was presided over the programme, we are indebted for the arrangements for the service. Over twenty "Y" girls from various parts of Ontario, who were at camp at Consecon, with Miss Duff, with members of Picton W. C. T. U., and a representation of young women from Napanee "Y", formed a group of about forty on the hillside near the family plot and grave of Mrs. Youmans. Besides the addresses of Mrs. Nicol and Mrs. Dwight, a fitting memorial poem was read by Miss Duff, a hymn was sung, and prayer was offered by Miss Conger, of Picton.

Members of the Consecon Camp from Napanee were Miss B. Baughan, Miss Jean Clark and Miss Mary Ross. Miss D. Randall, Miss Rockwell, Miss Parks, Miss E. Aylsworth and Miss M. Milling motored over for the day to be present at the memorial service. Members of the Picton W. C. T. U. served afternoon tea, later, on the church lawn in Picton.

Expected to See Indians in Feathers and With Tepees

A party of United States' tourists arrived at the Kingston Chamber of Commerce the other day and inquired for the Indian Reservation. Being told that the nearest one was at Deseronto they expressed great disappointment that they had driven right through it without realizing it. "You'd wonder how we missed it," said each of the party. "We were looking for the Indians in their feathers, and the tepees in which they live, but did not notice a one."

An Omission

Many Napanee Veterans Journey to Celebration Attend Soldiers' Reunion

Most Thrilling Spectacle In Toronto's History

The men who planned the Canadian Corps Reunion were themselves staggered by the crowd that responded to the invitation to be guests for three days of the City of Toronto. From all over Canada, and from parts of the United States, they came, until it is estimated that eighty thousand returned men were present.

For three glorious days these men, who had survived the shock of war, relived the friendliness and good spirit which marked their years at the Front. All branches of the service were represented. They formed up outside the Prince's Gate and marched through into the Exhibition Grounds by battalions. They went in the order in which they were arranged overseas. First Battalion first, then second, third, fourth, fifth, with Army Service Corps, Artillery and Infantry, and all the rest. For over an hour they marched past the grand stand, where General Allenby, the Lieutenant-Governor, Canon Scott, and the City Fathers took the salute. There was no questioning the loyalty of these men. Once more they took the same oath they had taken when they united with the Dress.

Saturday evening was given over to fun and jollity. The city was kind and genial. The troopers took the city by storm. But the citizens filled it and entered into the fun.

On Sunday, a drum head service was held in Riverdale Park. Eighty thousand men marched into the natural amphitheatre, while it is estimated another eighty thousand spectators joined in Divine service. Toronto has never seen a spectacle of the kind and it is not likely ever to witness another.

Long before two o'clock the crowd began to gather. Before long the whole hillside of the great bowl was covered with a quiet, worshipful mass of people. Then the returned men marched in, their vari-colored berets being the only distinguishing mark they wore. Twenty-five massed bands provided the music. Among the guests were General Allenby, Admiral Tyrwhitt, Archdeacon Scott, General Hughes, Mayor Stewart, and others. When the returned men had all assembled they are told to sit and rest until the service began. They take advantage of the opportunity.

The service opened with singing "Onward Christian Soldiers." The massed bands were led by John Slater, who gave an almost impossible task of keeping the great outpouring of human voice in time. The remainder of the service was brief, but unforgettably impressive; a prayer of general confession, prayer for King and Country, prayer for the peace of the world by Padre McCausland, scripture lesson by Padre Beatty, etc. Then "O God Our Help in Ages Past," and Canon Scott's address. The address was a fervent plea for peace and the settlement of international disputes by negotiation. The speaker, Canon Iaborer under a great emotional stress, but his message was a never to be forgotten appeal to the highest and best instincts in the race.

The Last Post was sounded by six bugle buglers. Two minutes of silence was observed and then the Reveille. The service ends with the singing of "O Valiant Hearts."

The rest of the day, and Monday morning, were spent in precious moments of reunion, most of the men returning home Monday afternoon.

Struck By Car, Local Man Is Badly Hurt

Yesterday afternoon a serious accident occurred on the Belleville Road. Mr. Clem Taylor, who lives on the Boundary Road, was walking on the Belleville Road when he was struck by a car driven by Thomas H. Urena.

Dr. Galbraith and Dr. Hall rushed to the scene and had Mr. Taylor taken to the Kingston General Hospital.

Upon examination, the x-ray disclosed a slight fracture of the skull and a broken shoulder blade.

W. V. Webster Suffers Injury Jumping From Car

On Friday morning, a serious accident occurred on Dundas Street, opposite the home of Mr. Rawlinson Ross. W. V. Webster, the proprietor of the Redland White Store, had been with Mr. J. Naphin, delivering merchandise to some of the campers. Mr. Nephin was at the wheel and as Mr. Webster went to alight at the curb, he struck his left leg, causing a compound fracture of the shin.

Mr. Webster was taken to Kingston to have the bones set, and is now resting at his home.

Lord Willingdon Pays Remarkable Tribute To His Wife

Freedom of City of Edinburgh Given to Former Governor-General of Canada

Lord Willingdon, Viceroy of India, and former Governor-General of Canada, paid a remarkable tribute to Lady Willingdon when together they received the freedom of Edinburgh. Rarely in Scotland is the freedom of a city conferred on both husband and wife.

Lord Willingdon expressed his gratification at "so signal a reward". It was, he said, doubly gratifying to him the same honor was being conferred upon his wife "for merits in which I can claim no part and of which I am, therefore, free to testify that in her case your judgment has been justified.

"For not only has the passage of the years increasingly brought home to me how little useful work I could have done without her by my side to help advise, and encourage, to share with me all the joys and sorrows, all the successes and disappointments, of a long and varied public life, but also no one knows better than I the full tale of her labors to mitigate distress and suffering and to bring happiness and comfort into the life of the people of each country to which our duties have called us."

Lady Willingdon was formerly Lady Marie Adelaide, daughter of the first Earl Brassey. She is 59, and has been the recipient of many honors, including the coveted Kaisar-i-Hind gold medal.

Death at Brooklin of Mother of Mrs. Hogarth

Mrs. E. C. Hogarth, of Napanee, was bereaved last week, when her mother, Mrs. G. K. Hunter, died at Brooklin, Ontario.

Mrs. Hunter had been in ill health for the past year, but recently her condition had seemed some improved. Her death followed a turn for the worse, which came on Sunday. Mrs. Hogarth was with her mother when the end came, and Mr. Hogarth left on Wednesday to attend the funeral, which was held at the United Church, Brooklin, on Thursday.

Mrs. Hunter is survived by her husband, three daughters and one son.

Hepburn to Abolish Temporary Services

Declares Classification System Conceals Number of Employes

The practice of classifying many civil servants as temporary employes will be abolished by the Liberal Government, Premier Hepburn announced Thursday.

"It is ridiculous to have to pass Orders-in-Council renewing the services of so-called temporary civil servants," declared the Premier when seen in his office. "Here is an example of what I mean. We had to pass an Order-in-Council renewing the service of an office boy in one of the departments. This temporary classification is a good way of concealing the true number of government employes in the Province. I am going to discontinue it."

Gibbard A's Win From Picton on Wednesday

Home Runs By Dunn and Dorey are Features

At the game on Wednesday between Gibbard Athletics and the Picton team, the last of the series in the Bay of Quinte League, before the play-downs, a large number of fans turned out, expecting to see a close, well fought contest. Almost from the very first innings it was evident they were doomed to disappointment. Picton, in the other games with Napanee, had given the Athletics a run for their money; such was not the case in this final game.

Either Picton was not up to his usual form or was not trying to hit. Whatever the reason, he did not put over his usual good work in the box. The resulting score was 12-2 in favor of the Athletics, adding another win to their almost perfect string.

Blanetich pitched for Napanee and put over a most creditable performance. He allowed only eight hits, struck out eight men and gave no walks. Church allowed 15 hits, struck out four, and walked two men.

Gibbard A's Win Two Out of Three Exhibition Games Over Week End

Defeat Belleville Twice—Lose to Peterboro

To defeat the Belleville Nationals Senior O. A. A. baseball team twice in the same day is a record to be proud of, and that is what the local Gibbard A's Intermediate O. B. A. A. team did on Monday. The afternoon game was won by the shut-out route, 11-0, and evening game by a score of 5-1.

"Peeney" Mills used four pitchers in the two games in an endeavor to stem the tide, but it was of no avail. In the afternoon stanza he used Utronki and Smith, and in the evening game he brought out Weir and Jack "Chief" Williams, but they all looked alike to the local heavy artillery.

On Saturday Gibbard A's suffered defeat by the Peterboro Seniors. The local team had apparently gone stale from their long wait on the field, the visitors not putting in an appearance for an hour and a half after the game was scheduled to begin.

A brief summary of the games follow.

Gibbard A's 11, Belleville Nationals, 0

In the first game of the doubleheader on Monday Gibbard A's defeated Belleville Nationals by a score of 11-0 before a good crowd. Blanetich was on the mound for the locals and turned in perhaps the best game he has pitched since he came to Napanee. He allowed but four hits against this senior league aggregation, and that is going some. The only innings in which he was in real trouble was the second. The first man up, Weir, struck out. Scarlett was given a base on balls, and Smith reached first on a fielder's choice. This left two on bases with one man out. Blanetich proceeded to strike out the next two—Darrah and Ford—and a delicate situation was overcome. He was given good support by the team, as a whole. Brennan, especially, holding him up in good style.

The Nationals had a bad afternoon. Gibbards garnering 14 safe hits off their pitchers, Utronki and Smith.

Gibbard A's 5, Belleville Nationals 1

The twilight game was witnessed by another good crowd of spectators, who went away well satisfied that they had witnessed a fine game of ball.

In this encounter "Peeny" Mills started Weir on the mound. At the end of the sixth innings, when Mills saw that his team was not getting anywhere, he called out Jack "Chief" Williams, his ace hurler, but he fared no better than the rest of his sharp shooters.

Pointer was selected by Manager Gerow to serve up the curves for Gibbards, and he certainly made a nice job of it. He only allowed five hits, one more than did Blazetich in the afternoon, and struck out nine Nationals.

In sixteen innings the local twirlers allowed the Belleville boys but nine scattered hits and one run, a record surely to make the senior teams look envious.

AN EXPERIMENT IN EDUCATION

Queen's University, which has been a pioneer in so many branches of education, is experimenting, this year, in a new direction. By mutual agreement, Albert College, Belleville, is to be given the privilege of providing tuition in the first two years of Arts work at Queen's. This seems to be an excellent arrangement, both from the point of view of Albert College and Queen's University.

Since the depression, the path of the private colleges has not been an easy one. Boys and girls who, under ordinary circumstances, might have taken advantage of the special privileges provided by a private school, have gone to the publicly supported institutions. Albert College, situated in Belleville, has felt the financial strain which has come from this loss of patronage. It will work out well for Albert if the student body is implemented to an appreciable degree by the new agreement with Queen's.

It will be a good thing for Queen's, too. It is well-known that the first two years at a university have large classes. The students are not always sure as to the course they shall finally pursue and consequently take the first two years in some general classes which are applicable to a number of courses. This, overcrowds the first two years and prevents to some extent, that intimate and intensive work for which the university is designed. If, therefore, a number of students can take their two transitional years at Albert, it will relieve the situation considerably at the University. According to the announcement, the same examinations will be written at both institutions, and at the same time.

It looks, too, as though this is a good arrangement for a certain class of student. There are many students too immature for university work, but who are mentally qualified. To go to an institution where two years university work is given under close and careful supervision, will assist them through a period of exceptionally trying difficulties. For those who live in the vicinity of Albert and are able to live home and take the second year Arts work there, it will mean a worth-while financial saving, which is quite a consideration with many who are seeking a higher education.

Altogether, it looks like a good arrangement and we wish it every success.

WHY PUBLIC WORKS

The Toronto Branch of the War Veterans Association, last week, passed a resolution favoring the discontinuance of direct relief and the substitution, therefor, of a system of public works, which would give employment to a large number of those who are now receiving relief.

Why it is that bodies who pass resolutions of that sort, always urge a system of public works, is hard to understand. It is perfectly true that direct relief pauperizes a man, robs him of his self-respect, and lowers him in his own estimation. It is a thousand times more sensible that he be given remunerative employment. But why should that employment be roads, docks or bridges ? Surely there is other and more productive uses to which human labor can be put in times of stress, such as those through which we are passing.

One of the most crying needs of our modern civilization is for decent houses in which the average citizen may bring up his family. At the present time, the salary of the average working man has depreciated so that it takes about 25% of the weekly wage to pay house rent. The consequence is a drift towards cheaper houses. In any scheme of employment for the unemployed, the housing of our people should have first consideration. Beautiful public buildings, roads built at great expense in out-of-the-way places, can very well wait, until this more pressing need is adequately met.

GENIUS AND PERIL

It is strange and mournful truth, that the qualities which enable men to shine are exactly those which minister to the worst ruin. God's highest gifts—talent, beauty, feeling, imagination, power; they carry with them the possibility of the highest heaven and the lowest hell. The shallow fishing-boat glides safely over the reefs where the noble barque stands; it is the very might and majesty of her career that bury the sharp rock deeper in her bosom.—F. W. Robertson.

WRITING OUR LIVES

We are not writing in the sand. The tide does not wash it out. We are not painting our pictures on the canvas, and with a brush, so that we can erase the error of yesterday, or overlay it with another color today. We are writing our lives with a chisel on the marble, and every time we strike a blow we leave a mark that is indelible. — World Wide.

ANOTHER ECONOMY SUGGESTION

Premier Hepburn has astonished everyone by the sweeping changes he has made in the direction of economy. He plans, so he says, still further reductions in cost of administration ,which are designed to lower the burden on the taxpayer. In a speech given at Owen Sound, on Saturday, he said that he is planning a conversion program which will materially reduce the present rate of interest on provincial bonds. In addition, he promises to call a meeting of representatives of the municipalities with the Ontario Municipal Board, to see if some agreement can be reached towards lowering the interest on municipal bonds. Such a policy, if successful, will work a serious hardship on widows and small holders of bonds, who are living on the income from investments. But the effect of lowered taxation will meet with general approval.

There is another area which we would commend to Premier Hepburn and his Cabinet for consideration, when they are seeking further fields for economy. For a long time, students of the situation in Canada, have been observing that we were over-governed. Their remarks have, largely, been confined to the situation as it is reflected in the Provincial field. It is probably true that Canada could be just as capably governed with about one-half the number of provincial governments as there are at the present time.

What is true of the provincial situation is even more true of the situation in our counties and municipalities. The present set up was designed for horse and buggy days. The advent of the automobile, and the system of good roads, have changed all that, and yet there has been no change in our system of local government to meet the modern situation. We are carrying on in the twentieth century with an organization designed for conditions which existed in the nineteenth. There was a time when it took nearly a week to get from one end of this county to the other. Now, it takes at most, only a few hours.

With the present ease of transportation and communication, there is no reason why we couldn't get along with about half the number of county councils we now have. In both the Dominion and Provincial field, we have had to unite counties for election purposes, and while Prince Edward-Lennox is perhaps the most inconveniently arranged riding in Ontario, yet it is not unworkable. The same would be found true if two or even three counties were united under one administration, rather than the separate ones which now carry on.

If this were done, the scope and powers of the township councils would have to be enlarged. Nothing would be lost by that. At the present time, the township councils have only restricted duties and responsibilities.. Their duties could very easily be enlarged, and such enlarged responsibilities would add somewhat to the usefulness and to the dignity of our township councils.

This is a suggestion we hope will find its way to the Premier's ears. It strikes us as worthy of serious consideration.

A PEACE DEMONSTRATION

It is the general consensus of opinion that the reunion of the Canadian Corps, recently held in Toronto, was the greatest gathering of its kind ever held in the British Empire. That it was possible to get together seventy thousand veterans, eighteen years after the close of the Great War, was a tribute to the ability of those in charge, and a distinct demonstration of the loyalty and devotion of those who were overseas during the great struggle.

Parading, distinctions of rank, flashing uniforms, were all lacking. That was as it should be. It must never be forgotten that the men who went to France from Canada, were not professional soldiers — they were ordinary citizens, men from the offices, the farms, the factories and the stores — and as civilians, they met in reunion, eighteen years after.

Those eighteen years had been kindly to some who had made their place in a new world; others had never been re-established. They found it impossible to fit into the world they served to save. Many of those who came to the reunion came on the rails; others hitch-hiked. They lacked even the price of transportation. But all that was forgotten in Toronto. During three glorious days they were pals again — sharing with each other in a spirit of real fraternity.

The reunion was a real demonstration of the will to peace on the part of those who had seen the horrors and the hardships of war. In all the speeches that were given, the note range unmistakably. "It shall not be again." And what was said from the platform was reiterated a thousand times by the men who had been "over there."

It is a significant fact that the veterans, in all their official statements, are loud in their protest against war as a method of settling international disputes. If the matter was left in the hands of these men, who know more about it than anyone else, there would be no more war. The great gathering in Toronto was, more than anything else, a protest against the futility of attempting to settle disputes by force of arms.

BIOGRAPHY

Here we are down in the depths. Why? Partly, I think because for years we have tried to live half stars and half earth. For years the man who was described about equally to industry and politics, we have treated an exclusive tariff barrier around this country behind which the industrial half of our people is free to make a profit out of its activities, while at the same the unprotected other half is held in bondage not only to the first half but also to the competition of the rest of the world as well.—Owen D. Young.

Laying the Foundation For Next Year's Honey Crop

A strong force of bees ready for field work at the commencement of the main flow of nectar is the beekeeper's objective and is the result of careful preparations made during the eleven months previous to the flow. The beekeeper's year begins with the first of August, for it is then that he must begin his building up process for the crop of the following summer. The bees of any one year will take no part in the actual gathering of the crop of the following year, but they play an important, if indirect, part in its success or failure. To get the connection between August and the flow coming eleven months later, it is easier to trace events backward rather than forward. A powerful force of bees ready for the harvest is the result of strong colonies, good queens, sufficient food and proper management during the spring and early summer months, and the first three factors of this combination are in turn dependent upon those same conditions being present the previous autumn. The queen is the mother of every other bee in the colony and is, therefore, responsible for the strength of the colony, but to produce a strong colony she must be young and prolific and she will need assistance from the beekeeper in order to perform her task efficiently. At the Bee Division, Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa, it has been found that two queens are required to build up a force of young bees capable of withstanding the rigours of winter in a climate such as ours. As queen rearing usually ceases by the end of September or early in October, it means that the production of this force of bees must commence about the first of August. The foundation for next year's honey crop is, therefore, laid by making sure that every colony is headed by a young and vigorous queen early in August so that she has sufficient time to produce a large force of bees before the end of the brood rearing season. To perform the duties expected of her the queen must have ample room for maximum egg production and there must always be a generous supply of food available for the brood she produces. Other things being satisfactory, strong colonies headed with young vigorous queens in the fall are the best assurance of strong colonies the following spring and a strong force of field bees in time for the harvest.

Canadian Horses For Abroad

The intensive efforts of the Dominion Department of Agriculture in the past in creating breeding stations for horses, particularly of the saddle type, are now being duly appreciated by other nations, and it would appear that at last a great horse industry may arise from the ashes of visions so well and truly laid by the Dominon Bureau of Statistics. The experimental Farms, and other associated divisions of the Department, succeeded in making several large shipments of horses abroad. Seventeen Canadian-bred saddle horses have just arrived at Bridgetown, Barbadoes, British West Indies, for the Barbadoes army. This shipment constitutes the second purchase of Canadian saddle horses by the Barbadoes Government for its police force within a year. Several months ago 15 horses were shipped and gave such satisfaction that shortly after an additional order referred to was the result. Eight additional horses for Barbadoes was purchased from the breeding stations at Ailsa Craig and Brampton, Ontario. The horses are bays, browns, and chestnuts, standing from 15 hands 2½ inches to 16 hands 2½ inches, and are all thoroughbred stallions.

Several inquiries have been received during the past few months from other countries for various types of horses suited for Canada. A few weeks ago 19 draft horses were sent to Scotland, where they have given such satisfaction that particular notice having been taken of their excellent all-round appearance. Nine of these horses, all grade Percherons, were from Western Canada, having an average weight of 1,700 lbs. Ten of the horses, three of them Clydesdales, hailed from Western Ontario, the heaviest horse being 1,920 lbs. About the same time a trial shipment of 15 Thoroughbreds was shipped to Chester, England, and recent satisfactory reports have been received.

An Important Appointment

The increasing demands upon the work and facilities and division of the Dominion Department of Agriculture for that kind of information that only scientific research can supply have become so insistent that it became evident for administrative and economic reasons that a Director of Research should be appointed. Consequently, Dr. A. Maxwell Ewing, who since 1923, has been Associate Dominion Entomologist and Chief of the Division of Forest Insect Investigations, Dominion Entomological Branch, Dominion Department of Agriculture, has been appointed to the responsible position. The appointment calls for the coordination of research work within the Department of Agriculture with that of other organizations and institutions, and the work which the Department itself is very varied and extensive and has been the results of which have made it famous in nature and placing it in the forefront of the agricultural stations of the world. To crystalize this enviable position, Dr. Swaine will give special attention to research work as a whole within the Department and to relations between the workers. So that, while the high level of utility may be retained, certain economies will be effected at the same time. Dr. Swaine is one of Canada's scientists of highest standing.

On July 14, 1934, 15 geldings, 23 mares, 18 steers, 11 heifers, 6 cows, 6 bulls, 3 stallions, and 1 herder horse, all strays, were in the various official pounds of Alberta.

ON THE LAND AND ON THE DOLE

It is calculated that in Montreal a large family in poverty receives about $800 a year, while the city pays $300. The Gordon colonization plan asks a contribution of $500 from the city, province and family and that is the end of it. "After three years, the family can look after itself. This economy is not surprising, since the colonist family has neither rent nor relief to pay for, and can, little if little, get its subsistence from the soil. Even if the initial cost of colonization is more than $500 for an direct relief, it would be thoroughly worth while because of the saving because of the final economy involved. A colonist can indeed secure an independent living for himself and his family , whereas a man on direct relief remains always a burden. There has been much talk of public works on a grand scale in order to get the people away from the cities, and to assure work to as many of the unemployed as possible. But where this is concerned Country Life Association, Limited and refractory as they are toward the adoption of a real colonization policy.—Le Droit, Ottawa

The demand for honey in all the principal markets of the world arises from three main sources: (1) from domestic consumers; (2) from various manufacturing trades, confectioners, bakers, chemists, etc.; and (3) from the catering trade.

INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON, AUGUST 12TH, 1934

AMOS: CHAPTERS 5 - 7

"AMOS PLEADS FOR JUSTICE"

In the book of Amos we have preserved for us the first written sermon or group of sermons. They were delivered by a man who, under the ordinary terminology of the day could not be called either a preacher or a prophet. He was a shepherd whose duty was to care for sheep and tend sycamore trees on the hills of Tekoa. And yet this uniutored and unlettered herdsman, is used of God as the vehicle of a mighty revelation.

Often, as he had sat on the hills watching his sheep, he had meditated on the way in which the people related their lives to their religion. It was a prosperous time. The reign of Jereboam II was one of the most brilliant in Israel's history. Wealth and oppulence protruded itself everywhere. It showed itself in the ordinary conduct of life. Women were extravagantly dressed. Summer houses were adorned with ivory, were accompied by the fashionable, in the warm months, while the rest of the year was the extreme idleness in the centres of population.

This same condition reflected itself in the religion of the day. Day after day, Amos had watched the worshippers on their way to the temple at Bethel. They were in gay holiday mood. They were on their way to celebrate God's goodness to them in that they were enjoying great prosperity.

But, as always happens, along with this wealth on the part of one-half the population, there went a crushing poverty on the part of the rest. The wealthy were extremely wealthy and the poor were in desperate plight. Indeed the wealth had been secured at the expense of the poor who were shown no mercy by their more powerful fellowmen.

In view of all this, Amos believed their religious observances to be a mockery. Surely, God would prefer justice to the show of wealth and the splendid ritual of the temple worship. With a flash of religious inhibition, which we can almost hear in no way except as a direct revelation, he saw that God was a just God. In the ordered universe we can almost hear pleased with justice between man and man than with "cities of hundreds of rivers of oil" poured out in sacrifice.

Seized with a passion to make his revelation known, he left his work at Tekoa, and presented himself at the temple of worship at Samaria. There, in melodramatic manner, he begins to intone a dirge, proclaiming that "the virgin of Israel had fallen." Having gained an audience he makes known God's protest against the injustices practiced by those who were engaged in the brilliant and facinating worship. This was too much for the people who pretended to the high priest, and Amos was hurriedly gotten out of the community by the police. He went to the hillside and either wrote this or had it written. This posterity is able to evaluate the effectiveness of one lone man in his advocacy of justice and righteousness. In the conduct of business, in the affairs of state and in the relations between man and man.

The worship of God may be beautiful and dignified. It may be accompanied by the loveliest music, conducted with artistry and ornate ritual, but, as Amos pointed out long ago, unless in the conduct of ordinary life, justice and righteousness p evail, the worship is a sham and a fraud.

"I hate, I despise your fea s, and I will not smell ;y ur solemn assemblies. Let justice flow form as water, and righteousnr s as a perrennial freshet."

Excellent Cold Salads From Left-Over Wax Beans

Wax or green beans are excellent in salads, and this is a good way to use up leftovers. With potato salad especially, beans are good, both for flavor and color. Following are several suggestions:

Potato Salad with Fresh Beans

4 medium-sized potatoes
1 cup cooked beans, cut diagonally in small pieces
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon grated onion—or more
2 cups cooked salad dressing (or French dressing if it is preferred)

Cook the potatoes in their jackets in boiling salted water. As soon as tender, but not soft, drain, remove the skins. After they are cold, cut the potatoes in small uniform cubes and pour the salad dressing over them while it is hot. The potato absorbs the dressing and has a better flavor. When cold, add the beans and onions. Mix together lightly so as not to break the potato and make a mush. Chill thoroughly and serve on crisp lettuce leaves.

French Pea Salad

2 tablespoons bacon fat
1½ cups lima bean liquor
2 tablespoons chopped chives
½ teaspoon pepper
½ cup cooked
2½ cups green beans, cooked and
2 tablespoons vinegar
Cook cooked beans in boiling salted water till quite tender. Drain and keep bean liquid to cook the lima beans in. Mix the beans with remainder of the ingredients, including bean liquid and fat. Add vinegar, sugar, if liked. Serve with cold ham or tongue. Enough for four persons.

String Fears with Sour Dressing

4 cups string beans
1 tablespoon vinegar
½ teaspoon pepper
½ teaspoon paprika

String the beans cut them in halves, removing and all their ends. Cook until tender, but not too soft. Rinse with cold water, drain slightly and chill. Shake the vinegar, salt and pepper in a tightly covered dish and pour over the beans. Then dress with the cream beaten with the vinegar in which the seasonings have been added. This may be served either hot or cold.

Simple Bean Salad

Measure 2 cups cold string beans and add boiled dressing. Add 1 teaspoonful finely cut chives. Pile in centre of salad dish and surround with hose thin slices of radishes overlapping one another. Garnish with radish cut to represent a tulip.

Individual Salads

Arrange thick slice of tomato on salad green. Put cauliflower flowerets in centre. Surround with row of green peas, then row of finely chopped pickled beets. The outside row may be of pieces of green or red pepper. Serve mixed cream cheese out on with a pastry bag and tube. Serve with French dressing.

Banana Flour

Flour has been produced from bananas in Guatemala for many years and, although it has not attained any importance as an article of international commerce, nevertheless attention is being directed to its possibilities. In addition to Netherlands India, nearly every banana-producing region in Central and South America the West Indies, and certain districts of Africa produce this banana flour, some of them for export trade. Certain types of bananas writes the Canadian Trade Commissioner in Netherlands India, are better suited to the manufacture of flour than others. In Netherlands India the two varieties with the best yield are pisang ambon and pisang radja. The fruit is taken when it is about three-quarters ripe and before the starch has been transformed into sugar. The bananas are chopped and shredded, and allowed to dry in the sun before being ground into flour. Care must be taken that the fruit does not come into contact with any iron, as the tanin in the peel will stain the flour. Even under the best of conditions, the color is not particularly favorable, being somewhat gray, sometimes with slightly pink sheen. The flour has no distinctive odor and very little taste, with a negligible sugar content, since the sweetening process has not begun when the fruit is picked. Because it has been found easier to transport the bananas in chipped form than as flour, the practice in certain countries is to import the chips or sheds and mill locally. In Germany fairly large quantities are treated particularly in Hamburg, and in France the flour is used for the manufacture of baby foods and advantageously employed as a breakfast food. On account of its digestibility, there would appear to be a market for the preparation of certain products, and efforts towards that end are being made. Although it may be a very long time before banana flour could have any appreciable effect on Canadian flour—if ever—at least in the meantime the trend of the manufacture of banana flour should be watched.

Honey Crop Report

Ontario Department of Agriculture Statistics Branch

The information contained in this report is compiled from reports received from approximately 300 representative honey producers distributed throughout the Province. It is the second of a series of Honey Reports to be published through the co-operation of the Provincial Apiarist, Dominion Bureau of Statistics, and the Statistics and Markets Divisions of the Ontario Department of Agriculture.

The winter-killing losses suffered by the commercial beekeepers in the Province have been entirely made up largely by the purchase of packages from the southern beekeepers. As a class, suffered considerably heavier winter loss than the commercial apiarists, and in a great many cases their entire apiaries were wiped out. The number of colonies on hand at the present time shows the following percentage changes from this same date last year by districts and for the Province, as follows: Eastern Ontario, an increase of 2.6%; Central Ontario, a decrease of 2.6%; Western Ontario, an increase of 3.7%; Southern Ontario, a decrease of 3.7%. When these changes are applied to the number of colonies in each section the total number of colonies in Ontario shows a decrease of less than one-tenth of one per cent. Later reports indicate that winter-killing of colonies among the commercial apiaries averaged between 20% and 30%, or 5% greater than our earlier estimate.

The honey season has been more favorable than early conditions indicated and the estimated light honey crop per colony for this year is placed at a figure slightly in excess of last year, the estimate being 82.9 pounds per colony for 1934, compared with 82.6 pounds in 1933.

In Eastern Ontario the season has been much better than last year due to a greater abundance of clover, and the prospects per colony will show an increase of 50% over last year, or 90.3 pounds against 60.0 pounds. In Central and Western Ontario the production per colony of light honey is somewhat less, being 78.1 and 102 pounds below, respectively, and in Southern Ontario an increase is reported of 25 pounds per colony.

Individual apiaries show considerable variation in the production per colony, owing to the difference in the condition of colonies at the beginning of the season and also because in some apiaries the colonies have been handled from the standpoint of securing comb honey rather than securing a honey flow. The fall condition and alfalfa yield was more than usual, the fall honey output was derived chiefly from sweet clover, buckwheat and alfalfa. Alsike yielded very heavily and yielded quite freely. The light honey flow is only fair in Southern Ontario, considerable amount of honey is being produced from sweet clover and alsike clovers. The quality of light honey is reported to be excellent with a water color and heavier body than last year.

The production of comb honey will show a large reduction from last year due chiefly to the fact that small beekeepers, who are the principal producers of this type of honey, suffered extreme winter loss.

Prices of last year's crop show a gain of about 50% over last year. The price of No. 1 tins at the producing point is reported as ranging from 4½c to 5c, and 6½c to consumers. Considerable demand is reported as being quite brisk.

The prospects for the dark honey crop are fairly good, with an increased acreage of buckwheat, but is made somewhat uncertain by the lack of rain in the buckwheat districts in most counties. Apiarists report prospects for dark honey output as fair to poor in Eastern Ontario fair to quite good in Central and Western Ontario and only fair in Southern Ontario.

The condition of bees is reported to be poor in Manitoba, with weather conditions not favorable. About one-third of the Province is out of the running due to the effect of last year's frosts and grasshoppers. A crop considerably below last year's is indicated. The Winnipeg market is practically bare of old honey and during the past few months a few cars of Ontario honey were shipped in. In Saskatchewan, earlier prospects were bright for a bumper crop of light honey, but dry weather reduced the probable yield to an average crop only while the prospects of dark or fair will still further reduce it. No dark honey is produced in Saskatchewan. The market is bare of supplies at the present time.

The latest United States Department of Agriculture Honey Crop Report indicates a good yield in part of the Mountain States and a light crop in the balance of that area. In the Pacific Northwest a good early crop is reported, but the California honey yield is light all the north, and, it is stated that in Southern California hundreds and perhaps thousands of colonies will starve unless fed. The crop in the 12 principal States ranges from 2% to 7% of normal Prospects in the Midwest and East are fair to good. Stocks of honey are strong the lightest in years and prices indicate advances from one to two cents per pound over last year. Wholesale prices reported from various United States markets for white honey are from 8 to 10 cents per pound in 60 pound containers and from 10½ to 12½ cents per 5 pound pails.

The United Kingdom market remained relatively slow throughout the last season, due principally to an abnormal supply of home-produced honey offered at unusually low prices. Canadian white made 45/- to 50/- per 112 pounds, which was increased with 38 to 42 shillings per white California. The 1934 English crop reports are conflicting, but the general consensus of opinion is that the crop will be equal to or larger than last year. The 1934 crop in New Zealand was very low, due to drought, and the exports to the United Kingdom will, in all probability, continue to be small during this season. Prohibitive tariffs applied in both Italy and Germany eliminate those markets almost completely from the United States offerings with the result that some Californian is already offering in London at lesser prices than obtained last season.

Misunderstanding Re Grading of Eggs

Some misunderstanding of the proper interpretation under the new standards of Grade A Medium and Grade B appears still to exist in some districts, particularly in Eastern Canada. Grade B is the equivalent of the grade of Firsts in the previous standards, just as Grade A is the equivalent of Extras in the old standards, and Grade C the equivalent of Seconds. In the old standards there was one sub-grade under Extras, namely Pullet Extras. In the revised standards now in use there are two sub-grades under Grade A, namely Grade A Medium and Grade A Pullet. Both sub-grades are identical with Grade A so far as quality and cleanliness are concerned, the only difference being in size. The use of these sub-grades is optional. Most as Pullet Extras of the old standards could be packed with Seconds, so can Grade A Medium of the new standards be packed with Grade B, and Grade A Pullet with Grade C. Country packers, says the Egg and Poultry Market Review, are requested to take careful note of this explanation, as the true interpretation of Grade A Medium and Grade B must be insisted upon.

Pasture Improvemnnt

(Experimental Farms Note.)

Five years of experimental work at the Dominion Experimental Farm at Nappan, N.S., have resulted in a marked increase in the carrying capacity of the fertilized pastures as compared with unfertilized adjacent areas. In these experiments fertilization has given increases ranging from 141 to 472 per cent more than on unfertilized land.

If butterfat is 20 cents per pound and the production 20 pounds of 5 per cent milk per cow per day, the increased carrying capacity over the untreated area would show net returns of from $4.59 to $8.41 per acre per year, after paying for the fertilizers applied.

It has been found necessary to provide extra grazing during August and September, after the first rank growth is over. This has been met by fertilizing the aftermath and pasturing the aftermath. This practice is recommended to any farmer to follow, whether he is fertilizing his permanent pasture or not, preferably he selects a field that is dry or well drained. If pastured when the ground is soft, much damage may result from punching the sod full of holes.

The fertilizers used in these experiments are sulphate of ammonia, 100 pounds; superphosphate 300 pounds and muriate of potash 75 pounds per acre applied early in the spring. Another application of 100 pounds sulphate of ammonia is applied late in June. This complete fertilizer should be applied at least once every three years, while the nitrogenous fertilizer should be applied every year.

The procedure recommended for those interested is as follows:—

1. Select a field near the stable that has a continuous supply of water and preferably has a shade area connected with it.

2. If in poor state of fertility, apply the complete fertilizer early in the spring two years in succession, then once every three years.

3. Apply the nitrogen carrying fertilizer every year and preferably in two applications, one in April and one in June. Nitrate of soda or nitrochalk may be used instead of sulphate of ammonia, if cheaper.

4. Keep the field well and fairly closely, or to about 1½ to 2 inches, using heifers and horses if necessary.

5. Mow a clover field in late June to provide aftermath for the stock that will need to be removed from the pasture field in August when growth is less rapid.

6. Scatter the droppings with a fork or harrow.

7. If growth gets ahead of the stock, mow the field before the grass starts to head.

OBITUARY

MRS. REBECCA BARTLEY

One of the highest and most respected residents of North Fredericksburgh passed away at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Peter Laughlin, Desoronto, on July 31st, in the person of Mrs. Rebecca Bartley, at the age of nearly 82 years. Deceased whose maiden name was Rebecca Curtis, was born at Harlowe, Ont. One of a large family, of which there remain, Mrs. C. H. Bedingfield, of Maple, Ont., and Mrs. J. E. Sexsmith, of Richmond Township, are sisters, and one brother, John Curtis, living near Northbrook, Ont. She was on of a loving disposition and thoughtful of others. A loving mother and a true friend is everyone. She had been in failing health for a number of years, but was as well as usual until on the Friday preceding her passing, when she suffered a stroke and in spite of loving hands to minister and the doctor's care she quietly slipped away on Tuesday morning at 5 o'clock. She leaves to mourn her loss three children, Margaret (Mrs. Peter Laughlin), Maude (Mrs. John Bell), and Edward, from whose home the funeral was held on Thursday afternoon at Bethany United Church. She also leaves three grandchildren and four great grandchildren. The service was conducted by the minister, Mr. Beckel, who had visited her several times. He spoke very feelingly of the true christian spirit she possessed and of her hope of heaven. The casket was covered with many floral tributes, which showed the esteem in which she was held by her family and others. Her husband predecessed her 22 years and her son, Charlie, was drowned in Lake Superior 29 years ago. Another son died in infancy. Her remains were laid to rest in Bethany cemetery by the side of her husband. The pallbearers were H. H. Galt, Archie Amey, W. E. Joyce, Ed. Conger, Jas. Davis and M. H. Martin to change my book or for the odd game of contract. At the club they have what is called "rest in bridge". One goes to a table where four are already playing and as soon as a rubber is finished, those already there cut and the lowest one goes out and you go in. No one is introduced to anyone, and we played all afternoon without the slightest idea who my partners or opponents are. They are all very pleasant to play with and I've had some very nice games. We had a small rain storm yesterday, followed by the worst dust storm. I had gone to see a friend, who lives on a very steep hill, and had to wait until the dust subsided, and then came back here in a dandi. The view from her hut is wonderful, but I wouldn't want to climb up and down that hill every day without out. Mt. Nanga-Parbat, where the German explorer died a week or ten days ago, is very clear to-day. I am goes a little higher up than we are here. I had a good view of it when staying at Pree Top last summer. That is Major Hadow's bungalow, 500 feet further up the mountain. So far the weather has been all one could desire, but today I'm sitting in her verandah quite a cozy fire out on. Last week, in Peshawar, it was 116 in the shade.

MRS. F. F. MILLER WRITES FROM INDIA

I had such a nice surprise about two weeks ago. One of Miles' junior officers brought me a lovely silver trout, which he had caught in one of the nearby lakes the night before. It was a great treat, as the fish one gets here is nearly always caught in warm water, consequently very soft. This came from a very cold lake and was beautifully firm. There's one lake not a very far away, called Vuter, which is very dangerous to sail on unless one knows it well. A storm generally comes up every day after one p.m. Seven of the masters from a very noted Indian Christian School in Srinagar went out one day on this lake for a picnic, though the Principal, one of the Rev. Tyndal Bristo, warned them to start back at one. They disregarded the warning and when some got out on the lake a storm came up, the boat capsised and all the seven were drowned. Now the Monsoon rains are in the Central Provinces, and though we don't really get them here, it is a wonderfully good imitation of it. You may remember that in the six weeks we are here we had only four days without rain; sometimes it rained only an hour or so, morning or afternoon, at other times it would come down steadily for two or three days at a time. Today is quite out not too warm. Looks as though it might be the beginning of our Monsoon. There are the most wonderful wild flowers growing all over the mountains. The higher up one goes the more beautiful the flowers are. Coolies bring them to us, great big bunches, which they sell for a few annas, about five cents. My rooms now are full of white lilacs, wild tuberose, and other daisies. One enormous black-eyed Susans only with yellow centers instead of black; a very funny flower which is called the "cobra", has, I believe, the same coloring of that snake, which, thank goodness, I've never seen, but looks like our Jack-in-the-Pulpit about three times enlarged. There is also a very pretty blue flower, and in the jar with that, wild flocks.

Gardening is one of Kashmir's specialties. It is made in any color you wish—Babes, and all sorts of articles, very cheap. Large flower vases are sold for six annas each, carved, about 12 inches high. One can get a complete chota paperie set for about R. 1-8. Many buy the latter and use them for early breakfast at home. The only trouble is that when they are made of breaks very easily.

I must stop now. I've two more letters to write, and the English mail goes out at noon.

Kind regards to all my friends in Napanee.

Yours sincerely,
BERTHA M. MILLER.

P.S.—Here comes the sun, so perhaps the Monsoon isn't coming for awhile after all.

Canadian Apples in the B. W. I.

Where Green is Mistaken as the Color of Quality

Apples in the eastern group of the British West Indies and Guiana are mainly Canadian and United States, other fruits native to the islands, being consumed largely where grown. Although there is a limited sale of apples, the demand is increasing slowly, with Canada as the chief supplier. A peculiarity of this market, writes the Canadian Trade Commissioner, is the fact that apples green in color fetch a premium over those red apples. For many years, red apples from Canada and the United States have been sold by street vendors, with the consequence that the consumer has been educated to believe that the green-colored apples imported by the trade for the leading retailers are a higher-quality product. United States Navy Ranks Near Bottom

Washington.—The concentration of the combined United States fleet in New York harbor recently may have given eastern landlubbers the feeling it was just second to none.

But naval intelligence figures disclose the United States ranks at the very bottom of the list of world naval powers in the possession of up-to-date warships.

It ranks fifth, even lower than Italy, in what are known as "underage or modern vessels, although, of course, the American navy consists of many more vessels than Italy possesses.

However, it's the fighting quality of a warship that counts with the admirals rather than the number of vessels.

Naval Intelligence figures show the United States possesses a total of 87 modern "under-age" vessels, as compared with 166 for Japan, 139 for Great Britain, 128 for France, and 107 for Italy.

Even with completion of the present naval building program, the greatest naval development project launched by Washington since the world war, the American fleet still will be 79 vessels short of treaty strength.

Beat Mayonnaise Into Jellied Salad

Flavor of Mixture is Much Improved by This Method

Beating mayonnaise into half-cooled gelatin before adding the other ingredients, is the modern method of making main-course, jellied salads. When homemakers first began to use gelatin for salads, they served the dressing separately, but, thanks to famous dietitians, they've learned that the flavor of salad is improved if the combination takes place before the mixture sets.

Jellied salads are easy to prepare, and various left-overs may be used in them, are economical, too. For instance, when you have a dish of peas, a few green beans, several olives and a bit of cold salmon or meatfish in the icebox, combine them in a lemon flavored gelatine to make a luncheon or Sunday night supper dish. Or add a few fresh fruits to canned left-overs, chill the mixture in a fruit-flavored gelatin and you have party refreshments.

Ham Luncheon Ring

Ham luncheon ring is a delicious buffet supper or luncheon dish made in the new manner. Here is the recipe:

Dissolve one package of gelatin (lemon flavor) in one cup of boiling water. Add cold water and two tablespoons lemon juice, making three-quarters of a cup in all, set in icebox until it begins to thicken. Then cut and beat in three-quarters cup of mayonnaise. Then stir in one-half cup cold, diced ham, one-half cup tablespoons of minced green pepper and two tablespoons of minced dill pickle. Chill until firm, and serve on a bed of crisp lettuce or other salad greens.

Dominion Experimental Farms Weekly News Letter

Prepare for Fall Crops

To insure having a supply of lettuce, spinach, radish and chinese cabbage for fall use, the seed should be sown at this time.

The varieties that are best adapted according to the Dominion Horticulturist, are Grand Rapids and Iceberg lettuce; King of Denmark and Princess Juliana spinach; Michili and Petsai chinese cabbage, and Scarlet Turnip White or Scarlet Globe radish.

Should the soil be quite dry it is important to open the drills and if irrigation is available apply sufficient water to moisten the soil, and as soon as the land has dried so as to not be sticky the seeding should be done.

Foxtail Millet Hay

The foxtail group of millets includes such common commercial varieties as Siberian, Golden, Common, Hungarian and Japanese. When grown for hay, cutting should not be delayed beyond the stage when the majority of the plants are in bloom as at that time the nutritive value of the hay is greatest. After blooming the stalks on the head become stiff and harsh, and may lower the palatability of the hay and even cause digestive trouble if fed in large quantities.

Early Topping of Turnips

Three years of investigation of the practice of cutting turnip tops for green feed some weeks before the roots are pulled, conducted by the Division of Chemistry, has proved that the practice is not profitable. A storage of nutrients takes place in the turnips during the autumn months and this storage is checked by early topping.

Farm Accounts

Farming has changed from a means of livelihood to a highly specialized competitive business. Modern farming involves a considerable investment, and very few people realize the extent of the capital investment of even the average farm. This investment equals that of many small retail and manufacturing establishments, yet the vast majority of farms are operated without any system of accounting or records. Unless adequate records are kept it is impossible to determine definitely the cost of the various farm operations, and a knowledge of the cost of production will help prevent losses. The use of farm accounts and records will do a great deal towards reducing the cost of production below the selling price. Since the farmer has no control over the selling price, his only alternative is to reduce his costs of production to the minimum.

Goes via Hudson Bay on Four-Month Trip

Known throughout western Canada for his advocacy of the Hudson Bay route from Canada to the markets of the world, Col. J. J. Moodie of Regina, will now go into the record as Saskatchewan's champion globetrotter.

He recently returned, after an absence of ten months, during which time he visited a dozen countries, sailed the waters of half a dozen seas, witnessed wonders, in the form of saw golden streams of Canadian grain pour out of the holds of grain boats, talked over international matters with members of a dozen governments, and studied conditions in central Europe, and noted the march of progress of the people of Great Britain.

Last August, Colonel James boarded a train at Regina, and before setting foot on Regina's streets again a few days ago, had visited France, Italy, Turkey, Greece, England, Scotland, Denmark, and Roumania.

He saw the waters of the Hudson Bay Straits, the North Atlantic from Greenland to Cape St. Vincent, the Mediterranean, the Gulf of Lyons, the Tyrrhenian Sea, and Straits of Messina, the Ionian Sea, Aegean Sea, and passed through the Dardanelles and through the Bosphorus into the Black Sea.

Four months his home was on boats, and before his trip was over he had travelled over 25,000 miles by sea.

Discussing the Hudson Bay route, Colonel James said he found that shipments of the last two years had received great sympathy and attention from the great men of people of Great Britain.

Livestock importers of Britain were particularly pleased with the cattle shipments of last fall, he said. Prospects for development of trade in future via the Hudson Bay route, he said, were good, but lay almost entirely with the people of the prairie.

Britain, he said, was ready to do business with Saskatchewan, if the people of that province are ready to do business with her.

Shipping interests in Italy are particularly interested in the route, he mentioned, though no definite plan formed.

Throughout Central Europe he found evidence of great unrest and a domination of the militaristic spirit. "The people do not seem to know where they are heading for," he said. "They live from day to day, almost on a brink."

Many children die from the assaults of worms, and the first care of mothers should be to see that their infants are free from these pests. A venture that can be depended on is Miller's Worm Powders. They will not only expel worms from the system, but act as a health-giving medicine and a remedy for many of the ailments that beset infants, enfeble them and endangering their lives.

I can give you the basic reason for the supremacy of American over British players in polo, golf and tennis. American children are never suppressed. The result is an adult full of self-confidence in front of any crowd.—E. A. Plimpton-Kent.

How to go About Reviving Victims of Water Accidents

It is amazing in this day and age how many people are consistently helpless in case of water accidents. Most children swim somewhere nowadays. How different from twenty years ago, when many youngsters were afraid to wet their toes.

Children learn rules for first aid in school and camp, but comparatively few adults are informed of the processes of getting water out of logged lungs, or encouraging respiration after a near-drowning accident. We should all learn, at least, the rudiments of the procedure, as there is no time to run for a book when such an event occurs.

Artificial Breathing

If a child is fished out, of a creek or pool, to all appearances dead, the first thing to take for granted is that he is no such thing. Shout your hardest for someone to get the nearest doctor, but act even while you call. Pick up the child (if he's small enough to handle this way) by his feet and shake him to let the water run out of his lungs. Then lay him on the ground, on his stomach, with his jaws open. Something cold and flat may be put under his head. In fact it is better to do so. Take his elbows in your two hands and press them against his ribs, then raising his arms above his head. Repeat the movement regularly to stimulate breathing. This artificial breathing must be done evenly, smoothly and not too fast. About twenty times to the minute. Keep it up and do not get discouraged. The best position for the worker is straddling the patient with both knees on the ground, facing the head. Don't let people who are not needed to help crowd around. Tight clothes or bands should be loosened or cut, but do not lose time fumbling, or talking. Everything must count. His life is hanging on what you do.

Reviving Adults

If the child is older and too big to be picked up by his heels and have his lungs, use the method practiced with adults. Lay him stomach down on the ground, his face sideways, his arms outstretched and fold a mat under his chest and abdomen to allow the water to run out of his mouth. If there is no coat available, don't wait to look for something. Roll up two or three bathing suits, or anything handy, to give the needed elevation. Do not look for a barrel. There won't be any. Now straddle him, or, if easier, put one knee between his legs. The knees should be even with his hips, or nearly so. Then place the palms of your two hands on the small of his back, fingers on ribs; now swing your body forward and press down. Keep elbows stiff. As you bear down your shoulders will be above your hands.

Then quickly throw yourself back, count a second or so and repeat the gesture. About fifteen times to the minute. It must be done rhythmically and regularly without interruption. When you are tired have someone on the lookout to take your place without lost motion. Keep your head. Grimly determine that you are going to save that life if it takes hours. It may take one, two, or three even four hours.

Give a Warm Drink

By the time the doctor gets there the child will have had the needed artificial respiration. You can leave the rest to the doctor. But in case there is no doctor, give the child a drink of something warm and then put him in a long, long time. His whole system has had a shock. Don't allow him to talk.

It pays to practice the motion of pressure. The weight must be on the hands and at the right place. A squeezing but firm and slightly forward pressure acts as a pump. Be careful, however, that the weight of a heavy adult does not cause too suddenly even a delicate frame. No use curing one thing only to cause another trouble.

UNUSUAL USES FOR HOUSE HOLD VINEGAR

A few unusual uses for vinegar might be of interest. We all know its culinary uses, but has any one tried the following? They have all been tested.

When an aluminum saucepan is discolored boil a little vinegar and water in it to remove the stain.

Vinegar added to the water in which kitchen cloths are boiled "kills" the grease and makes them clean.

A little vinegar added to the soluds when dyeing makes the dye take better.

If glass is washed in vinegar and water it will be more highly polished.

Vinegar and water will freshen the color of carpets and tapestry, and take the "shine" off serge and other costumes.

Vinegar added to the water for washing furniture, paint and windows halves the work.

A few drops of vinegar on a lump or spoonful of sugar will ease a cough or sore throat.

Rub the scratch or stain.

Vinegar applied freely will prevent poisoning from dog or insect bites.

Vinegar added to grate or shoe polish that has dried in the tin will give a splendid polish.

Japan has a thunderstorm service which is particularly useful in its agriculturists. Two hundred and nineteen observation posts, manned by employees of the various electrical companies and placed at about 121 miles apart, inform the meteorological service of the government of any threatening thunderstorms over an area of 30,000 square miles.

Wherever the mystery of the universe has been cleared up, the truth has turned out more marvelous than men had dreamed.—Rev. Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick.

For the month of June exports of cattle to the United Kingdom were approximately 500 head smaller than for June, 1933, the movement being affected by market conditions, but for the first seven months of this year the number of cattle exported to Great Britain exceeded last year's corresponding period by 1,343 head.

Attention has again been drawn by the Live Stock and Meat Trade Review, published by the Dominion Department of Agriculture, to the evil of overloading the Monday livestock market. Such action is a direct snub to the law of supply and demand, and not among its least evils is that it largely affects cattle of a value least able to support marketing costs, adding further costs to the carryover.

Separate Sexes Early

Pullets will develop with greater uniformity if separated from the cockerels when they are eight to 12 weeks of age. The males are doomed to fattening and trap the 2nd hopper space that has been allotted to the females. Furthermore it is good economy to sell the males before they become staggy.

Value of Cooling Milk

It is a simple matter to control bacterial growth in milk. At 40 degrees F. there is practically no change in the number of bacteria but the end of 24 hours at 50 degrees the number increases four fold, and at 60 degrees nearly a hundred times as many as at the start. Milk should be cooled as promptly as possible. Freshly drawn milk contains a substance known as lactenin, which is able to restrain bacteria for a certain period. If the cooling is delayed the effect soon passes off; by prompt cooling the lactenin effect may be extended even to 24 hours or longer.

Pig Feeding Methods

Although there are several methods of preparing meal mixtures for feeding pigs, the following rules are recommended as safe practices in producing hogs of the desired type : (1) Grind all grain. Fine grinding is recommended, especially for young pigs. (2) Soak meal mixture between feeds; do not use too much water, but feed as a fairly thick slop. (3) Hand feeding is the best method for securing hogs of a desirable type. (4) If necessary, a self-feeder may be used after pigs have reached the growing stage of development. (5) Keep pails, troughs and other feeding equipment clean. Mouldy or decaying matter will cause feeding troubles. And (6) Supply clean drinking water.

Pasture for Pigs

Pasture for pigs may undoubtedly be made good use of on the average farm. This method of feeding, however, has disadvantages, particularly with the active bacon hog, owing to the opportunity for excessive exercise from the standpoint of fast finishing and the liability of little pigs to stunting through sunburn and the combined effects of sunburn and dew. With plenty of skim milk or buttermilk, both the experimental evidence and that of practical feeders would indicate that growing bacon hogs may be fed for market more economically indoors or in well shaded pens, supplied with racks for green feed, preferably in the form of alfalfa or clover. Shade are essential to the prevention of waste.

Poison Ivy

Poison ivy is rather difficult to [illegible], except by persistent work. A. F. Clark, horticultural Agricultural Societies, says: If the patch is not too large you can get rid of it by using of the weed killers obtainable at the stores. This should be applied according to the directions given, which specify that the ground should be saturated with the liquid. One or two applications applied a week or so apart will usually destroy the weed completely. Under some circumstances it can be exterminated most readily by the use of a blazing torch in the hands of someone who is immune from poisoning. A thorough burning out of the branches and roots is very effective, especially if an application of some oil is made afterwards. Another way of getting rid of this poison plant, which is growing on the ground, is to cover as much of it as possible with boards or heavy roofing paper held down by stones. In the course of several weeks the lack of air, water and sunshine will cause the plants to perish. Salt brine is sometimes used, but it is too mild a remedy for large patches.

A Much-Banned Weed

There is probably no weed in the universe so much legislated against as Clover Dodder, which was introduced into Canada from Europe. It is a serious pest in France, Spain, Italy, and other Southern European countries; in Chili and other parts of South America; in the United States; and in fact in all countries which have long summers without frost. During the years of shortage in clover seed crops in Canada it was frequently introduced and distributed in imported seed, but it ravages on red clover have been noted only in a few instances in Southern Ontario and the Pacific Coast in years following an exceptionally late fall without frost until October. The dodder is an annual parasite with slender yellowish and reddish stems which twine about the host plant and become attached to the clover stems by suckers through which it obtains nourishment. Alfalfa dodder has given trouble in Southwestern Ontario and in the Prairie Provinces, where it is known to have continued in alfalfa for three years. Badly infested fields should be plowed under before seed forms.

"For Service to French Astronomy"

Mrs. Dorothea Klumpke Roberts Awarded Legion of Honor — Pioneer Woman Scientist

A white-haired distinguished-looking lady recently travelled up to Paris from Fontainebleau to go to a luncheon party. Much to her surprise, on her arrival, she found the party was being given for her.

The French Government had seen fit to present Mrs. Dorothea Klumpke Roberts with a Cross of the Legion of Honor for "48 years' service to French astronomy." The Minister of Public Instruction pinned the insignia on the bodice of a very flustered and tremulous Mrs. Roberts, and made a speech.

This signal honor was bestowed on one of the pioneer women scientists working in France. To Mrs. Roberts this was the crowning glory of her long career devoted to astronomy, which had begun in the year 1887.

French Californians

Way back in the, 1870's Mrs. Roberts' mother came to France from San Francisco with her four young daughters. She wanted them to have a European education. So they went to school first in France, then in Switzerland, and finished up in Germany.

Dorothea became a mathematician and she was the first woman to obtain a degree in mathematics at the Sorbonne in 1886.

At that time, the family lived near the Paris Observatory — right opposite, in fact. As a child, Dorothea had always been attracted by a starry sky. One of her earliest recollections is her excitement and interest in a partial eclipse which was visible in San Francisco when she was a very small girl. Her close proximity to the Observatory in Paris and her interest in astronomy made it all the easier one day to cross the street, ask to see Monsieur Mouchez, who was the the director, and suggest that she work for him.

"The admiral pondered a little while," Mrs. Roberts said with a tender little smile, "then exclaimed 'Pourquoi pas,' why not?"

So Dorothea Klumpke was admitted to the staff of the observatory. Her next distance came the very next year. The International Astronomical Congress met in Paris to discuss the charting of the heavens by photographic means. This was in 1887, and Dorothea Klumpke was specialized in this branch of astronomy ever since.

The thing which brought the young girl into prominence during this important meeting was the translation by Miss Klumpke of a very erudite and very scientific paper on astronomy by the famous Dr. Gill. This was given to Miss Klumpke to translate from English into French because of her thorough knowledge of both languages. This paper was to be read at a big meeting and she was very proud and not at all shy of her interpretation of the scientific terms. She came out of the test congress in flying colors and that was the beginning of her fame in the astronomical world.

In 1892 she was appointed director of the Bureau of Measurements at the Observatory when this department was organized. In 1896 she was sent by the Director of the Observatory as a member of the party which journeyed to Norway in the steamship "Nerea Hall" to observe the complete eclipse of the sun. Dorothea Klumpke's travel notes were included in the Bulletin Astronomique of January, 1897.

The beginning of the century was also the beginning of a new life for Dorothea Klumpke. It was then she married Dr. Isaac Roberts, F.R.S., distinguished English astronomer. She had met him twice only—on the occasion of the famous congress in 1887 and on the trip to Norway. Fourteen years after he lost his wife he had to her surprise received a letter from him enclosing a signed photograph she had asked for years before. He had never forgotten her and they were married soon after, in 1901.

Lectured in America

Until 1904 — when Dr. Roberts died — she worked with him at his observatory, "Starfield," in Sussex, having resigned from her post at the Paris Observatory. Before he died he had the satisfaction of working out a systematic photographic survey of the famous "Hershel's Fifty-two Nebulous Regions."

After her husband's death, Mrs. Roberts returned to the United States, where she lectured frequently the world back to France just before the war. Her sister, Anna, friend and biographer of Rosa Bonheur, was then living in the famous painter's house near Fontainebleau, which Mrs. Roberts bought and restored for her. Here also was Julia, another sister, who had attained distinction in music, having taught the violin and composed quartets for violin and cello.

In 1928 Mr. Roberts had completed and published the studies of her husband in a vast work, "Isaac Roberts' Atlas of 53 Regions A Guide to Hershel's Finish."

"The authorities of the Observatory here (Paris) were very good and have put a great deal of assistance, otherwise I would never have been able to attempt, let alone complete, this work," explained Mrs. Roberts, showing shelf upon shelf packed tight with plates made by her husband.

Her study is filled with interesting souvenirs of her long and active life. A portrait of her as a young girl by her sister, Anna, shows her as a slender and pretty fair-haired girl holding a sidereal globe in her hands. Opposite is a portrait of her husband, Dr. Roberts, also by Anna Klumpke. Books, flowers, curios mingle with charts of the heavens, a daguerreotype of Admiral Mouchez, the man who gave Dorothea Klumpke her first great chance, occupies a place of honor. His grandson, by the way, was present at the momentous party a few days ago when the Legion of Honor was bestowed on Mrs. Roberts.

Mrs. Roberts is not satisfied yet to rest on her laurels. She is still an active member of many scientific bodies, in an R.A.S., and still carries on an extensive correspondence with astronomers the world over. She continues her studies of the celestial regions at an age when most men and women would think themselves entitled to rest and leisure.

She loves flowers, dogs, in fact all animals, but not as much, perhaps, as she loves the stars. Her serenity is probably the result of the maxim which she says has always been her rule of life—"be true to yourself and just unto others".

THE FRONT STEPS

As she reached the edge of the red-tiled floor of the hall, working slowly backwards with wide sweeps of the scrubbing brush, Mrs. Shanaghan took reflective glances at the water in the bucket, darkened with dirt and creamed with a yellow scurf from the soapsuds, and wondered if she could possibly make it do for the steps. This was her habitual hope and expectation as she neared the end of her early morning task. It seemed to make the minutes move faster and the unwashed spaces of the hall to be transformed into shining wet cleanness at an almost exhilirating pace. She hardly noticed the ache in her wrist as she bore forward on it, the whole weight of her shoulders transferred from a stiff arm to the brush which circled and swept and soaked up the dirt amid the bubbling suds. There ! That was the last corner done, but as she flopped the heavy cloth down and mopped it around, and wrung it out, and then dried off with a few casual flicks and rubs, she realized—once again—that her conscience would not let her yield to temptation. She would just have to go and get fresh water, to do those steps. Slowly she rose to her feet, straightening her knees and forcing her shoulders back painfully and telling herself, as she was always doing these days, that she was not as young as she used to be. Then she hurried away to change the water in the bucket and be done with the job till to-morrow.

The steps were marble at the side and only needed whitening in the middle. The water softened the muck on them at once and you had no more to do than swill them down and run the cloth well wrung out and clean, over them, and they were ready for the holystone. Sixteen years since she had first started this job, and day in, day out, six days a week (except that time she had had pleurisy bad), and had washed out the hall and done the steps ever since. If Peter hadn't died so unexpected she would never have come to it, of course. Peter would be turning in his grave if he knew. But it wasn't so bad, except in the winter, and you got used to it. If only one morning she could make the water last out so she could do the steps without having to fill the bucket again ! If only one morning Mr. Steadfoster would walk up the side and not splash his dirty footmarks right in the middle where she would have to wash them off again before she dare go ! But, of course, Mr. Steadfoster was head clerk, and always early at the office, and though he was careful to say good morning to her, you couldn't expect a man in his position to think of things like footmarks. The other clerks knew better, they went up the side and two at a time, even young Mr. Osterly who always came in whistling and banging his morning paper in as he thinh. But, of course, they weren't so important as Mr. Steadfoster was. And it was about time he came this morning ! No use her going away till she had wiped off after him.

Well, here he was, with his little smile and his good morning, and left right, left, right, there he went up the steps, slow and dignified, and across the hall to wait by the lift. Six good firm prints, with the outline of the rubber heel on each of them, for he got his foot down solid and hard. He was a well-built man. If only he wouldn't, it would save her a good ten minutes every morning and she'd not be so fretful and worrying ! That's what she'd have to sing when he came home on that leave of his. If she had put up with it for sixteen years she could go on putting up with it.

But just as she was wiping away the last mark, someone rang past her up the steps, and looking up she saw five fresh footprints, against the clean ledges, and young Mr. Osterley of all people with his hand out to pull open the swing doors. And before she knew what she was doing she had taken the heavy cloth dripping with water, and thrown it at him, and hit him, too, right in the back of the neck. And even then she wasn't sorry or frightened either. She stood and stared at his silly pink astonished face and swore at him.

And evidently, Mr. Steadfoster had not got the lift yet, for he came out and said, "What's all this ? What's all this ?" She tried to tell him, and so did Mr. Osterley, and they both spoke at once, so Mr. Steadfoster said: "You'd better both come up to my office. Finish the steps, Mrs. Shanaghan, and then come straight up."

Upstairs, with the door firmly shut, "Now, Mr. Osterley," began Mr. Steadfoster, "you seem to have suffered. Tell your story."

Mr. Osterley, said, "Oh, O wasn't going to make any complaint, and I don't understand. I came into the office just after you, sir, and when I got to the top of the steps a dirty wet cloth hit me in the back of the neck. I don't know that Mrs. Shanaghan threw it, but who else could it be ? And I can't imagine why."

Mr. Steadfoster asked her for an explanation, and he looked very shocked. Then she started in cry, which was silly of her, and she tried to tell them about the sixteen years, and how she had just got the steps perfectly clean when Mr. Osterley left his footmarks on them, and something in her went snap, and she saw she had thrown the cloth. She was quite sure she was going to get the sack, and whatever would she do without that bit of extra money ? But Mr. Steadfoster, though he looked very serious and said it was a terrible thing to do, went on talking about not being herself, and no doubt she would say she was sorry. So she did, and Mr. Osterly said that was quite all right, but would Mr. Steadfoster let him go out to buy a clean collar. But Mr. Steadfoster called him back. "Not so quick, please !" and then he went for the poor young chap, and said he was thoughtless and inconsiderate, just like all the younger generation, and Mrs. Shanaghan had worked for the firm for many years, no doubt in a humble capacity, but there was such a thing as the dignity of the labour, and it was most important the steps should be clean, and, after all, it wasn't surprising, though regrettable, that Mrs. Shanaghan did what she did, seeing all her hard work spoilt by a careless young man who ought to know better, and Mr. Osterley was to see it didn't occur again or there would be trouble. And there she stood, staring at Mr. Steadfoster, wondering how he could do it, and when she got outside she just couldn't help telling Mr. Osterley about the way Mr. Steadfoster came up those steps every morning, this sixteen years past. And off he went into bursts of laughter, and every Monday morning now he drops a packet of cigarettes down beside the bucket and when he says good morning he winks at her. But Mr. Steadfoster still walks up the middle of the steps.

JOHN BROPHY.

SOME ENGLISH EPITAPHS

FROM THE BRITISH REVIEW OF REVIEWS

It is curious what a constant interest is evinced in the unearthing of curious epitaphs. The correspondence columns of the daily papers and weekly periodicals are seldom without some contribution, and the regularity of their appearance speaks for their popularity.

England, of course, is not unique in her collection of epitaphs. Every country can produce excellent specimens, but we are particularly fortunate in a rich harvest of rural verse. Rough, and often crude, it is yet enlivened with touches of shrewd humor and native wit, and breathes the very spirit of England. It is the same sense of familiarity between the things of the spirit and the things of earth that led our craftsmen of old to carve the corbel stones of majestic cathedrals into the likenesses of local worthies and twist the features of high dignities into malicious gargoyles.

Needless to say, many of the old epitaphs dealt with the trade or calling of the deceased, and often a pun on the name or calling could be aptly introduced. Here is one, on a baker, taken from an old church near Christchurch :

Like a baker's oven is the grave,
Wherein the bodyes of the faithful have
A setting in, and where they do remain
In hope to rise, and to be drawn
Blessed are they, who in the Lord are dead,
Though set like dough, they shall be drawn like bread.

Another written at Barking Church Essex, in 1670 :—

Stay here awhile and his sad state deplore
Here lies the body of one Thomas More
His name was More, but it may now be said
He is no more because that now he's dead
And in this place doth lie sepulchred.

Lastly, must be quoted the following lines written on an Innkeeper at Sidelford :

Here lies the Landlord of "The Lion"
His hopes removed to land of Sion,
His wife, resigned to Heaven's will,
Will carry on the business still.

(Two years later.)

Here lies the Landlord's loving wife,
Her soul removed from lands of strife
She's gone and left her spouse to tell
The Inn he left her turned out well.

The cause of death is naturally the theme of many a good epitaph, and there is seen that over-eating was in past times, considered a noble end.

Here lies Johnny Cole,
Who died, on my soul,
After eating a plentiful dinner;
While brewing his crust,
He was turned to dust
With his crimes undigested— poor sinner.

The old writers were delightfully frank in their details of the last illnesses, and the following amusing examples may be quoted :

Poor Martha Snell, her's gone away
Her would if her could, but her couldn't stay
Her had two legs and a badish cough,
But her legs it was that carried her off.

Here lies the body of Mary Ann Lowe,
She burst while drinking a seidlitz powder,

It must not be thought that all English epitaphs are as rough-hewn as the examples quoted in this article. Most of the noblest, such as Wordsworth's epitaph on the poet Southey and Robert Louis Stevenson's written for himself, are well known and to need repeating. But the daggerel verses chselled on many a country tombstone represent the rugged humor of our forefathers and as such we rightly honor them.

Tea Served to Patrons of Manchester Shops

Summer Sales Bring Out Huge Crowds—Refreshments Detain Office Workers

The shopping festival of summer sales in Manchester, England, have brought crowds looking for bargains in summer wear ; but it is the buyers' best season for furs. One store advertises coats from $30 up to $5.000 and has been full of customers. The values are extraordinary and wide in range. Almost every sort of shop joins in the festival.

Here the crowds do not assemble so belligerently for the opening of the fortnight's sale as do the London shoppers for their six days. There are crowds so large, however, that one of the stores has been sending cut trolleys carrying cups of tea to the waiting people, to hearten them before nine o'clock.

This is a thing not done in Manchester before, and it has diverted a number of people from a prompt attendance at their offices. The gift of tea has been much appreciated by genuine shoppers and has helped to create a mood favorable to buying.

The British Crown colony of Trinidad and Tobago, with which Canada does an increasing trade, is the largest in area of any of the island colonies in the eastern group of the British West Indies.

Called from this world to her heavenly rest,
She should have waited till it effervesced.

Here lie I with my three daughters.
Who died drinking Cheltnam waters
If we had stuck to Epsom Salt
We should not sleep in this cold vault.

Among those who died a violent death, smugglers and excise men numbered not a few and often the same epitaph served for both, with a slight alteration. This is a popular one in Cornwall :—

In prime of life most suddenly
Sad things to relate,
Here view by utter destiny and pity
my sad fate
I by a shot which rapid flew
Was instantly shot dead.
Lord pardon the offender who
My precious blood did shed.
Grant him to rest and forgive me
For all I've done amiss —
And that I may rewarded be
With everlasting bliss.

There is uneconscious humor in the following two examples :—

Erected to the memory of
John MacFarlane
Drowned in the Port of Leith
By a few affectionate friends.

Erected to the memory of John Phillips
Accidentally Shot
As a mark of affection by his brother

Old maids, quarrelsome women, and nagging wives were not spared, and much local wit was expended at their expense. Here is one or two good specimens :—

On the Wife of the Parish Clerk Bewdley.

The children of Israel wanted bread,
And the Lord He sent them manna.
Old cleg Walace wanted a wife,
And the Devil he sent him Anna.

I plant these shrubs upon your grave
dear wife,
That someone on this spot may boast of life.
Shrubs may wither and all earth
must,
Shrubs may revive; but you, thank heaven, will not.

Beneath this stone is laid
A noisy and antipidean maid,
Who from her cradle talked till death,
And never before was out of breath.

Soviet Policy Is to Ignore Rather Than Suppress Religion

A former Sudbury, Ontario, girl, Mrs. Julius Gillis, wife of an American engineer, working in Russia, gives her viewpoint as to conditions in the Soviet, as she sees them, in an interview :—

Mrs. Gillis and her husband have been in Russia for four years. They have maintained an apartment in Moscow the whole time, but during the last two years have spent much time in Ordjonikidze, southern Russia. By special permission they were allowed the two apartment, although Mrs. Gillis remarked that they were probably the only people in Russia to the waiting people, to hearten with two dwelling places, inasmuch as all Russian houses are overcrowded.

"As foreigners in Russia, Mrs. Gillis said they were bothered very little, although, periodically, officials appeared to tabulate the furniture in their home and measure the apartment. Russian rents being charged on the area basis.

In the Caucasus, they sent out every month for food. Because the stores in the village had very little variety. Mrs. Gillis told an amusing story of a minor household tragedy involving the last can of corn in the district. "I sent home to the Canadian Stores.

"The Russians have corn, but you can't eat it because it isn't prepared properly. I had this one can of corn and I took it out and looked at it. Finally, I decided we should use it and that I would make corn fritters. It was so precious that I wouldn't let the maid touch it but prepared the fritters myself. I had never made them before and had no proper utensils: a strainer and so forth. Still, they looked wonderful when they came out. When we tried to eat them, though, we just couldn't, they were so greasy. I wanted to cry."

Mrs. Gillis said an American specialist had gone to Russia to make canned corn, corn syrup, corn starch, corn flakes, and other corn products, but that, so far, there was none to be bought.

"They have stores of corn, but they don't know what it is. They have windows displaying the process by which corn flakes are made, but when you go in you find scores you can't buy any," she said.

The Russians have very pleasant to foreigners and she and her husband had special privileges. They could, for instance, purchase railway tickets when others could not obtain them, and they had no difficulty obtaining meals in the stores provided for them. Although immense difficulties would arise in obtaining some article which was not a standard in Russia, chewing gum for instance, or ordinary food and clothing could be obtained.

A policy of ignoring rather than suppressing religion is observed, Mrs. Gillis said. "The churches are not suppressed, but they are self-supported. They can't support themselves, so those that do exist, exist by their expense. Nobody else," she said. "It means social ostracism, more or less, for anyone to go to church."

"Door of Hope" is Novel Chinese Matrimonial Agency

Nanking, China. — Having succeeded in marrying off 19 of its inmates in 12 months, the institution of a novel scheme, a Nanking institution, known as the "Door of Hope", has announced a "new marriage season will be held during the week of August 7 to 13.

The Door of Hope is an institution which shelters and educates former prostitutes. These girls are kept at the institution for domestic training for periods of from six months to one year, and any man requiring one of them must pay the Door of Hope from $40 to $60 in accordance with "educational fees".

The "mating season' at the Door of Hope is conducted in an unusual manner. For a whole week photographs of the forthcoming girl graduates are hung on the walls of one room, and any man wanting a wife may inspect the photographs at leisure.

The bridegroom-to-be must then send to the management a four-inch photograph of himself, together with a card stating his name, age, means of livelihood, income and references. If the application is found satisfactory the suitor is permitted to call upon the girl whose photograph has attracted him.

And, if the girl consents, the marriage is quickly arranged. During the June "mating season" 151 men filled applications, so that the 19 girls to be married off had considerable latitude on choice. The same applicants for brides included government officials and employees, small shop owners, store clerks, servants, janitors, laborers and one private soldier.

Eaton exports to the United Kingdom continue to make headway, and the movement to date this year is very far ahead of that for the corresponding period of last year.

VITAMINS A AND C

One reason for eating carrots and other vegetables is their richness in the disease-resisting factors known as vitamins A and C. Both of these vitamins are sensitive to contact with air or oxygen. Tests of market vegetables, contrasting crisp fresh material with wilted, have proved conclusively that wilting is accompanied by considerable destruction of vitamin C, and, to a lesser degree, of vitamin A. Of course, the main loss is water, but with its withdrawal, oxidative destruction of the vitamins is easier.

Feeding Summer Athletes

BY BARBARA B. BROOKS

Are you one of those who feels just a little embarrassed whenever you sit in on a discussion of failing summer appetites or read about suggestions for light summer meals to tempt those who must be coaxed along until Fall frosts bring bigger appetites?

It is a fact that some of us are just starved to death on the very hottest days. We may have a guilty feeling about it, but we are really hungrier in summer than during any other time of the year.

Warm weather is the time for us who live in a four-season climate to get out-of-doors. We go in for sports. We get enthusiastic about games, contests and plans for trips and outings. All of these things take energy and we get energy only from the food we eat.

The menus given below are for the active, healthy people who forget hot weather by keeping busy. The meals abound in summertime fruits and vegetables to regulate and tone up the system. Plenty of energy is stored in them because of the generous use kind that nourished you but keeps you cool. One quart of milk per day that each of us needs is there, part of it tucked away in sauces, desserts, beverages, breads, cheese. The proteins appear in the form of eggs, milk cheese, meat, fish and vegetables. There is fat to keep you satisfied and happy, but not enough to make the meals over-heating.

BAKED FISH
(Spencer Method)

Cut fish into pieces for serving. Dip in salted milk, using one tablespoon of salt for each cup of milk. Evaporated milk may be used. Dip into finely ground or rolled corn flakes. Arrange on well-oiled baking sheet and sprinkle liberally with oil. Bake in a very hot oven (500 degrees F.) for about ten minutes.

EGGS GOLDE NROD

Six eggs.
Two tablespoons butter.
Four tablespoons flour.
Half teaspoon salt.
Dash of pepper.
Two cups of milk.
Six whole wheat biscuits.

Put the eggs in cold water in covered pan and bring slowly to the boiling point. Remove from heat, keep pan covered, and allow the water to cool. When cool, the eggs will be firm, but tender.

Separate the cooked whites and yolks. Chop whites. Melt butter in double boiler. Add flour, mixed with seasonings and stir to a smooth paste. Add milk gradually, stirring constantly to avoid lumping and cook until sauce thickens. Add chopped egg whites. Pour over whole wheat biscuits which have been split and buttered. Rub the cooked yolks through a fine sieve and sprinkle over the egg sauce. Serve at once.

Work on Scenic Highway Along Bay Shore Progressing

Work has been progressing steadily during the summer on the Bay Shore scenic highway, from Bath to the Adolphustown ferry. The road was taken over by the Government as a provincial highway some months ago. It will be connected by ferry from Adolphustown to Glenora, with the highway running through Picton and Carrying Place to Trenton.

The roadbed has been widened to the regulation highway requirements and is being kept in shape by the maintainer, which is constantly at work. Some bad turns are being straightened out and trees and underbrush obstructing the view of the water are being removed.

The dust is being kept down by a special preparation. Although a permanent surface has not been applied, the road is in good condition for travelling.

W.E. Schuster, Belleville Interviewed In Wales

Mr. W. E. Schuster, who is in Wales in the interest of trade between the Bay of Quinte area and Wales, was recently interviewed by the Swansea Western Mail and Daily News.

The paper reports the interview as follows :—

"Wales" scenic beauty is among the finest in the world. But this fact is not known outside the principality because it is not advertised.

"This was the opinion expressed to the Western Mail & South Wales News, on Wednesday, by Mr. W. E. Schuster of Ontario, Canada, who is visiting Swansea in furtherance of the policy of reciprocal trade between his province and South Wales.

"Mr. Schuster said that in Canada the mention of Wales at once conjured in the minds of people the presence of anthracite coal and tinplates. If that were so in Canada, it must be in other parts of the world and it might be said that in some parts, Wales was not known at all.

"Personally, he had not seen such marvellous scenic beauty anywhere as he had in Wales, and if it were properly advertised, he had no doubt that Wales would become one of the "playgrounds" of the world. Why the potentialities of the country from a health standpoint had not been advertised, he failed to understand.

Impressed with Scenery

"So impressed had he been with the scenery he had seen on the train journey from Liverpool to Swansea, that he had written to Mr. H. C. Dring, European passenger agent of the Canadian Pacific Railway, suggesting that, at any rate as an experiment, passengers landing from vessels at Liverpool should be brought down through Wales to Swansea and then to London instead of being taken to London direct. This, he was sure, would be appreciated by visitors and would indirectly benefit the principality.

It would certainly be to Wales' advantage to form an organization to advertise the country as a holiday resort in the Canadian and American journals, and he would willingly do what he could in Canada, to help.

Reciprocal Trade

"He agreed entirely with the views expressed by Mr. J. Kyrle Fletcher in his article in Wednesday's Western Mail & South Wales News, on "Wales not advertise the beauty spots in Wales?" Wales possessed potentialities of which its people were only half aware. If they fully realised how beautiful and magnificent the country was compared with other places in the world, they would do far more to bring its merits to the attention of people in other countries.

"Mr. Schuster also spoke of reciprocal trade between Canada and South Wales. Canada took hundreds of thousands of tons of Welsh anthracite coal each year, and it was a sound economic proposition for Wales to take in return the foodstuffs produced in Canada. Their motto in Ontario was 'Wider markets in Ontario for Welsh coal, and extended markets in Wales for Ontario foodstuffs.'"

Farmers to Benefit By Marketing Board

Legislation Effective This Week

Announcement of the creation of the new Marketing Board has been made simultaneously by a statement from the Minister of Agriculture, Hon. Robert Weir, that it will begin its work on Monday, of dealing with numerous applications for the approval of marketing schemes. These include so far, tobacco, apples and grapes, while the coarse grains pool of the farmers' representatives of the livestock industry also are submitting proposals.

Forecast, the Government does not go outside its own highly qualified technical services in the building up of the board. Its new additional work involved no new expense to the Treasury. They include agricultural, economic and financial experts.

Dr. Barton Chairman

The chairman is to be Dr. G. H. S. Barton, Deputy Minister of Agriculture and formerly of McGill University. Dr. J. F. Booth, economist, another member, was brought into the Department of Agriculture when Hon. W. R. Motherwell was minister. He is a recognized economist. The French-Canadian member of the board is A. Gosselin, well known in Quebec agricultural circles. From the Bureau of Statistics, Clyde Davidson, an expert on grain and other agricultural data, is drafted. M. K. Eaton, who came to the Finance Department this year from Howard University, is a young Nova Scotian well versed in finance and economics.

The fact that the board is made up wholly of departmental officials removes any suggestion of politics or patronage in the appointments. The objective is to serve the interests of the primary producers who, from the inquiries received extensively, will avail themselves of the new institute and the wide powers it is equipped to exercise.

The initial boards will likely be created to handle the B. C. apples and other fruits and Niagara grapes.

The Marketing Board is not to be considered at all with the sale of any commodities. Rather, it will examine the schemes which the producers submit. When these plans receive its sanction, the subsequent approval of the Government and of the producers themselves, by a representative vote, the local boards will attend to all details of actual administration.

Expect $1.50 Wheat In United States This Year

Los Angeles. — Belief that cash wheat will sell in some of the chief markets for $1.50 a bushel before another crop is produced, was expressed here by Thomas D. Campbell, prominent Montana wheat grower, after he read the Government crop report.

It is obvious, he said, that some spring wheat will have to be imported for mixing and milling purposes before the 1935 crop is harvested. In this prediction he pointed out the crop report gave only 90,000,000 bushels of spring wheat, including durum, against a normal average of 235,000,000 bushels, and annual requirements for milling purposes, equally 200,000,000 bushels.

Picton Tax Rate For 1934, 32 Mills

At Wednesday night's adjourned council meeting, the rate for 1934 was struck at 32 mills. This is a reduction of two mills over the treasurer's estimate contained in the report of Tuesday night's committee meeting, and a reduction of one mill over the 1933 rate. The two mills reduction was made in the amount set by the treasurer for town purposes.

County Lodges Attend Annual Celebration of Derry Day Anniversary

Large Number Present Despite Heat

Despite a blazing hot sun, a field with none too much shade, a busy harvest day, the Loyal Orangemen came from every section of the County of Lennox and Addington to Newburgh, to join with others, in commemorating the victory that was gained by William of Orange and his loyal soldiers, by the raising of the siege of Londonderry.

Most of the primary lodges in the County were well represented. There were Orangemen present from Lime Lake, Marlbank, Colebrook, Forest Mills, Selby, Croydon, Centreville, Napanee, Camden East, Bay View and Newburgh. There were also Orangemen present from the County of Frontenac and West Hastings.

Owing to the extreme heat, the usual parade was not held.

Mr. Roland Baker Extends Welcome

The special features for the day was the platform meeting held in the afternoon with Rev. J. E. Beckel, County Master, in charge. Mr. Robert Scilley, in a very witty way, presented greetings from the districts of Addington, while Mr. Roland Baker, in a few well chosen remarks, presented the good wishes of the lodges of the district of Lennox.

Rev. John Patterson of Inverary, Deputy Master of South Frontenac, was the special speaker for the day. He spoke of the problems facing the world today. He said : "That the problem facing the church of today was one of carelessness and indifference on the part of its members." He urged all Orangemen to be loyal to the Protestant Church in these difficult days. It was a good sermon and was listened to with rapt attention.

Rev. W. D. Craig, of Roblin, was also present and spoke briefly urging Orangemen to be true to their obligations, especially in their relationship to the churches of their own communities.

Odessa Band Supplied Music

The music was supplied by the Odessa Brass Band and a massed band of Orange drummers and fife. The martial airs of the brass band with the Old Orange tunes of the fife and drum, and every Orangeman's blood flowing faster. When a show of hands was asked for by the chairman as to which band was the better, naturally the fife and drum band received the honors.

During the afternoon a ball game was played between Sydenham and Forest Mills, but it was difficult to created much interest in a game played in a blazing hot sun.

The Provincial Orangement did their very best to make a large field inviting to their guests from the county. Banners and booths were everywhere evident.

At the noon hour the food booth was a busy place, while during the afternoon the ice cream booths did a flourishing business. A great deal of credit is due the Newburgh Lodge for the success of the day.

During the afternoon an announcement was made of the Orange memorial service which is being held in Centreville United Church, Sunday, September 2nd, at 2:30 p.m.

Canadian Troops Launched Final Drive 16 Years Ago

Where were you sixteen years ago? The question may at first appear a strange one, but it is being asked by countless ex-servicemen throughout Canada, for on Wednesday, August 8 was the anniversary of the Canadian Corps great drive on the Somme, marking the beginning of "the last hundred days" of the Great War.

How the corps was smuggled down from just south of Arras, by a series of night marches, men and armaments being hidden in billets and woods during the daylight hours, to deliver the most decisive attack ever launched against the Germains, is history in itself.

The "show" began at Villers Bretonneux, a stone's throw from Amiens and "rolled out like a carpet," infantry, artillery, tanks and cavalry taking part, in the order named, the Canadian Cavalry Brigade, usually with the Imperial troops fought with the Canadian Corps, as part of a whole cavalry division, whose charge up the valley to Rosieres, beyond which the line was finally established, is something that is still talked about.

Within a few minutes of the "kick-off," the Germans raided the front line, held by the Australians, who later participated in the attack. The whole essence of the drive was surprise. The enemy never had an inkling that the Canadians were waiting to go over, for none of that raiding party lived to tell the tale or to shout a warning.

The success of the operation is a matter of history, but it can be argued by the fact that part of the "catch" of prisoners and equipment, included a complete hospital train. It was probably one of the rare occasions of the entire war on which nursing sisters became prisoners of war.

The engagement was undoubtedly the beginning of the end" of the war and August 8th, 1918 is a date which will stand out forever in the history of those who took part in it.

Ontario to Enforce Higher Milk Prices

Toronto— J. A. MacFeeters, chairman of the Ontario Milk Control Board, told the Milk Distributors' Association in Toronto on Wednesday last that the Government intended to have prices paid to producers increased. "If moral suasion won't serve, then we will employ, more severe measures," he said.

J. E. Houck, also a member of the board, declared that low rates to the farmer-producer led to less care in production and to a lower quality of milk.

In his address Mr. MacFeeters declared that licenses for milk distributors were going to be increasingly difficult to obtain. "The board means business," he added, "and will rescind licenses of those who do not conform to the requirements."

The Association members pledged support to the "code of ethics" approved by the Board.

J. B. Spencer Retires From Public Service

Mr. James B. Spencer, B. S. A., Director of Publicity of the Dominion Department of Agriculture, has retired after a brilliant service of 20 years , and will in future devote his widely-specialized talents to the further betterment of agriculture and horticulture. As an expert agriculturist, a trained newspaper man, and a highly successful horticulturist, his services will be eagerly sought after by the agricultural and horticultural industries. In addition he was a practical farmer and stock grower, being a prize-winning raiser of roses and other flowers. He is a graduate of Ontario Agricultural College, second vice-president of the Ontario Horticultural Association, a past president and director of the Ottawa Horticultural Society, and a member of the Canadian Society of Agriculturists. When he was first pointed the public service as assistant to the Live Stock Commissioner, taking the latter's place a few months afterwards, the staff of the Department of Agriculture directly concerned with agriculture apart from the Experimental Farms consisted of some 48 people, housed in two small office buildings, and with the expansion of the Department Mr. Spencer held several important positions under six Dominion and three Deputy Ministers.

From 1905 to 1910 Mr. Spencer devoted his attention to live stock problems, among the chief being the completion of arrangements for several of the record associations to be included in the nationalization scheme of the Canadian Love Stock Records, and the completion of the policy for Record of Performance of Pure-Bred Dairy Cattle. He was secretary and editor of the commission appointed to study the various phases of production, curing and marketing bacon in Denmark and the United Kingdom, and in the preparation of bulletins covering the sheep, beef, and swine industries. The reports and bulletins prepared by Mr. Spencer are still in constant reference.

Mr. Spencer's newspaper training from 1894 to 1905 on the staffs of the Farmer's Advocate and the Family Herald and Weekly Star, stood him in good stead, and in 1910 the wider field of agricultural publicity again claimed his attention when he was appointed editor to the newly organized Publications Branch of the Department of Agriculture. Three years later he was made Chief of the Branch, and when eventually all of the Department was effected, he was given the position of Director of Publicity for the Department.

Enterprise and Gibbards Battle for Championship

Each Win and Lose One Game

After taking the first game of the Lennox County championship series by 12-2, in Napanee, on Wednesday last, the Gibbard B's took a drubbing in Enterprise on Saturday to the tune of 8-6. This game was the first shutout suffered by a Gibbard team this year. The B's sewed Wednesday's game up in the first innings, when they counted 7 runs off five hits, an error, a walk, and a hit batsman. It did not seem to be Bell's day, and his support was no so good to make matters worse.

Spratt held the furniture men hitless until the fourth, when Fraser singled, and then two runners scored in the fifth on four hits and an error. Two more were pushed over in the sixth. Sweet secured a home run in the seventh, when E. Way was made an error, and this closed the scoring.

On the whole the B's played good ball on the day, although the infield was shaky. Vernon Bishop pitched well, but had to bear down several times in the pinches. Enterprise collected five hits during the game off Bishop, and Dicky Holland's pinch single in the fifth produced their only score, after D. Jackson had reached first on Stewart's error, and M. Jackson and Bell had hit safely. Kellar struck out, but Holland batting for Potter, hit safely to right field to score the two Jacksons. Wagar filed out to centre field to end the only Enterprise scoring threat.

The line-up was as follows :

Enterprise—D. Potter, r.f.; N. Wagar, 2b.; Spratt, s.s.; E. Wagar, c.; Miles, c.f.; D. Jackson, 3b.; M. Jackson, 1b.; Bell, p.; Kellar, 3b.

Gibbard B's—Sweet, r.f.; Stewart, c.; Lucas, 2b.; Bishop, p.; Johnston, c.f.; T. Bentley, l.f.; Switzer, 3b.; Fraser, 1b.; Stinson, c.

The following is the play by play account of the game :

Cash Relief System Will Be Adopted By Province of Ontario

Balanced Exports Trade, Aim of U. S.

Reciprocal Agreements to Repair Damage to Agriculture

Washington. — Balanced exports which will give a fair break to both farmer and manufacturer are forecast by Cabinet officers trying to rejuvenate the ailing world trade of the United States.

Secretaries Henry Wallace and Cordell Hull, of the Agriculture and State Departments, respectively, explained last night the purpose of reciprocal trade agreements to be negotiated with foreign countries.

They joined in saying that neither agricultural nor manufacturing would suffer.

Their statement explained that in the early stages of the United States economic development, international trade consisted mainly of the exchange of farm products for manufactured articles from other countries. The Great War brought a change. It expanded exports of manufactured products while continuing heavy agricultural exports.

The depression and the change of the United States from a debtor to a creditor nation caused relatively greater harm to agriculture than to industry. Farm exports decreased below manufactured exports, in value.

"It is to American farmers, therefore," the statement said, "that enough assistance will undoubtedly be given by the trade agreements to restore fully relatively fair treatment as between agriculture and industry."

Representatives of the American Farm Bureau Federation and other farm organizations recently expressed fear that concessions in tariff facts would injure particular agricultural interests. In that event, they said, they planned to assail the entire reciprocal tariff idea.

The formal statement issued by the Secretary of Agriculture was concurred in by Secretary of State Cordell Hull. It apparently set at rest any suspicion that American agricultural interests connected therewith might be made to aid industry.

Survey To Be Made By Municipalities

Toronto— Cash relief instead of the present voucher system may be established in some municipalities in Ontario, subject to the approval of the Department of Public Welfare, under the new unemployment relief scheme as announced by Hon. David Croll, Minister of Public Welfare.

The scheme calls for a general tightening up in the administration of relief and a warning is sounded that abuses will be harshly dealt with.

"Relief to workers, nothing to shirkers," is the slogan.

As the first step a re-registration and re-investigation of all recipients of relief will be undertaken. In the cities of Hamilton, Ottawa and Toronto, this will be completed by September 5, and the same procedure in other municipalities by September 1. Any municipality which has completed this to the satisfaction of the department, may get permission to give cash relief.

Cash relief will be given only to recipients who give work in exchange for it at prevailing rates of pay. The municipality will be required to provide the work.

Mr. Croll said that milk, bread and clothing would not be included in cash relief at the present time and his announcement also suggested a six-hour day for relief workers. As a measure to provide work "municipal beautification for the next three months" is suggested as a suitable scheme which would call for a minimum of expenditure for materials.

Where rent allowances are applied in municipal taxes, the municipality will make its own arrangements in regard to the cash and shelter allowance, the announcement continues.

The Governments new relief policy is to be followed until "such time as a comprehensive scheme including unemployment insurance and a national building program can be established by co-operation between the provinces and the Dominion," Mr. Croll said.

Municipalities Will Decide on Adopting System

Mr. Croll said, further : "It will be left to the municipal council to decide whether or not it wishes to have cash relief established. There is no compulsion on this phase of the new policy."

All unemployed persons, including the single, the married, the widow with children and those considered unemployable by common consent, will be eligible for relief in a municipality where cash relief is provided.

In places men at work the municipality must use care to see that they get work to which they are adapted. Mr. Croll stated. At first they must not be pushed too hard, as many are physically unfit through long idleness.

Eastern Locarno Project Blocked

German Refusal to Allow Passage to Troops, Main Obstacle

London.—Germany's refusal to sign a blank to permit allowing foreign troops to march through Germany territory in a future war, has become one of the gravest obstacles to the conclusion of the proposed seven-power Eastern European pact of mutual assistance, it may even prove to be the rock on which the pact scheme may collapse.

The project, it will be remembered, envisaged a defensive and reciprocal military alliance between Germany, Czechoslovakia, Poland, Latvia, Lithuania, Estonia and Russia, with France in the role of guarantor, and Britain and Italy entirely outside the pact system but its cordial well-wishers. Germany and Poland have hitherto declined to dance to the tune of the French and Russian pipers, and it is their unwillingness to join which has been blocking progress in the negotiations.

Area Equality First

Objections to foreign troop transports through Germany have now become one of the main "nots" of the principal source of Berlin's opposition to the pact. Germany has moreover, made clear that she must have equality of armaments before she is ready formally to subscribe adherence to the proposed septilateral agreement.

Assuming that the pact, as now envisaged, were operative, France would be obliged, for example, to rush military aid to Russia if she were attacked by Poland, or to Poland if she were invaded by the Soviet army. Similarly, say, if Germany committe dagression against Poland, the other pact partners would be constrained to help the victim of agression. There are many other similar situations which could arise within the pact family, in case one or more of its members grew bellicose. In such emergencies, the passage of foreign troops through one of the signatory countries would be essential.

To this contingency Germany emphatically cries, "No !" and advances

THE NEW RELIEF POLICY

The Department of Welfare, through its Minister, Hon. David A. Croll, has announced a change in policy in the matter of relief. Hitherto, all those who have been on relief have been paid in vouchers, for food and necessities. This system has certain advantages. It insures that the recipient will get the things he is expected to get and will not be able to waste the relief money on unessentials. On the other hand, it has not worked perfectly. There have been many complaints of favoritism in the placing of orders. Some stores have felt that they were not receiving their share of the relief orders. The officers who designated the stores have thus been subject to criticism.

On the other hand, it has not been satisfactory to the persons receiving relief. They have had no freedom in securing what was needed, and have not been able to shop nor take arvantage of bargains. In addition, the voucher system has been criticised, mostly, because it robs the person on relief of their self-respect.

Under the new regulations, the municipal council will have to decide whether it will continue to give vouchers or whether it will swing over to the cash relief system. If the Town Council adopts the cash system, then the new regulations become effective. Under these regulations men who are able to work will have to do so. They will get no relief unless they earn it: They will be paid at the current rate of labor in the town and must earn the money which is set aside for them.

We believe that our Town Council should adopt the cash system. Admitting that abuses will creep in, yet the advantages, to the persons receiving relief, will more than offset these. They will have to work, and that, in itself, is of inestimable value. When men work and earn, they can hold their heads up. They have no feeling that they are being pauperized. They will retain a sense of independence.

Then, too, the community will reap the advantage of their labor. There are many projects in the town in which men can be employed. The Tourist Park could be made more attractive. The land adjoining the river at the point above the falls, where the young folk go in swimming, could be made more presentable. There is no reason why a few municipal houses might not be either purchased or built. There are a number of houses in Napanee which, in their present state, are inhabitable. The town might purchase them for next to nothing; then the relief labor could be used to put them in shape for families of moderate means. The rent could be made low enough simply to cover taxes and upkeep.

Before the cold weather sets in, it would be well if the Council, with others whom they might consult, would conduct a thorough survey of the town's needs; so that when the time comes, the men available for relief work will be given something more interesting and more constructive to do, than breaking stones.

HON. J. R. COOKE

Just a few weeks after relinquishing his his office as Chairman of the Ontario Hydro Commission, Hon. J. R. Cooke has passed away. His death was due to injuries received in a motor accident, Friday last. He was driving alone when he turned out to avoid hitting a rabbit. The car swerved and hit a bridge. He was badly hurt and bruised. The shock caused a heart attack, from which he failed to recover.

Mr. Cooke was a splendid example of one who by devotion to duty, by hard work and loyalty to his party, rose to a position of great influence in the Province. Not even his closest friends would have claimed for him outstanding qualities of leadership or of intellect. He had a quiet, reticent manner, which was often misunderstood. But he had other qualities, diligence, studiousness, and patience in the master yof details, which made him a valuable member to his Party and to the Province. He came to the Hydro Board with a detailed knowledge of all its ramifications. The period of expansion and development was largely passed. The depression found the Hydro with a new set of problems, that of coping with a surplus of power in the face of deminishing markets. Mr. Cooke had to bear the brunt of the criticism levelled at conditions for which he was not responsible.

— Unfortunately, Mr. Cooke goes out at a time when the party he served so faithfully and so well is in a state of temporary eclipse.

— Mr. Cooke, as a public servant of thirty years' standing, will be remembered as one who by patience and devotion to duty and by hard painstaking toil, reached an enviable and influential position in the life of our Province.

ONE WAY TRAFFIC

During the past two years the Roosevelt Administration has been pumping money into business of one sort and another, until the amount now spent has gone into the hundreds of millions. By means of various commissions and agencies, great projects have been undertaken, and public ownership schemes fostered and developed. There is no discounting the value which this has been to the whole business of the United States. It has given work to millions of men, and put money in circulation, at a time when money was scarce as hen's teeth.

Now, however, after two years of experiment, it is quite evident to even a superficial observer, that the process of pumping money into the life's stream of the American body politic cannot go on indefinitely. For the simple reason is, that the traffic is all one way. Under the prevailing financial structure of the modern world, the money, once it is placed in circulation, naturally gravitates towards the great institutions of wealth. The result in the States, is that the money which Roosevelt has been pouring out has now found its way to the banks and the great institutions of wealth until they are glutted with it. One bank, recently advertised that it had so much money on deposit that henceforth it would pay no interest. The amount of interest now paid on short-term loans is almost negligible, and Canada has recently found it can borrow much more cheaply in the States than it can from her own banks.

Faced with a shortage of money in circulation and the vast accumulations in the banking institutions, Roosevelt has been working for new sources of currency. Rather than embark on a policy of inflation, he has seized all the silver in the nation, against which he will proceed to issue more bills. These, in turn, will be put in circulation, and in due time will get stalled in the banks, adding to their already overstuffed vaults.

This cannot go on forever. Sooner or later some way must be found to develop a two-way traffic system for dollar bills. The mistake which the Roosevelt Administration made came early in the day. When the banking holiday was declared in the States, the time was ripe for decisive action. The Government should at that time, have taken over all banks and banking institutions. They would then have been in a position to open the channels and free the nation's credit and wealth. No satisfactory solution for our financial problem will ever be discovered on the basis of a one-way traffic. Roosevelt can keep on pumping new money into business, but unless that money can be kept in circulation, the end of the ambitious reconstruction schemes in the United States, is not far distant.

DICTATORS AND DEMOCRACY

The situation which has emerged in Germany since the death of Hindenburg, has given rise to considerable discussion with respect to the recent growth of dictatorships. Hitler, who with indecent haste, made himself supreme head of the state, is to seek at the polls, support of his actions—no other candidate will be in the field. It is a question of supporting Hitler or voting against him. The result is assured. Hitler will get the vote he seeks.

Hitler will get the vote, not because he has solved the German problem; not because he has eliminated poverty or improved the social and economic condition of the voters—he will get the vote because, in a time of unrest and anarchy such as that through which Germany is passing, the people would rather support a dictator than trust their country to the slower methods of parliamentary prodecure.

The fact which must be remembered in trying to account for Hitler and the other dictators in Europe, is that they are the result and not the cause of conditions as they are. Had it not been Hitler it would have been some other dictator, because of the disturbance and unrest, and anarchy. Of course, the cure for the whole European malady, is not in dictatorship, but in removing the conditions which have made dictators inevitable. What are those conditions? There is tariffs, debts, economic nationalism and the mismanagement of international affairs, which have so greatly upset the whole business of the world. In this general melee, dictatorships flourish.

That Hitler is seeking confirmation at the polls, is not without its significance. No modern dictator would dare assume power and authority without public support. They at least protest that they hold office by the will of the people. This is, at least, some advance over the dictatorships of the past, and holds out prospects for a return to democratic governments, when the extreme strain of the present is removed.

It is not to be supposed that this new form of government will permanently supercede democracy as we have known it. The present situation is only a historical incident in the great transition from one form of economic organization to another. When that gap has been bridged and the transition made, we shall witness a return to a saner policy of democratic government than we have yet known.

Here and there we hear a desire expressed for a dictator—a strong man—in our own country. What is needed, rather, is a combination of nations who still believe in democracy, who, in their united effort, will work for peace and for the elimination of the anarchy which prepared the soil for the present crop of dictators.

Editorial Comment

CANADA—A NATION OF PEASANTS ?

Given cheap land, near cheap transportation, Canada still offers to the settler with a moderate capital opportunities of an attractive kind, for the man is free, and if there is much hard work, it remains true that deep down in the blood of most men there is that land hunger whose appeasement spells happiness and a sense of self-fulfilment. And this is rather often overlooked— the man who turns the soil and succeeds, emancipates himself largely from the chances of world economic conditions. And there are vast tracks of land in the province where a man can become, if not entirely, almost self-supporting. It may be considered that the way of Canadian prosperity here diffidently advanced suggests a nation of peasant proprietors, rather than an advancing industrial country. It does. In the end the great Dominion may find in the simple way of life of the old habitant of Quebec, the solution of her economic and financial difficulties; it is even possible that she may learn from the humble Doukhobor, from the man in the sheepskin coat with the big, bread wife," to use the words of Sir Clifford Sifton, and that, whether this man hail from Kent or the Ukraine, he is of more value to Canada than any other element in the population.—George Godwin, in The Fortnightly (London.)

PRESIDENT HITLER

The taking of the presidency of the Reich by Hitler is not an event, however, at which one should be unduly alarmed. Hitler, it must not be forgotten, has evolved considerably since his accession to the Chancellorship. It is sufficient to observe what is happening in Germany for the past year, to realise that the acts of the man in power are no longer those foreshadowed by his former speeches. His savage repression of a few weeks ago was essentially reactionary against the extremist elements of his party. Hence, we do not believe that the succession of Hitler to the seat of Hindenburg constitutes any real danger for the moment.—La Patrie, Montreal.

ENGLAND AND GERMANY

From the viewpoint of defence of the British Isles, the true British frontier is the Rhine. Stanley Baldwin himself told the English people to realise the exactitude of this lesson in military geography. The sum of Britain's defence deduction is inevitable. Belgium and France therefore protect the territorial integrity of England. In consequence England has every interest in guaranteeing the neutrality of Belgium and France. Treaties recognise explicitly this British obligation toward Belgium. As for France, politics probably have up to now prevented London from admitting it, other than implicitly. Perhaps it is time, from the practical point of view, that it should be so. With democratic policy the precautions have often to be taken. Without any defensive alliance, it is easy for Britain and France to convince their electors of the necessity of preparing and organizing the best fit to meet the eventualities which are to be feared with a quarrelsome Germany in the neighborhood.—Le Canada, Quebec.

NO RECIPROCITY

At the capital, according to an Ottawa newspaper, there has been much surprise that Washington has placed Canada in the category of nations with which it is not opportune to open commercial negotiations. The Americans do not think it possible to count on the goodwill of the Canadian Government. Washington is waiting for Canada clearly to indicate that she is willing to bargain reciprocity. For years there has been no other question, in government circles and among those who support our Federal administration, than of protectionism, of tariffs against tariffs, and of the necessity of protecting Canadian industry. For four years we have done nothing else but break with the United States and to direct our trade toward the Empire countries. It is natural that this superstition has given fine results, justifying its continuance. Can you expect your Americans to think in face of this governmental optimism ? They will not. No, the Americans, which normally cannot accomplish anything.—Le Soleil, Quebec.

REMEMBER BELGIUM

The pact to protect Belgium was based on one of the chief guarantors. Britain, France and Russia found themselves defending their own interests when they came to the actual partners to it. That is the not uncommon experience with Pacts. For instance, the pact created the pledge to defend Belgium. He stated in the House of Commons that the independence of Belgium was more vital to us now than ever before. Make no mistake. That document in the Record Office has been brought up-to-date. It is your death warrant.—London Daily Express.

MURDER FOR POLITICS

There has been nothing for centuries like the vogue of political assassination which threatens, if it does not destroy, the humane basis of civilisation of a continent. The ordinary decencies of public life, the confidence that this supremacy has given to all animals, the bonds of family relationship—all these are being swept away by political desperadoes who respect no laws and who have outraged the fundamentations of humanity, but who choose to consider that their own particular [illegible] should be achieved by any methods, however barborous or inhuman.—London Times.

Canadian and international model airplane competitions will be a novel feature of the Canadian National Exhibition this year. The sustained flights of these little scale model "ships" are remarkable. Canadian boys recently distinguished themselves at the United States national model competitions at Akron, Ohio.

Weekly Newspapermen To Meet

Montreal— Editors of weekly newspapers from all parts of Canada will visit Montreal this month to attend the 15th annual convention of the Canadian Weekly Newspaper Association, Thursday, September 6th to Saturday, September 8th, and includes two days of business sessions and on the third and final day a cruise aboard the Canadian Steamship Lines Segueniay steamer "Quebec."

The convention cruise, consisting of a trip around Montreal Harbor and a short cruise down the St. Lawrence, is one of the highlights of the meeting. Montreal, an ocean port, situated 1000 miles from the sea, is unique in the shipping world. Its harbor is one of the busiest on this continent and it is visited, each year, by ships from ever corner of the globe.

The down-river trip is also a fascinating one. Montreal, every evening during the summer months the Saguenay cruise ships sail for Quebec. Murray Bay and the Saguenay River and the editorial voyage will take editors on the first lap of this famous holiday cruise. Leaving Montreal shortly before noon, editors will have luncheon on board ship and spend the afternoon cruising the St. Lawrence.

Other features of the convention include a visit to "My Mother's Home," as the guests of Lord Atholstan, founder and owner of the Montreal Star; a luncheon address by Premier Taschereau of Quebec and the annual dance in a Montreal hotel.

Mayor Houde will officially welcome the editors to the city.

MUNICIPAL FINANCE

The majority of municipalities have carried out real economies and have in consequence shown an improved financial situation. Others have not done as much as they could and should. It is up to them to lose no time in following the example of their wiser sister municipalities. Policies of retrenchment and strong administration are and must be for a long time to come the order of the day for Canadian municipalities. There lies their salvation.—La Presse, Montreal.

THE SHIRT COMPLEX

Lord Baden - Powell, the Chief Scout, intends to visit Scandinavia this summer, but was enformed that, if he did so he would not be allowed to wear the Scouts' shirt in Denmark. Shirts that are a recognized form of uniform for the Fascist and Nazi model are in bad odour with the Danes; they have been banned in advance, and the Danish Minister of Justice regrets that he cannot relax the ban in favour of our Chief Scout and his accompanying Scoutmasters. Sweden has also passed a similar law against the wearing of "political uniforms" and, after the "shirt" disturbances in Munich, who can wonder ?

The fact is that the English slang adjective of "shirty," which means ill-tempered and has done so since at least the middle of the present century, is beginning to enjoy a European significance. And on the Continent, "shirty" would mean not much ill-tempered as rabid and ill-conditioned; it would denote the furious frames of mind into which both wearers and opponents of those items in part are liable to be thrown by their public display. Intent upon arresting the rot at its source, the wise Scandinavian authorities frown upon the high-flown haberdashery. And who shall say that they are wrong, even if it does involve the appearance of the Chief Scout in the casual role of an ill-clad tramp ? "In medio tutissimus ibis" — which means to say, there is safety in the mean. And even though people do want to discard them in warm weather.—Miscellany.

INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON, AUGUST 19TH, 1934

AMOS 6 : 1-7; 11-14

"AMOS DENOUNCES SELF-INDULGENCE"

The Book of Amos, as we have seen, presents a vivid picture of the social conditions in Israel during the reign of Jeroboam the Second, about 750 B.C. On the one hand there was an era of unbounded prosperity. Wealth flowed freely, and those who had it lived in riotous luxury and extravagance. On the other hand he pictures the moral deterioration which comes from the continuance of unbroken prosperity. The affluence of the wealthy was not secured by their own prowess and labor, but was wrung by oppression and injustice from the workers on the soil. The Book of Amos is full of indignation at the heartless aristocracy who crushed the poor, sold people into slavery for debt, and perverted justice to favor the judges.

For the first time in Holy Writ, a preacher dares to assert that God is a righteous and just God and will not forever tolerate the injustice and unrighteousness which have marked the life of the nation.

In last week's lesson, Amos uttered a stern denunciation against those who most zealous in their religious observances, neglected the acts of ordinary justice towards their neighbors. Today, he turns the power of his invective directly against the rich. Rich places, the leaders and directors of the nation's destiny. These men are so immersed in a life of luxury and self-indulgence, that they are neglecting the welfare of those over whom they have been placed. This blinds them to the doom which is bound to descend upon the nation. The doom, as the prophet sees it, is the invasion of their country by a foreign foe. With all their boasted strength and prosperity, they will be powerless to save themselves and their country against the attack of the foreigner who is about to descend on them. So weakened have they become by the violation of the laws of justice and righteousness, that they have already sealed their nation's fate.

In verses one to six, Amos describes the conditions under which the leaders live. They have been entrusted with the direction of the nation's life, but live in such luxury and extravagance that they are oblivious to the unsound condition at the heart of the body politic. They are at ease in Zion. They trust the natural defenses of the capital to save them from attack. They boast themselves the chief of the nations, and believe that their God, who has been showing them such goodness in continued prosperity, will protect them from any ill. Compared with other places they had fared infinitely better. Look at Calneh and Hamath in the north, and at Gath in the south. From one end of the country to the other, none had been visited with the blessed gift with prosperity. And what, asks the prophet of the leaders, have you returned to God for all his goodness to you ? You lie on beds of ivory, that is, beds whose frames were inlaid with costly ivory; you stretch yourselves on couches. The older custom was to sit while at meals, reclining was a foreign introduction, and at first was looked upon as a mark of effeminacy and luxury. You eat the lambs out of the flock—that is they take the special delicacies for themselves, and even playing all sorts of new musical entertainments; and not satisfied with the ordinary cup they drink it from bowls. Dissatisfied with the ordinary olive oil for annointing themselves, the people of Israel use costly spices and perfumes. While taken up with these extravagances they are blind to the afflictions of Joseph. They are not able to see that beneath all the external prosperity the nation is sick — immersed in splendor they cannot see that anything is wrong.

Verses seven to ten describe the awful conditions which will accompany a siege, which the prophet believes is bound to come.

The lesson resumes at verses eleven to fourteen. In this section, Amos describes the sinful inclusive power of God's activity. In the moral as in the physical realm, there is operative the law of cause and effect. No one will be powerful enough to avert the calamity which is the direct result of his wrong-doing, might just as well expect to see horses climbing mountains and oxen plowing at the ocean, as to avert the disaster which is the result of their own neglect and extravagance.

This all sounds very modern. We have just come through a period of unparalleled prosperity which, in our blindness, men thought would last forever. Those in the preferred class have, for years, assumed that the position of society was sound and no harm could come to it. But the period of depression has made us realize anew that neglect of the moral sanctions of life, disregard for the poor and the needy, injustice and unrighteousness are bound to bring irretrievable ruin and disaster in their train.

SUMMARY OF NEW REGULATIONS AND LAWS AFFECTNG AGRICULTURE

PASSED AT 1934 SESSION OF PARLIAMENT

Among the many new laws and regulations written into the Statutes of Canada by the Dominion Parliament during the session, which prorogued early in July, there were eight bills affecting agriculture the most important of these was Bill 51 popularly known as The Marketing Bill, officially described as "An Act to improve the methods and practices of marketing of natural products in Canada and in export trade, and to make further provision in connection therewith."

The other bills were :—
Bill 36—An Act Respecting Fruit and Honey.
Bill 38—An Act Respecting the Dairy Industry.
Bill 39—An Act to Amend the Destructive Insect and Pest Act.
Bill 40—An Act to Amend the Live Stock Products Act.
Bill 53—An Act to Amend the Canadian Grain Act.
Bill 92—An Act to Facilitate Compositions and Arrangements between Farmers and Creditors.
Bill 93—An Act to Amend the Canadian Farm Loan Act.

NOTE: "The Beaver will give a synopsis of these Bills on successive weeks. We begin this week with a summary of Bill 51.

BILL 51 — THE MARKETING BILL
What are the principle features of these eight parliamentary enactments ? The Marketing Bill being "An Act to improve the methods and practices of marketing of natural products of Canada and in export trade and to make further provision in connection therewith" implies that the methods followed in marketing are not satisfactory and that considerable practices obtain. The Act is, therefore, intended to provide legislation by means of which these methods and practices can be changed.

The legislation provides what may be called permissive powers which may, or may not be, exercised. Until they are exercised, the provisions of the Act do not become effective as law. These powers are centred in the Governor-in-Council, the Minister administering the Act, a Dominion Marketing Board, and local boards which may be created under the Act. All powers may be granted by Order-in-Council under the Act for the administration of marketing schemes will be vested in the Dominion Board. These powers, in turn, may be delegated to a local board, and the local board will become the administrative body under the general supervision of the Dominion Board.

Thus, the local boards, under the supervision of the Dominion Board, will enable those who produce and market natural products to constitute control machinery of their own through which they may regulate the movement, direct the sale, without power of buying and selling or of fixing prices, and to determine the conditions that shall prevail in the marketing of such products. It may deal directly with only a part of the product or with all of it. The local board may direct shipments in any quantity, through any agency, to any market at any time, or it may withhold them, and this direction may have reference to different quality or grades of the product. The local board may also regulate distribution and shipping practices, such as methods of sale, consignment, etc. Powers of exemption may be delegated to the local boards, also powers of conducting a pool for the equalization of returns concerned from the sale of the regulated product; and also powers to compensate any person for his withholding from sale, by order of the board, any regulated product from the market, or throughf forwarding any regulated product to a specified market, pursuant to any order of the board. Compensation may also be granted for loss due to depreciation of the currency of the country to which shipments were sent by order of the board. The local board may also be delegated to inspect any fruit or fruit containers, or operation of facilities for preserving, processing, storing or conditioning the regulated product, and to assist research work relating to the marketing of such product.

Where local boards do not exist, or in cases of emergency, provision has been made for regulating the marketing in inter-provincial or export trade by the Dominion Marketing Board. Another important point is the provision under Order -in-Council for the licensing of dealers in trade to regulate or restrict importation into Canada of any product which enters into competition with a regulated Canadian product. Power is always given in the Act to prosecute persons guilty of injuring the trade or commerce of the regulated product. This provision is made in the interests of producers, marketers and consumers alike. For the purposes of administration, for instance, the dissemination of information, all persons engaged in production and marketing are required to register with the board, or, for purposes of giving effect to regulation plans to obtain a license from the board.

Sir Allen Aylesworth At Aylesworth Picnic

Reunion of Aylesworth Family Held at Bath

The Aylesworth family held a family reunion in Bath on Saturday, more than a hundred of the connection were present. Many of those present came from distant points in Canada and the United States.

The meeting was held in the Masonic Hall and the chief speaker was Sir Allen Aylesworth, who gave an interesting and instructive address on the Aylesworth family and the history of the district in which they originated.

Fraser Aylesworth, of Madoc, Ont., read greetings from relatives who could not attend and spoke of the first members of the family who settled in the district—Boward Aylesworth and Hannah Perry, who were married in 1797 in the old Langhorn residence, which still stands today. It is an historic landmark, he said, being one of the first houses built in Bath.

George Aylesworth, brother of Sir Allen, presided over the gathering which represented relatives from various points in the United States and in Ontario.

A RUBBER SPONGE Its Domestic Uses

When cleaning paint, the sponge will be found more effective than a flannel for the final rinsing in clear water, as it goes readily into the crevices of the mouldings and brings away all impurities. For cleaning down the walls a dry rubber sponge is excellent. It acts on the principle of india-rubber, rolling off the dirt into tiny crumbs and rubbing it away to some extent at the same time. Certain types of distemper react equally well to this form of cleaning, but it is advisable to experiment on a small and inconspicuous surface before engaging on anything more noticeable.

When hardwood mloors have become darkened with repeated applications of polish they should be given a bath of turpentine, using a rubber sponge instead of cloth, for a sponge is more economical in that it retains the sponge into a weak solution of permanganate of potash and pass this over the woodwork and into the crevices, gathering up the dust and disinfecting at the same time. The sponge will reach parts where a cloth will not always fit in.

The work of cleaning windows, mirrors and pictures will be much simplified if they are treated with methylated spirits or methylated spirits and paraffin before the final polish. The amount of spirit needed is so small that a sponge once soaked will suffice for all the glass of this description in the house. Upholstery will be cleaned and brightened if a sponge which has been moistened with a weak solution of ammonia and water is applied gently.

Cold draughts of air in gardens are often responsible for the backward growth of flowers and plants.

Allenby, Still Weak, Starts Trip for Home

Says Reunion in Toronto Was Typically Canadian

Toronto.—Field Marshal Viscount and Lady Allenby left Toronto on Thursday last, on their way back to England, after attending the Canadian Corps reunion. Although still slightly weakened by his recent illness, he appeared in good health.

In an official farewell to the citizens of Toronto, Viscount Allenby said: "The Canadian Corps reunion produced a spectacle which, I felt sure, could not have its equal anywhere in the world but on Canadian soil."

London Paper Doubts If Naval Conference Will Even Meet

Suggests "Gentlemen's Agreement" On Navies

London. — Doubt that the Naval Conference may even meet was expressed by the Daily Herald, London, Eng., in noting the extent of the difficulties besetting the early conversations.

The newspaper accordingly proposes that the five great powers be permitted to build up to their full needs, with a "gentlemen's agreement" to guarantee that no actual increase will be undertaken for a period covered by the agreement, over maximum tonnages permitted now.

"Prospects for a truly major accord are blacker now than before," the paper says. "Japan says that the ratio allotted her is incompatible with her dignity. Germany accordingly the world to that thesis and one cannot deny that the two countries are justified in demanding this right while the world persists in an armament race.

"It is unfortunate that no nation can assure its defence without precipitating an armament race," the newspaper concludes.

HARVESTED APPLES ARE ALIVE

When an apple is picked, it is a living thing and there are constant and gradual changes going on throughout its storage life. The speed of these changes is largely governed by the temperature and humidity at which the fruit is stored. A freshly harvested apple contains sugars and starch among othe rthings. The starch is converted to sugars first sometimes to a reducing sugar and sometimes part of it is changed to sucrose or cane sugar. Then the sucrose is gradually used up and turned into reducing sugars and acid. When the starch and sucrose have practically disappeared the apple begins to lose its quality and becomes what is ordinarily called "over ripe." The length of time taken by these changes varies in different varieties. It is a varietal characteristic, not solely related to the actual amount of these materials in the fruit, for there are several fall varieties which have higher sugar content than many winter varieties. However, it has been found in the laboratories of the Dominion Department of Agriculture, that, all other things being equal, the fruit with the highest total sugar content has the best keeping quality of the samples of that variety.

BASEBALL NEWS

By G.E.GIBBARD.

At press time, complete arrangements have not been made for the play-off for the Lennox County championship between Enterprise and Gibbard B's, but it looks, however, as though the game will be played on Gibbard park either on Yarker or Odessa diamond. Bills will be posted, giving the time and place, in plenty of time.

The Gibbard A's go to Picton for the second game on Wednesday, the game being scheduled for three o'clock, slow time.

The original draw for the Ontario baseball playdowns in both Intermediate sections, has been changed. Who the winner of the Lennox County and Hastings C. of Quinte will meet in the first round has not been definitely decided. However, since the Lennox band does not start until August 25th, next weeks paper should carry full particulars.

RASPBERRY PLANTING

During the month of September, or even as late as Mid-October, raspberry canes may be planted with as much success as in the early spring, but the canes have budded out. The distance at which the rows and plants are to be set depends largely upon the type of training to be followed, says the Dominion Horticulturist. In Eastern Canada, two systems are in general use, the hill system and the hedge-row. In the hill system, the plants are set, at least, four by four feet apart, which permits, with care, the use of a single horse cultivator either way. Wher eland is cheaper and labour higher, the distance may be increased to seven by seven feet, permitting the use of a double cultivator and eliminating much hand hoeing. If the hedge row system is adopted, the canes may be placed six feet apar, or wider, and the plant set three feet apart in the row. If the plants are checked in rows so that they all come opposite, a single horse cultivator may be used the first season and thus cut down maintenance costs by a considerable amount. Like West, some growers prefer the linear system ,which is in reality a modified hedge-row. It consists of rows of canes six to eight feet apart, with plants set two to three feet apart, and from which no suckers are permitted to grow. Cultivation is practised only one way.

Faith in Strength of Empire Shown In Recent Speech

Faith in the ability of the British Empire to weather the present world crisis, despite great political changes in its forms of government was expressed by W. M. Birks, senior governor of McGill University, who recently addressed the Canadian group for clergymen and other Christian workers, at Macdonald College.

"Empires have rarely been built, Birks declared, "No man who visits the Motherland annually, as I have done for half a century, but realizes how the condition of the masses has greatly improved—their children better clothed, better shod, better nourished, and better schooled.

"The worker has retained most of what he gained during the War; but against this there is unemployment—serious in certain districts, creating the sense of insecurity—and the Motherland leads the world in its efforts to lift this load off the working class home.

"A newspaperman, the other day, blazoned the fact, which he said was after investigation, that 6,000,000 people in the United Kingdom were on the verge of hunger; but in 1904, a normal year, the Campbell Bannerman told the country on the authority of "Charles Booth that 12,000,000 were in the hunger line.

Free Land

"Look where you will over this deserted world and you will find no land you will find no land where thought and action are so free, where courts of law and the Government are so incorruptible, where there is less class hatred or where more money is spent and more pains taken to deal with suffering andmisfortune.

"Under the ancient monarchy and parliament, Britain has so far proved herself able to come through the fiercest storms of war and peace that have ever beaten upon mankind."

Touching on the conflicting tendencies between internationalism on the one hand the spirit of nationalism on the other, the speaker said room for both. "We covet for our sons," he said, "the international mind. We wish them to grow up to be gentlemen of the world.

"Ultra-nationalism is the curse of the world today. Jealous, exclusive, selfish, nationalism, sometimes called man's other religion. No one can understand the nationalism of the Orient till he detects in it the marks of a religion.

"On the other hand, while we desire to cultivate the international mind, we abhor the cosmopolitanism, and protect the spirit of the man who remains human as a profane and unworthy instinct, who prides himself on his detachment from the traditions of his race."

Great Changes

Great changes have occurred in the form of government among various nations within the last decade or so, he pointed out. "Prof. Alfred Zimmern of Oxford begins his new book, entitled "The Third British Empire," by reminding us that among the seven sovereign states of the world, in 1914, was a British Empire, a German Empire, a Russian Empire, a Turkish Empire and an Austro-Hungarian Empire.

"Today there is but a British Empire, and the British Empire only; and he asks why ?

"Because," he says, "it has in it a principle of vitality which the other Empires lacked, and that principle of vitality, that seed of continuing life, is the spirit of liberty.

"The British Empire lives today because its institutions are free institutions. It survives as only of the world's guardians of liberty and fair play, with a hatred of revolution, but a welcome to evolution.

"The British Empire of today is not the British Empire of 1914. It is something new, new, neither the outside world, no reven its own citizens have yet adequately realized. Today, complete political autonomy is of the very genius of Empire.

"Dean Inge expresses somewhat the same idea when he says, 'The Commonwealth of Self-Governing Nations, which is the British Empire in name, the British Empire, is one of the two grandly successful political experiments of modern times.'

"The other is the United States, but the Empire, as we know it, is a much more recent thing." And he adds, "The political philosopher can find nothing of equal importance since the Mediterranean Empire of the Caesars."

Claims to Have Photos of Loch Ness Monster

London. — The Loch Ness monster is in the limelight again. Emerging from temporary eclipse which some authorities declared the so-called monster to be nothing more than a small whale that had strayed in that way into the lake, it has splashed its way back into the headlines of metropolitan newspapers.

As a rebuff to the sceptics, Sir Edward Mountain, wealthy British financier, declared that he has positive proof of the monster's existence in Loch Ness. He claims that he has seen 21 times during the past four weeks and that he has photographs to prove it.

Sir Edward recently organized a team of motor launches which, equipped with cameras, constantly patrolled the lake in search of the elusive marine monster. He declares their vigilance was rewarded with success and that several pictures were obtained.

Several London papers reproduced photos, said to be of the monster, one of which showed the wash it left in crossing the lake.

Search for further proof will be continued for another week, Sir Edward declared, and members of the team will be supplied with more powerful cameras allowing the success of those in present use.

No Nudist Colony Known in Canada

At the numerous summer tourist Bureaux in Ontario they will tell you that within the vast stretches of the province there is every attraction one could wish for, but there's one thing you won't find. Ontario has no nudist colony.

A settlement was planned for Iroquois Island, among the Thousand Islands, where one was going to be able to appear more daring than pictures portray even Adam and Eve. This, however, has failed to materialize, and from sentiment manifest along that section of the Canadian border, the New York promoters will encounter many obstacles in attempting to carry out their project, next year.

However, the town of Brockville in the heart of the Thousand Islands district, appears to be about the most legally tolerant in regard to nude bathing. Municipal by-laws demand wearing of a "proper and sufficient bathing dress." But this is only required between the hours of 6 a.m. and 10 p.m., apparently leaving the dress at other hours to one's discretion.

No Official Complaints

However, there are no official complaints of nude bathing or "indecent exposure" within the city limits, though often reports are heard of nude bathing along the St. Lawrence outside the town.

Most of the by-laws covering bathing attire, are of early legislation and in many cases, obsolete, leaving the entire matter to the discretion of police. The wearing of "shorts" by men, is banned on some beaches, while on others swimmers are prohibited from leaving the designated bathing areas.

Stratford, Kitchener, Windsor, Brantford, Guelph, Galt, all leave the matter of trunk lengths generally speaking, to police discretion. Stratford prohibits Sunday bathing "in the river," but a new swimming pool is being well patronized seven days a week.

EIGHT-DAY CLOCK TICKS THREE MONTHS AFTER DEATH OF OWNER

Sandwich, Ontario, firemen have a mystery. They are trying to learn what has kept an eight-day clock ticking for three months since the death of the woman who wound it for years.

The phenomenon was discovered when firemen were called to do what was known for years, in stage coach days, as the "cottage inn," but which latterly has been a residence. They were startled to hear the clock ticking away.

Mrs. Charles Clark, last occupant of the place, died three months ago and the property came into possession of the town. Since then it has been vacant with only the clock and a few pieces of furniture in it.

The fire did only slight damage.

Rich in Historical Data on Kingston City

Kingston, Ont. — Born in Kingston in 1842, when this city was the capital of the united provinces of Canada, Thomas Smeaton, who from personal experience, has a wealth of historical information, was 92 years of age on Saturday last.

Mr. Smeaton who tripped, reeptly, and was sent to hospital from shock as a result of the fall, misses his constant walks about the city. Before the accident he was quite spry and went alone, everywhere. Last December he journeyed by train to Ann Arbor, Mich., to visit his brother, who is four years older and in fine health.

He recalls accompanying his father, when he was four years old, to see the building of the Nursery Martello tower, a block away from his home. This tower was one of the defences of Kingston constructed by British engineers in 1846. He recounts how he earned four pennies when a lad by raking up some of the litter of stone chips near the redoubt.

This Martello tower became the museum of the Kingston Historical Society, August 1, 1925, and Mr. Smeaton was appointed curator. He occupied that position for six years when the weight of years compelled his resignation.

The keeping of livestock is one of the oldest occupations of civilized man. It represented the wealth of all the nomadic tribes and peoples, and the principal reason why those people were nomadic arose from the necessity of constant movement in order to provide grass and water for their flocks and herds.

African sleeping sickness in man and lietar fly disease of livestock are caused by a parasite of anteloupes which causes no disease whatever in these animals.

The Uses of Honey

Canadian Honey in British Cough Mixtures, Chocolates, and Restaurants

In view of the increasing favour of Canadian honey in the markets of the world, particularly in Great Britain, it is interesting to remember that the demand for honey is not confined to private consumption, but extends to various manufacturing trades, such as confectioners, bakers chemists, and the catering trade Valuable information in this regard has been assembled by the late Empire Marketing Board, which points out that the two most well pharmaceutical preparations containing honey are cervmel of cauill an important constituent of many cough mixtures, and honey botax. The honey in both these preparations in Enqnire countries conforms to the specifications of the British Pharmacopoeia, and is known as "purified honey." Honey is also widely used in the manufacture of proprietary cough mixtures, balsams and lung tonics. In addition to the employment of honey in the above preparations, one British chemist stated that a small quantity was used by him in the preparation of toothpaste. Of 16 leading manufacturing chemists in the United Kingdom, ten were using honey in quantities ranging from half a ton up to 100 tons per year for the above purposes, of course, showing its due proportion among the world imports.

In the confectionary trade, the products in which honey most commonly occurs are chocolate and nougat, but it is also employed in the manufacture of toffee, marzipan sweets, Turkish delight, caramels, crystallized gums, creams, and pastilles. In chocolates, honey is chiefly used to form centres. A recent development, it is mainly used as flavouring, though it is also said to impart a certain richness to the texture of the various candies. Bakers and biscuit makers use honey in a limited extent in making cakes, biscuits, rusks, and gingerbread, mainly as a flavouring Dark honey is used for colouring certain kinds of biscuit, while honey is said to have a preservative effect in cakes and gingerbread, maintaining in the product a palatable moisture. During the last few years the British and European restaurants honey has been increasingly included in the menus, being served in midget containers or sometimes loose in portions. Restaurants which maintain a counter trade find the ease and cleanliness of honey over the counter is stimulated by the service of honey in comb. Last year, 2,213,999 pounds of Canadian honey was exported to the British market.

One of the most important influences in the volume of cheese produced per hundred pounds of milk is the butter fat content of the milk.

Millipedes in small gardens may be reduced in numbers by dipping slices of potatoes in a strong solution of Paris green and water, or by dusting the potatoes with Paris green and leaving them in the soil near the injured plants.

SECOND GAME

At Enterprise, on Saturday, the B's collected only two hits off Spratt, which came during their only scoring threat in the eighth. Switzer doubled with two down and Fraser singled, but Switzer was caught trying to go to third on the play. Enterprise scored one in the second on two hits and an infield out. They added two more in the third when the "B" infield blew, and from then on the game was over. The B's could not get to pull themselves together and Enterprise got better as the game went on. Spratt went the route for Enterprise. His support was good all the way through. Harvey Card batted for the B's, but was relieved by Doug. Fraser in the fourth. Enterprise only scored three runs off Card, but any one of the three would have won the game. At that, Enterprise only collected six hits—errors contributing in no small way to the large score. Miles was the only one on the Enterprise club to collect more than one, getting two out of four trips to the plate. G. Wagar, Holland, D. Jackson and N. Wagar each hit safely once.

The batting order on Saturday was as follows:

Gibbard B's—Sweet, rf.; Stewart, c.; Lucas, 3b.; Bishop, lf.; Stinson, ss.; Johnston, c.f.; Card, p.; Switzer, 1b.; Fraser, 1b.

Enterprise—Potter, r.f.; G. Wagar, c.f.; Spratt, p.; E. Wagar, c.; Holland, lf.; Miles, s.s.; Kellar, 3b.; D. Jackson, 1b.; N. Wagar, 2b.

The score:

Gibbard B's	000 000 000—	0	2	10
Enterprise	012 320 00x—	8	6	2

Umpires—R. Loucks at the plate, and T. Warner on the bases.

Franco-Germanic Alliance Hinted in Diplomatic Circles

Paris — A definite campaign for Franco-German rapprochement and, perhaps, even a military alliance, was regarded as well under way by diplomatic observers, recently.

It was believed there is now a great possibility that a recent commercial agreement will be followed by a far-reaching political truce. French and German statesmen may exchange visits, it was learned, after the signing of the pact.

With the easing of the Viennese situation, it is presumed Foreign Minister Barthou will proceed with his propaganda in behalf of regional pacts to which he already has secured the agreement of the Little Entente and Great Britain. He must obtain the signatures of Germany and Poland if the plan is to be wholly successful.

Long Discussed

The possibility of creating a Franco-German military alliance as a check on Soviet Russia's European peace has long been discussed in chancelleries, but no definite initiative ever has been taken.

Individual tubes of cream, after the style of toothpaste, have been placed on the market in Germany at low prices. Each tube has a round, flat base which enables the tube to be stood upright, and holds a sufficient quantity of cream for one cup of tea or other beverage.

Swine community organizations have already accomplished much for farmers by rendering a market service. However, their commercial effectiveness will be greatly increased if such associations will purchase outstanding boars for the use of members. — Bacon Hog Handbook. YOUR LIVER'S MAKING YOU FEEL OUT OF SORTS

—No Calomel needed

When you feel blue, depressed, sour on the world, that's your liver which isn't pouring its daily two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels. Digestion and elimination are being slowed up, food is accumulating and decaying inside you and making you feel wretched.

Move bowel-poisons like slabs, oil, mineral waters, pills or salts. Don't expect to get your liver going right by dieting or "starving a cold." Calomel is dangerous. Don't take it. Get Carter's Little Liver Pills at the last sign. Safe. Purely vegetable. Sure. Ask for them by name. Refuse substitutes. 25c at all druggists.

Attention has again been drawn by the Live Stock and Meat Trade Review, published by the Dominion Department of Agriculture, to the evil of overloading the Monday livestock market. Such action is a direct result of the law of supply and demand, and not among its least evils is that it largely affects cattle of a value least able to support marketing costs, adding further costs to the carryover.

A LARGE FIELD TO DRAW FROM

NEWS AND INFORMATION FOR THE BUSY FARMER

(Furnished by the Ontario Department of Agriculture)

Poultry Exports Double

Reports at hand indicate that some 935,000 pounds of dressed poultry were exported from Canada to the United Kingdom during the first five months of this year. Compared with the corresponding period of last year, this is an increase of approximately 537,122 pounds.

Take Out The Weeds

Although modern seed cleaning machinery will do a great deal to take out weed seeds from grass and clover seed, it will not make perfect reparation in all cases. In fields for seed weeds should be taken out in the summer seeds to make possible high grades and best prices. Such weeds as mustard, daisies, bladder campion, white cockle, and others classed as noxious should be removed during the summer, so as to keep them out of seed crops and, what is just as important, keep them from seeding themselves down again.

Cutting Soybean Hay

With an increasing number of farmers growing soybeans for hay it is important that proper methods cut the crop at the proper time. Soybeans for hay should be cut when the pods are about half filled out. The most desirable combination of quality and feed value is obtained at this stage. Cutting should be done with the mower in the morning, after the dew is off. It is usual to leave the crop in the swath for a day, or until the leaves are thoroughly wilted, then rake into windrows and then put into small cocks. The hay should be thoroughly cured before hauling and handled in such a way as to preserve the leaves as much as possible.

Asparagus a Long Time Job

The importance of asparagus may best be judged by the rapidly increasing demand both in the fresh and in the canned state, and during recent years also there has been a greater interest taken in asparagus culture by home gardeners as well as by market and truck gardeners. However, a word of warning is given by Mr. T. F. Ritchie of the Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa. "The in-and-out grower" is predicted from dabbling in this venture This branch of industry is not adapted to th epractice of growing a crop one year when the prospects of a rising market might be profitable, and out of it the next season if the probabilities of a lucrative return seemed poor. An asparagus plantation should last from 15 to 20 years. Asparagus may be grown on many kinds of soils, but the most desirable are those well supplied with humus, sand, rich loam and with sufficient moisture. The organic soils such as peat and muck, are essentially barren in nature and should show a definite reaction where the addition of one or more chemical fertilizers are applied.

Head The Hive With A Prolific Queen

The foundation for the next year's honey crop, says the Dominion Apiarist, is laid by making sure that every colony is headed by a young and vigorous queen, early in August, so that she has sufficient time to produce a large force of bees before the end of the brood rearing season. To perform the duties expected of her, the queen must have ample room for maximum egg production, and there must always be an adequate supply of food available for the brood she produces. Other conditions being satisfactory strong colonies headed with a young vigorous queen in the fall are the best assurance of strong colonies the following spring and a strong force of field bees in time for harvest.

Table Turnip Acreage

That Ontario farmers appreciate the increasing demand for fancy quality table turnips is indicated in reports to the Ontario Department of Agriculture stating that, in many of the more prominent growing sections acreage devoted to this crop is larger by some twenty-five per cent. as compared with that of last year. Sections in which this holds true include Oxford, Brant, Wentworth, Waterloo, Wellington, Perth, Huron and Bruce counties.

Rains in the latter part of June stimulated planting as growers were hesitant to plant while dry weather prevailed. Approximately ten per cent of the acreage is for early August and September shipment, which is a twenty-five per cent. decrease from last year.

Federal-Provincial Bull Bonus Policy Discontinued

The Federal-Provincial Bull Bonus Policy is being discontinued in Ontario and no further inspection and grading of bulls will take place after August 1st. This announcement is made by L. E. O'Neill, assistant director of the Livestock Branch, who states that only those applications for bonus which are received in the office of the Ontario Livestock Branch on or before August 15th, 1934, can be considered for payment. His message further declares: "If you have sold any bulls subject to this policy, it will be necessary, if any bonus is to be paid, that you arrange to have the buyer send in his application along with the Canadian registration certificate properly transferred so as to arrive in this office before August 15th."

At What Stage of Maturity Should Crops Be Harvested

Experiments by the Field Husbandry Division, of the Dominion Experimental Farms show that crops cut at the following stages gives high-yielding results of best quality.

HAY—Alfalfa one tenth in bloom, red clover full bloom, timothy when the bloom has fallen, grain for hay when the kernels are in the milk stage.

GRAIN — All grain crops should be cut when the kernels are firm and before the heads are too easily shattered.

SILAGE — Corn late dough, sunflowers 50 per cent in bloom, red clover full bloom, alfalfa full bloom and wilted 5 hours after cutting, oats and peas when oats in the dough stage.

ROOTS — As late in the fall as possible.

Potatoes — When the tops are all dead.

FROZEN CHEESE SALAD

One-fourth pound cream cheese, one cup whipping cream, half a teaspoon salt, half a cup crushed pineapple, one cup mayonnaise, one teaspoon gelatine, four tablespoons chopped maraschino cherries, two tablespoons sugar.

Soften gelatine in one tablespoon of cold water for five minutes. Add sugar to pineapple and scald. Add softened gelatine and when cool add cherries. Work cheese with a fork until softened and gradually add mayonnaise. Mix until smooth with a wooden spoon. Fold in cream which has been whipped until firm, with salt and combine with fruit. Turn into tray of refrigerator or into mold and pack in eight parts ice to one part ice cream, salt and freeze until firm.

Cut in squares and serve on lettuce or form into balls and serve in halves of peaches which have been marinated in French dressing. If pears are to be stuffed with the cheese, chop preserved ginger and use it in place of the pineapple in the cheese mixture.

POMMES ANNA

Peel the potatoes and cut them into thin rings, which you must soak in cold water for about ten minutes and then dry. Butter well a fireproof dish (with a cover), not too deep and just large enough to hold all the potato. Arrange the rings in layers in this dish, seasoning each layer and dotting it with small pieces of butter. Repeat these till the dish is full, and spread some butter pretty thickly over the top layer. Put on the lid and make it airtight with some flour-and-water paste. Bake this in a slack oven for three-quarters of an hour, and at the end of this time take out the potato cake and turn it upside down. Cover closely again and bake for a similar period. Now pour off all the butter, turn out the golden cake, and serve it piping hot. You can, if you wish, sprinkle each layer with finely grated cheese, as well, but in this case the dish is called Pommes Voisin. You will find both these dishes make an excellent accompaniment to lamb, chicken, or veal.

SWISS EGGS

Grease a shallow baking-dish, put in a layer of equal quantities of bread crumbs and grated cheese mixed together, and place lightly poached eggs on the crumbs and cheese. Season with salt and pepper, pour white sauce over, and cover with more cheese and crumbs. Dot with butter, and bake in a hot oven till lightly browned. Serve at once in the dish.

BRAISED CELERY

Cut the celery into short lengths and almost cover it with seasoned milk and water; stew until tender, then thicken the liquid with cornflour and a little butter. Pour the sauce back over the vegetable, sprinkle the top with grated cheese and breadcrumbs, and brown under the grill.

HOME-MADE PORK PIES

Home-made miniature pork pies are delicious to serve at a "hand-round" supper and they are not a great deal of trouble to prepare. Mince coarsely the meat from a one-pound shoulder of pork and add salt and pepper. Cover one pie's foot and the pork bones with water and simmer for several hours. Then strain off the stock. Line small pans with pastry dough. Fill with pork which has previously been mixed with a little water. Cover with dough and make pretty tops for the pies. Cook for about three-quarters of an hour When the pies are taken from the oven the should be filled with the stock which is poured through the holes in the top. This stock forms the jelly when cold and should be added liberally to the pies.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

CROCHET BORDERS—

When crochet edings have to be worked on to table-mats or trays-cloths, it is difficult to pass the crochet hook through the doubled edge of the linen. It is a good plan to machine all round the edge, using a coarse needle and a medium stitch In this way holes are neatly pierced in the linen, ready for the crochet hook to pass easily through.

GLASS—

Delicate glass and china should be washed in tepid water to which a little ammonia has been added. It is allowed to drain in a rack until dry. Finally, polish with a dry, soft towel

To loosen a glass stopper which has become firmly fixed, rub a little oil round it and place it near a fire Tap the stopper lightly and it will come out easily

When two tumblers have become fastened together, one inside the other, the safest way of disengaging them is to fill the inner glass with cold water and place the outer one in a bowl of warm water. The respective contraction and expansion which takes place will free the tumblers.

A strong cement for mending broken glass or china is made by dissolving gelatine in sufficient rectified spirits to give the consistency of molasses.

LOCAL AND DISTRICT NEWS OF WOMEN'S ORGANIZATIONS

SWITZERVILLE MISSION BAND

The "Busy Bee" Mission Band was entertained at the home of Mrs. Vernon Paul, on Wednesday afternoon, August 8th, over thirty boys and girls being present.

The vice-president, Arnold Clark, conducted the meeting which was opened by singing our memory hymn, "I would be true," followed by the Lord's Prayer in unison. Owing to the unavoidable absence of the secretary, Muriel Craig read the minutes, which were approved. After the roll call a message was broadcast from China by Donald Wales, and one from Canada by Maitland Clark.

After the call to worship and response in song, the scripture lesson from Luke 10, 30-35, was read by Vivian Craig. Another hymn was sung and the memory verses for the year reviewed by ten members.

The watch-tower heralds then gave some interesting items as follows: Trinidad, by Sydney Wilson; Canada, by Augusta Clark; Korea, by Doris Vandervoort; India, by Audrey Brandon; Temperance, by Muriel Craig. Phyllis Paul then led in prayer, which was followed by singing another hymn. The offering was received by Mary Vandervoort and Robert Carroll and the response was given by Roy Clark.

Mrs. Wales told a story of a little field mouse which disobeyed his mother, and the dangers he encountered by doing so, finishing with the poem "Missing," taken from A. A. Milne's, "When we were very young."

The meeting was then favored by listening to Mrs. R. C. Tait, who spoke words of encouragement to the Band. After singing a hymn, the meeting was brought to a close with the friendship prayer led by Pauline Amey.

A recess of play followed, after which the hostess and her helpers served a delicious lunch which brought to a close a very pleasant and profitable afternoon.

Miss Cameron gave report of the Presbyterial, giving ways and means of increasing missionary interest. It was decided to write Mrs. Duff, president of Kingston Presbyterial to be with us at our thanksgiving meeting, which is to be held in September An article was read by Mrs. Yeomans and the chapter from the study book was read by Mrs. Robert Lewis.

MARRIED WOMEN BETTTER TEACHERS THAN SINGLE ONES

Married women school teachers are their students better training, have better results, and actually spend more time in the school rooms according to a survey conducted by Dr. David Wilbur Peters, research worker at Columbia University, New York.

The investigation covered the work of 1,842 teachers, half of whom were married and half single, matched for equivalence in age, training and experience. The result of the survey contradicts the assertion often repeated that married women teach only for money and teaching as a profession holds no interest, said Dr. Peters.

STREAMLINE STOCKINGS LATEST IN LONDON

A streamline effect is the fashion in motors-cars, evening dresses and the human frame. The newest contribution to this ideal in London is a stocking designed to give a streamline or slimming effect to the leg.

This is achieved by a clever shading device, for the stockings are lighter in front than they are at the back. They are made in pure silk, in a variety of shades.

Where East meets West!

The peoples of near lands and far lands foregather in friendly rivalry . . . in commerce and in sport, in the arts, the sciences, music and industry . . . at the Canadian National Exhibition.

Merchants are attracted from the bazaars and market places of distant Calcutta . . . from the potteries of Stoke-on-Trent . . . from the plantations of Ceylon and Sierra Leone. In an atmosphere of carnival gaiety and romance the enterprising strangers from abroad transact business and join their Canadian brethren in whole-hearted appreciation of the world's largest annual Exhibition.

From over the seven seas, from the Antipodes and the United States come athletes who strive mightily with Canada's best for world championships on land and water.

East meets west on common ground at the "Show Window of the Nations" where Toronto once again becomes "a place of meeting". This is the big year at your Exhibition.

Great permanent edifices, many of them costing more than $1,000,000 each, reflect the solidity of the Canadian National Exhibition as an institution for the future instead of a temporary "fair" without tradition and without promise. This is the fifty-sixth consecutive year of Canada's greatest exposition.

NORTHBROOK

Northbrook, Aug. 12.—Death again visited our village Saturday morning, Aug. 4th, claiming Mr. Marshal Vanness, who was stricken with a stroke three days previous. Mr. Vanness was seventy years of age and leaves a wife and three children, Mrs. F. Pendrouh, Northbrook; Mrs. Alex. Thompson and Lewis, at Northbrook. The remains were interred under the Orange Order, from the United Church on Sunday afternoon. Deceased was a veteran woodsman and river driver of an exceptionally rugged and strong type. For some years, he held the position of constable for this district.

Worms, by the irritation that they cause in the stomach and intestines, deprive infants of the nourishment that they should derive from food and ill-nutrition is the result. Miller's Worm Powders destroy worms and correct the morbid conditions in the stomach and bowels that are favorable to worms, so that the full nutriment of the child is assured and development in every way encouraged.

MT. PLEASANT PIONEER W. I.

Mount Pleasant Pioneer Women's Institute met at the home of Mr. Milton Doidge on August 2nd. In a short session the business was disposed of and a social followed. A good number was present and a splendid time was enjoyed. The program consisted of a couple of readings by Mrs. James Haggerty of Thomasburgh, in her usual pleasing style, and Messrs. Harold Hyatt and Homer Jackson gave a couple of selections which were much enjoyed. Mr. Ernest Sexsmith sang a solo and Mrs. Fred Henderson and Mrs. Gordon Topkings and Mr. Milton Doidge contributed good numbers. Rev. Mr. Smith gave an excellent talk on Austria, which was very appropriate and entertaining.

A tidy sum was added to the treasury.

BARE LEGS TO BE IMMORAL IN CHINA

Bare legs, their effect on morality and national economy, is the grave question posed recently before the Chinese National Government.

The famous new life movement, with its "keep-your-clothes-buttoned" and "don't spit" slogans, is the peg on which the hosiery makers in China may have hung the question of bare legs, for governmental consideration.

If the slim, lovely Chinese girls and women of the land clothe with their skirts slit nearly to the thigh don't go back to stockings the barefoot phase is likely to spread to the interior and bring about the ruination of the hosiery industry in China, the stocking makers declared in petitioning the Nanking Government to ban bareleg as immoral.

Unless worms be expelled from the system, no child can be healthy. Mother Graves' Worm Exterminator is an excellent medicine to destroy worms.

ROTHSCHILD DENIED MEAL FOR BEING JEW

London—Victor Rothschild, scion of the distinguished banking family and heir to the British Rothschild baronry, revealed recently that he had been denied a meal in a London road house because he is a Jew.

Telephoning to London from Le Touquet, he declared that the management of the road house asked him whether he was a Jew, upon his entrance to the establishment.

"I said, 'yes, I am,'" Rothschild declared. "Thereupon the manager said he was unable to serve me. I left at once. That sounds rather like Nazi Germany, doesn't it?"

The incident was brought into public notice at a meeting of the Liberal summer school here.

Among the new and striking exhibits at the Canadian National Exhibition this year is that in the Grain Building in which the Ceylon Tea Board displays not only the product of its tea gardens but rubies, spices, handiwork of the native silversmiths, etc. The exhibit will be manned by natives in costume.

SUPPER FOR THE VERY YOUNG IS ALWAYS SIMPLE

Supper for the toddlers is a very simple matter of cereal of some kind, with fruit to follow, accompanied by a generous mug of milk. Bedtime of 6 o'clock makes a supper an exciting meal, but for children of six to ten, whose bedtime varies between 7 and 8, you can provide something a little more interesting, but still very easily digested.

Savoury Rice

The best meal for children of this age is a light dish, but if the weather is not too cold, followed by fruit or a salad. A good vegetable pie might make the first course, but it must be very well cooked so that it is easily digested. Savoury rice is excellent, too, and for this you cook your rice till tender with some good stock to which a little strained tomato and a small amount of grated cheese, and bake in the oven.

Savoury custards may be served, and these may be varied by the addition of beef juice to the eggs, a little flaked cooked fish, with a mild tomato, or a little pounded ham.

A Salads Course

For the second course there should be fruit or some kind of dish or salad. Stewed fresh fruit is good, or an apple meringue made by covering sliced oranges with a thick syrup. Some children will enjoy thinly sliced buttered bread with a mild French dressing, made mostly of olive oil and with very little vinegar and seasonings. Lettuce or watercress with the same kind of French dressing is good, and for a treat a fruit salad and course with some brown bread and butter.

SHIPPING BABY TURKEYS

It has been demonstrated that baby turkeys, like baby chicks, can be shipped with safety. Mr. Joseph Hodgson of Mindemoya, Manitoulin Island, for many years a breeder of fine turkeys, wished, this year, to dispose of his crop early in the season, as he desired to give more time to his silver foxes and his growing tourist trade in Treasure Island, so he decided to market eggs for hatching and baby poults. With the assistance of the Agricultural Representative, an order for 40g birds was undertaken to be filled. While both turkey hens and turkey cocks were being used, the order could not be executed at once. All the poults that were ready at the first of the season were shipped as "day-olds," but the remainder of the order was held until and was completed by the sending of birds from ten days to two weeks of age. The "day-olds" were shipped in the regular chicken cases and the older birds in berry crates from 4 to 6 poults being accommodated in a section. Troughs with ample supplies of feed were put in the crates and the birds went through to Eastern Ontario with practically no loss.

QUALITY OF CHEESE

Those familiar with the sale of cheese in the United Kingdom are aware that the greatest premium in prices for Canadian cheese, as compared with prices of cheese from other countries, is obtained during the late winter and spring months, and is, therefore, for cheese which has been held for a considerable length of time. If the quality of the cheese at the end of the storage period is kept in accordance with the grade and quality when purchased, the reputation of Canadian cheese must inevitably suffer, with a subsequent decrease in relative value of Canadian cheese, as compared with cheese from other countries. In grading cheese, a grader is giving him opinion of the quality at the time of grading, although he may, in fixing the grade, be influenced by what he may consider will be the final quality of the cheese. If the quality of any considerable portion of Canadian cheese declines between the time of grading and the time of final sale in the United Kingdom, the prices paid to Canadian producers for subsequent shipments must be lowered as a result.—J. P. Singleton, Dairy and Cold Storage Commissioner.

TURKEYS RAISING COSTS

So far as the turkey industry in Manitoulin Island is concerned, the breeders are paying close attention to every phase that can affect profits. An experienced grower who turned off about 300 highly finished birds last year, says Mr. J. B. Spencer who visited the Island in July, found that the cost for feed was approximately 35 cents per bird. This flock, like the others, gathered much of their feed during the summer season from the fields. They were given rations both spring and fall and the necessary feeding in summer for rapid growth. Another breeder raised a flock of 66 poults and five mature turkeys, which on purchased rations. The feeds used are listed as Turkey Starter, Turkey Grower, Big Scratch, wheat, corn, oats and barley. The birds also got some sour milk. At the time of the count it was found that the feed-cost per bird was $1.40. The brooding costs for coal and some equipment amounted to $8.85. Fifty-four of the birds were sold dressed, three were lost and the balance sold at relatively low prices, or retained. While the market stock sold at relatively low prices, the cost of feed as shown of ..62.86, or a little less than a dollar a bird.

THE SLACK APPLE BARREL

In view of the large volume of fruit exported this season from Canada, compared with previous years, the results in packing are highly encouraging, says the Dominion Fruit Branch, and reflect favourably upon the efforts of producers to improve their packs. With the exception of Gravensteins, there was a marked decrease in the percentage of slack barrels arriving on the United Kingdom market during the 1933-34 season as compared with former years. This would indicate that there has been considerable improvement in handling and packing.

MASSAGE YOUR SCALP ABOUT ONCE A WEEK

The question of whether or not to massage the scalp invariably comes up whenever a group of beauty-minded people get together. Some say that you should not massage around the ears, but put your head in your tain that a weekly massage is beneficial, and still others insist that you should oh it every night. Well, let's look at all sides of the controversy.

Vigorous beauty treatments, like most medicine, should be taken in moderate doses and the function slogan, "If a little' good, a lot's better," is highly impractical. The scalp is massaged for two reasons, first, to bring up circulation and stimulate the growth of hair and, second, to loosen dry skin and flakes of dandruff. Now it stands to reason that deep stimulation isn't exactly necessary and that too much massage may make the oil glands overdo their normal work. Therefore, a weekly scalp massage (preferably the night before a shampoo. should be sufficient.

Remember that incorrect manipulation of the scalp is worse than no massage at all. Use your elbows! roots of the hair, at all, others manipulations. Then, with rotary motion make the scalp move backward and forward for not more than ten minutes. The finishing touches to all until you're ready to set them down on a new spot.

99 Ontario Magistrates Relieved of Offices By Liberal Government

48 Retained in Positions

The Ontario Attorney-General, Hon. A. W. Roebuck, announced on Thursday a complete re-organization of Ontario's magisterial system. By the changes implemented, the number of magistrates throughout the province will be reduced from 147 to 48. Only the larger cities, Toronto, Hamilton, London, Windsor, Ottawa and Brantford, are unaffected. A reduction is also scheduled in the number of justices of the peace, which now totals 10,000.

By the order-in-council, Magistrates M. P. Graham of Napanee, W. C. Mickel, of Belleville; G. P. Palmer, of Deseronto; J. L. Lloyd of Northbrook, A. E. Calnan, of Picton, and J. Parrell and D. J. Rankin of Kingston, are relieved of their offices.

Old Ontario will be divided into twelve magisterial divisions and there will be six divisions for New Ontario. By the new system, each magistrate's itinerary will be so arranged that each will sit in the different districts sometime during the year. None of the magistrates will be permitted to carry on any other business. He will be expected to devote his whole time to the work of his office. Salaries, with the exceptions of a few cases, will be uniform. A saving of $50,000 per year is expected to be effected.

Napanee in District No. 9

Napanee will now be part of district Number IX., which comprises the Counties of Prince Edward, Hastings, Lennox and Addington and Prontenac. Mr. R. J. Butler has been appointed senior magistrate for the district and other magistrates throughout the districts will likely be appointed. A new magistrate will be named for the city of Napanee.

Mr. Roebuck said, in appointing the 48 magistrates, there had been no attention paid to their political standing.

Wilhelmina McGill Drowned Sunday Wasaga Beach

The Toronto papers on Monday contained an account of the death by drowning, of Miss Wilhelmina (Billy) McGill, of Toronto, at Wasaga Beach, on Sunday last. At the time Miss McGill's companion, Hector Goltz, also of Toronto, lost his life. Miss McGill was well-known in Napanee. She was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. E. McGill, Bridge St., of Centreville. Previous to removal to Toronto with her family, Miss McGill attended the Napanee Collegiate Institute, where she was a very popular student. She was eighteen years of age.

Early on Sunday, a motor party left Toronto to spend the day at Wasaga. In it were members of the McGill family, including Mrs. Taylor formerly Bessie McGill, Thomas Williamson, of the Bell Shoe Store, Hector Goltz, manager of the Bell Shoe Store, Eleanor O'Brien and H. W. Steels. Shortly after arrival at the beach, the party prepared to go into the water. Within ten minutes it was seen that Goltz and Miss McGill were in difficulties, and before they apparently stepped from shallow water into deep water. Neither of the two could swim. Mrs. Taylor, Miss McGill's sister, attempted to effect a rescue but was nearly drowned in the attempt and was brought to shore by Steels, another member of the party. After working for three quarters of an hour over her, Mrs. Taylor was revived.

Miss McGill's and Mr. Goltz's bodies were recovered shortly after the accident and were released for burial.

Mrs. E. McLaughlin Retires After Forty Years in Business

A business of long standing in the town of Napanee changed hands recently when Mrs. E. McLaughlin disposed of her store on John Street to Mr. Ted. Daverin.

The business was established in its present location 40 years ago by the late Mr. Ephraim McLaughlin and Mrs. McLaughlin. During the years by their attention to business and their integrity, they built up a large clientele who joined in the McLaughlin store a pleasant place in which to deal.

Mr. and Mrs. McLaughlin came to Napanee 43 years ago. Mr. McLaughlin was associated with the late John Pollard in the "Napanee Express" printing office for two years. Forty years ago they established their own business, when they became agents for the Canadian Pacific Railway and the Dominion Express. They have dealt, as well, in books, stationery, fancy goods, magazines, newspapers and tobacco.

Seven years ago, Mr. McLaughlin passed away and five years ago, the only son, Will, also died. Since that time Mrs. McLaughlin has continued the business with the assistance of her daughters, Miss Geraldine and Miss Vivian. Early in July, Miss Geraldine died, and as Mrs. McLaughlin suffered a severe accident in which she broke her left wrist and left hip, a few months ago, she decided to dispose of her business. Her daughter, Vivian is a member of the staff of the Collegiate Institute.

Mrs. McLaughlin was born in Carleton Place, was Valley-bred and taught school as a young woman, for a few years. After her marriage to Mr. McLaughlin, they lived in Tweinton in Bruce County, where they carried on a business for ten years, before coming to Napanee.

For 40 years, Mrs. McLaughlin has been an expert telegraph operator. Even today she is able to transmit messages with the promptness and accuracy of one many years her junior.

Many many friends will miss her kindly presence from her accustomed place of business on John Street, where for so many years she looked after the needs of her customers and showed a genuine interest in their careers.

Mrs. McLaughlin's friends in Napanee and at a distance, will join in wishing for her many years more of health and happiness.

In Spite of Drought Wheat Surplus Large

London.—The International Wheat Conference spent its opening session today hearing a review of the present situation, which stresses the menace to prices from a 1,000,000,000-bushel glut.

The drought, delegates estimated, would cut normal production by 300,000,000 to 400,000,000 bushels, furnishing only partial relief.

The proposals for extension of the acreage-reduction program throughout the world was not reached and remains to be taken up tomorrow.

Andrew Cairns of Canada, Secretary of the World Wheat Commission, gave a detailed report of the operation of last year's agreement, and there followed a general discussion.

Figures Are Given

Interesting disclosures of how the wheat pact operated last year—the first year of the international agreement — were revealed at the closed session.

The figures given for the year ended July 31, were:

Country	Exp't quota Bushels	Actual-expts Bushels
Canada	200,000,000	195,000,000
United States	47,000,000	27,000,000
Argentina	110,000,000	144,000,000
Australia	105,000,000	90,000,000
Danubian countries	54,000,000	36,000,000
Russia	No quota	27,000,000

Russia had been offered a quota of 37,000,00 bushels, and rejected it, claiming the right to export twice that amount.

Reductions in planted acreage also were reported for all the countries except Argentina, where it was estimated the decrease amounted to from 3 to 10 per cent. of the previous three-year average, the basis of comparison.

The reductions in other countries were: Canada 10%; United States 12 per cent; Australia over 15; Germany 5; Italy 5; France 1.

The general aim of the present meeting is to bring about acreage reductions amounting to 15 per cent. for the four producing countries, and of 10 to 15 per cent. for the European countries.

In addition to representatives of the fifteen countries which are members of the Commission, the conference is being attended by observers for Bulgaria and Poland.

Community Mourns Death of J. E. Miller

Died Following Week's Illness

Most genuine regret has been felt on the part of the town and countryside over the unexpected passing of Mr. J. Edwin Miller, who died at Kingston General Hospital, early on Friday morning.

Just a week previous, Mr. Miller was taken ill with what seemed to be an ordinary attack of appendicitis. On Saturday morning he was removed from his home in Napanee to the hospital at Kingston, and an operation was immediately performed. From the time of the operation, it was known that Mr. Miller's condition was serious. Each day his many friends hoped for better reports, which failed to come. A decided gloom was cast over the town when his death was announced on Friday. Just a little over two months ago, Mr. T. B. Wallace, senior member of the firm of Wallace, Storr, Limited, of which Mr. Miller was a partner, died suddenly at Toronto. Mr. W. K. Huston is the surviving partner.

The late Mr. Miller was one of the best known and most popular young men in this district. He was born at Arden, but over 46 years ago, the son of Mr. John Miller and the late Mrs. Miller. He attended public school at Arden and later matriculated into the Napanee High School, after which he became an apprentice in the drug store of the late T. B. Wallace, in Napanee. After serving his apprenticeship he entered the School of Pharmacy at Toronto, where he received his Phm B. degree. For one year he worked with Adam Pullen on Front St., after which he returned to Wallaces, in Napanee, and was associated for 27 years with the firm.

In 1913 a company was formed with Mr. T. B. Wallace, the senior partner and Mr. Miller and Mr. W. K. Huston, the juniors.

Mr. Miller's sterling character and delightful personality won for him the esteem and friendship of a wide circle. For some years he was a member of the Napanee Board of Education, where he rendered valuable service. He was a charter member of the Rotary Club; a member of Union Lodge A. F. & A.M. No. 9, and of Trinity United Church.

He is survived by his widow, formerly Katharine Vine, one son, Robert, one daughter, Miriam, his father, Mr. John Miller, and his step-mother, Mrs. Miller. There are also three brothers, George E. of Saskatoon, Sask., W. A. of Darlingford, Man., and Charles W., of Exeter, Ontario. Mrs. Jennie Dawson of Deseronto is a step-sister.

The funeral service was held at his late home, Robinson Street, Sunday afternoon at 3:00 oclock, where a private service was held for the family. A public service was conducted at Trinity United Church at 3:30 o'clock. Both services were in charge of Rev. Harry Pawson, minister of Trinity Church, assisted by Rev. A. J. Wilson of St. Andrew's Church. The service at the graveside was under Masonic auspices. Interment was at Riverside Cemetery, in Napanee.

Nephew of Misses Mair Hurt in Portland Strike

Howard Thomas, 19, Portland, messenger for Kerr, Gifford & Co., Lewis building, was badly beaten this morning by two men supposedly longshoremen pickets at Southwest Third Avenue and Stark Street.

Thomas had been sent by his office to the offices of the commission of public docks at the foot of South-west Stark street to deliver correspondence. It is reported. Leaving the dock commission offices, the youth was followed by two men, who pounced upon him, knocked him down and beat his head into the pavement.

The two assailants fled and the youth was taken to emergency hospital, where he was treated for a black eye and head bruises.

The boy had no connection with the strike, it is said, but was merely performing a task requested by his superiors.—Portland Oregonian.

THE DEATH OF MR. MILLER

The death of Mr. Ed. Miller, on Friday morning has cast a gloom over the town and community. It is scarcely more than two months ago since Mr. Wallace, the senior partner of Wallace's Drug Store, passed away. His passing, though sudden, was not unlooked for, as it was known for a long time that he had a serious heart condition. But the death of Mr. Miller, the second partner in the firm, was entirely unexpected. Mr. Miller was enjoying good health and looking forward, hopefully and enthusiastically to acquiring, with Mr. Huston, full control of the Wallace Drug Store, to which he had given so much of his life.

A sudden attack of appendicitis called for an operation, from which he failed to recover. In his passing the town loses one of its most highly respected young business men. His kindly manner and genial good nature, will be greatly missed by the friends and patrons of Wallace's.

The development and growth of Wallace's Drug Store is closely associated with the development of the town. In recent years, this was largely due to the vision and business acumen of the junior members of the firm, Mr. Wallace having retired from active participation in the business, some years ago. Mr. Miller and Mr. Huston kept abreast of the newer methods of merchandising and retained for their firm, the goodwill and confidence of the public.

It is the generally expressed hope of the community that Mr. Huston, on whom now rests a heavy responsibility, will be able to assume the larger burden which the passing of Mr. Miller has, so suddenly, thrust upon him.

THE MAGISTERIAL CHANGES

The changes which the Attorney-General has made in the organization of the Primary Court system of Ontario, are so sweeping, that it is impossible to grasp, as yet, their full significance. This will only be ascertained as the experiment is given time to work itself out in actual practice. The object which the Attorney-General has in mind is one which commends the support of everyone. It is true, that there has been some glaring differences between the sentences imposed by one magistrate and those imposed by another, for the same crime. It is to arrive at some uniformity in this matter, and as well to eliminate the outmoded fee system, that the changes have been made.

Whether, however, these advantages will outweigh some other considerations is a matter of conjecture. The Attorney-General has said that under the new system, the magistrate will have to arrive at a decision purely on the evidence submitted. No opportunity is to be given for the accused to see the magistrate prior to the actual trial. This would be an ideal arrangement in the realm of science, where a judgment is based on facts as presented—or in the event of major crime. But it's not quite the same when dealing with human beings, particularly in the minor breaches of the law, which come before a magistrate in a small town.

A magistrate in a town the size of Napanee, knows everyone. He knows the environment under which those brought before him, live; he knows the background of the family life; he knows the temptations and the struggles to which some of his fellow citizens are subject. This human factor enters into the situation, and the magistrate is able, knowing all this, to arrive at a much saner and wiser judgment than would be possible if all he knew of a given case was that which was written on paper, or adduced in evidence.

Genuine regret is expressed in the town and community, that Magistrate Graham is to be released from his position. During his tenure of office, Mr. Graham has held the confidence of the whole community. He has a genuine sympathy with people, of which his work as the head of Rotary's Crippled Children's Committee is ample evidence. All up and down the county, are dozens of children who will have a life-long admiration for Mr. Graham for his sympathetic and kindly interest in them. This human interest has shown itself too, in his work on the bench. He has been just, without being harsh; kindly without being sentimental. It is very greatly to be regretted that the reorganization of the administration of justice, makes it necessary to ask for his resignation.

It is something, however, for Mr. Graham to know, that he leaves his office with the full confidence of the town and community. Citizens of all shades of political opinion, regretted his resignation. His services would seem to us indispensable in the new organization. If there are deputies in this area still to be appointed, Mr. Graham should be one of them.

TRADE FACTS

The success of the Liberal Party at the last Provincial election has given new impetus to the desire for an election in the Dominion arena. In the addresses which have been made during the past week, in connection with the bye-elections, much has been said against the trade agreements entered into as a result of the Ottawa Conference.

Figures released by the Department of Statistics show an unmistakable upswing in trade, since the Ottawa agreements were signed. For the fiscal year ending March, 1934, Canada's total trade, outward and inward, had increased 132 million dollars over last year. Of this increase, 60% was increased Empire trade. The greater part of this increase was with Great Britain and Ireland.

The following figures will show the increase in value of exports to the United Kingdom, in the period of one year :—

Commodity	Exports, 1933	Exports, 1934

At the same time, Canada's imports from the United Kingdom in the same period, increased by $18,600,000, so that the traffic was not all one way. And the commodities which Canada imported are quite different from those which she exported.

The following comparative table, in the textile classification, will indicate the extent of Canada's imports in this one field :—

In view of the statistics, it is quite evident that the Ottawa pacts are beginning to bear fruit. Naturally, agreements of this sort take time before the full effect of their operations can be determined. But, already, definite trends can be seen towards increased reciprocal trade benefits.

GANGSTERS IN ONTARIO

The Province experienced a feeling of satisfaction a week or two ago, when the attempt to kidnap Mr. McLean was "foiled." But the self-congratulation was short-lived. The first major kidnapping racket was successfully pulled-off, when Mr. Labatt, of London, was spirited away by a group of gangsters. Fortunately, he has been returned. Whether the ransom was paid or not, has not been disclosed.

This new incursion into our Provincial life is very disconcerting. That a group of men can take away a prominent citizen, keep him for three days, and at the same time carry on negotiations with his brother in the largest hotel in Toronto, while thirty newspapermen and a number of police stand outside the hotel room, seems incredible.

In the first place, there is something wrong with our civilization, in which that sort of crime can flourish. Great wealth concentrated in the hands of a few, constitutes a constant bait, and allurement, for those who are willing to risk all to secure some of it. No man of great wealth is immune now from the nefarious depredations of these thugs. A civilization which rears thugs on the one hand and attractive objects of thuggery on the other, must give all who are interested in our modern life, serious concern.

Our Police, in which we have had such confidence, have come off second best, so far, in their first contact with major gangsters. Encouraged by their success, the gangsters, who may reasonably be expected to have feared the Canadian Police, will naturally be encouraged. It is to be hoped the reputation of our Police will not suffer too greatly by this experience. They may yet succeed in running down their way of reorganizing the force and co-ordinating its various branches that the enviable record of imunity from gangsters' rule should be maintained.

Editorial Comment

COLONIZATION

In an case, it is better, if necessary, to pay whatever money a colonist requires to carry him through the opening period, than to continue to feed him indefinitely as in Montreal and other cities. In Montreal alone, the authorities calculate that the dole will entail a cost of some ten millions from the present month to the end of April next. And the dance of the millions will continue, without anyone knowing where it is to stop. A good colonization program, surrounded with adequate guarantees for its execution, would be the most effective means of remedying this unemployment problem. That is a thought which our whole population should take thoroughly to heart, and co-operate in realising. We have lamentous time and a great deal of money already. La Presse, Montreal.

THE COST OF FORGIVENESS

The avowed efforts of many of our public men, as well as those of most of our financiers and of all our pacifists, to "put Germany on her feet" succeeded in just this one thing : Letting Germany off Reparations. She had previously, by a fraudulent bankruptcy which ruined her own saving classes, got rid of her internal debt. After she was formally released from her treaty debts at Lausanne in 1932, the way was clear for her to repudiate and to repudiate most of the foreign loans that had been raised for her in England and America.—National Review, London.

THE DOMINIONS AND THE NAVY

The theoretical right to eject British warships and naval establishments from its ports has recently been discussed and claimed in the parliament of at least one Dominion which is in common with all the others has an overseas trade guaranteed as to its security in time of war solely by the British Navy. The Empire-built up by nothing less than supreme sea-power, now includes among its members great communities to whom the raison d'etre of sea-power appears strangely incomprehensible. Indeed, the units of this sea-power are often regarded as expensive luxuries, signs of an unreasonable militarism or of reactionary and interfering Imperialism. The money available for maintaining the fleets, bases, docks and coaling stations of the Imperial sea-power passes through the budgets and is increased or diminished by the political exigencies of the temporarily governing party in a British parliament; so that though the Empire's commitments may continue to grow, the naval provision to deal with them may be arbitrarily determined on some other and unrelated basis.

BURIED TREASURE

(As a result of recent physiological researches it is announced that the list of minerals which may now be found in the human body has been almost indefinitely extended. Lead, copper, zinc, and manganese are mentioned, and it is stated that the thyroid gland and the tonsils are particularly rich in silver.)

Don't go down the mine, doctor,
don't go down the mine!
Do not a prospector wink for the precious metals shine,
Leave the child its tonsils, doctor;
that's where they shows;
'Twould seem somewhat grasping to go excavating those.

Don't go down the mine, doctor, lest your stunt be syled
Snatching silver tonsils from the unsuspecting child;
That would be a dastardly performance—I should say
Bad as pinching pennies from a blind man's humble tray.

If you must go mining, it were better done, I think,
Just to excavate for copper, manganese or zinc,
That task less ignominious, doctor; do not be beguiled
By the argentiferous tonsils of the unprotected child.

Born with silver spoon in mouth the lucky child denotes;
All are born, it seems, with silver tonsils in their throats.
'Tis a legacy, perhaps, no surgeon should disturb;
Predatory tonsil hunts one should restrain and curb.

Don't go down the mine, doctor,
don't go down the mine;
Better far prospect along the more familiar line.
Leave the gleaming gland intact
within its normal socket;
Concentrate on tin extracted from the patient's pocket.

How Big Is London

What is the area of London ? No, don't trouble to answer ! Whatever reply you make, nobody can say you are right, for no one knows the exact size of London. The County of London, which includes the London boroughs, has an area of 115.86 square miles. The London county council, however, is effective over an area of 116.96 square miles. The London postal district covers 232 square miles. The Metropolitan police are even more ambitious for they keep an eye on nearly 8,000,000 people over an area of about 700 square miles. The Metropolitan water board supplies the housewives from Hadam and Hertis, to Sevenoaks, in Kent—a total acreage of 367,361. The electricity supply of London is distributed over an area of 1,841 square miles. The City of London has an area of only one square mile—known as "the most valuable square" mile in the whole world. The area of London is not in London ! It stands in Stepney.

INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON, AUGUST 26TH, 1934

HOSEA 11 :1-4, 8, 9; 14 : 4-9

"HOSEA PREACHES GOD'S LOVE"

Hosea began to preach a few years after Amos had thundered his denunciation against the injustices of the leaders of Israel, probably about 745 B.C. His ministry began in the latter years of Jeroboam's reign.

Jeroboam's reign had been outwardly one of great prosperity and luxury. But within twelve years of his death Israel saw five rulers, three of whom had been assassinated.

It was during this time of unrest, revolution and political disintegration that Hosea preached. His message was coloured by his tragic home experience. He had married a wife who had proved unfaithful to him. According to Jewish law and custom, his duty was to proclaim her sin to the world and sever all relations with her. While in about the very act, he receives a larger vision of her obligations, fully and freely forgives her and takes her back to occupy the honored place as the head of his home. Then, like a flash of intuitive insight, it dawned on him that Jehovah the God of Israel, could be no less kindly, no less forgiving, no less merciful than he himself had been.

Israel was Jehovah's bride, in running after strange Gods, and wayward practices, she had been unfaithful. The sight therefore, to cast her off and leave her an outcast from his protection and care. But, no, God could be no less merciful than Hosea. Even though they had been faithless, even though they left him, yet he could not let them go. In a passage which is unmatched in literature, for tenderness, he describes the longing of God for His wayward children. He sees God taking His child, holding him in His arms, teaching him how to walk. He sees the child grow up and wander away, yet His Father's heart will not give him up.

"When Israel was a child, then I loved him and called him out of Egypt. . . . They went away and sacrificed to Idols. I taught Ephraim to walk, taking him by the hand. . . . I drew them with with cords of man and with bands of love. . . . How shall I give thee up, O. Ephraim. How shall I deliver thee O Israel."

For the first time in the history of religion there had risen a prophet who revealed the heart of God, as tender, loving and compassionate.

While Amos had meditated on the hillside and poured out the vials of his wrath against the injustices and inhuman practices on the part of Israel's leaders, Hosea had penetrated deep into the inner recesses of the soul and laid bare the motives of God's heart. He was not only a judge, meeting out justice for Hosea, for in the love, forgiving, pleading, educating, training and loving his wayward children.

To this generation which has behind it two thousand years of Christian training, these thoughts are not startling or unusual. But, Hosea was the first to sense these qualities of God's personality. Never before had such a view of God been expressed. It is this which makes Hosea one of the greatest prophets of all time.

The message he gave to his harrassed and distressed generation might well be taken to heart by our own day, as we seek to find our way through a maze of conflicting opinions and motives. Men are unjust, says Amos. Why are they unjust ? Because, answers Hosea, they do not have the love of God in their hearts. What a difference it would make in the solution of our present problems if employers and employees were moved by the spirit of love in all their relationships. What a difference it would make if Chinese, Papanese, French, Germans and Canadians were governed in all their negotiations, thy kindness, mercy and unselfishness—these qualities which are in the heart of the eternal and apart from which no permanent solutions for the world's ills will lever be found.

Hosea casts his prophecies in a mould which makes it difficult for the modern reader to follow. But beneath the strange and unusual form, the eternal heart of his message throbs through twenty centuries to our own day—as vital and life-giving as when it was just uttered, in ancient Israel.

THAT DEPRESSED FEELING is LARGELY LIVER

Wake Up Your Liver Bile . . . Without Calomel, And Feel Like a Million Dollars.

Nothing can put you quicker out of kilter more quickly than your liver. All it has to do is stop pouring daily two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels—and life certainly gets grey. Then things don't of bile always digesting and elimination and makes you "feel punk". Your stomach acts up—gas, bloating, sourness, pain. Your breath is bad and the taste in your mouth is nasty. Your head aches. Skin is pimply. All, of course, because your system is full of poisons.

Most liver movers like salts, oil, mineral water, roughage, laxative candy or chewing gum are not at all enough to correct this condition entirely. You're leery and you must wake up your liver bile to be happy again.

Avoid calomel (mercury). The thing for you is a box of Carter's Little Liver Pills. They never upset you because they're purely vegetable and mild as mother's love they do change your sour bile to good bile.

Don't waste your money on substitutes. Insist on Carter's by name—and get them! Look for the name, Carter's, on the red label. 25c. at all druggists. 80

West African Fantasia

GOLD COAST MEMORIES

The Romans said that Africa was the source of all things. Perhaps we do not quite agree with that, but if they meant all things absurd and preposterous, West Africa still fills the bill. It is a land where Bacon's Novum Organum of Science believe firmly in magic and where a gentleman with a bow and arrow drives a Ford. The country is full of such laughable absurdities, but you have also other more subtle contrasts, where you meet the interolay of Christianity, Mohammedanism, European ways, and native customs, and there is always the old inbred paganism peeping forth underneath.

Mohammedanism of course, is strong, and you may frequently meet gentlemen in zanies, long white classical robes, and red fez; yet the face always surprises. Instead of the keen, freeeyed face of the Arab you see broad, raucous negroid features. The interchange between West Africa and the main centres of Islam is far more direct than most people would suppose. It is difficult to think of the steamy jungle, with its oppressive, nightmare swamps and dark green hills, of tin-roofed mud towns and pidgin English terms of Bagdad and Mecca. Yet an old "Coaster" told me how romantically this association had been demonstrated. A Fetish was made, he said, in the Prempeh's treasure-house at the end of the Ashanti War. Several great gold ornament and bracelet design were found; these on examination were found to be Crusaders' swords, used in Palestine in the eleventh and twelfth centuries, and one actually proved to bear the arms of our own Richard Coeur de Lion. What a history these swords must have had, handed from tribe to tribe, from desert to jungle, traveling thousands of miles through the centuries, and to return at last to the hands of the people whence they came—the English.

Touaregs

Once, I myself, saw three Touaregs —the nomadic, veiled horsemen of the Sahara—suddenly appear out of the bush and walk up to the Gold Coast mine-too where I was working at the time. It was a blazing day. They asked in the universal sign language the way to the coast. Their horses had died in a bottle bog further north, and they were strange figures in this alien country, a thousand miles from the desert. They wore little charms round their necks which, they indicated, came from Mecca, painted bits of pasteboard and beads. The local boys crowded round, with their eyes popping out less these things. But they would not part with them on any account. Fantastic offers were made, and boys offered as much as $25 (a vast sum to him) for a little black object which he knew was "some ju-ju proper." They were all disappointed and in a few minutes the strange travellers had plodded away to the south.

Polygamy is permitted by law to both Mohammedan and Christian, and a native obtains a wife by paying what is known as "head money" to her family and presenting the local chief with a bottle of gin. This is a fascinating custom. "Head money" ranges from $25 to $75, according to the lady's fetiness, and most boys have all their spare money to buy more wives. Modern methods of finance have now penetrated this system, however and a kind of hire-purchase is possible. My head furniture boy once came to me in great trouble. He still owed his father-in-law $3, on his wife; the father-in-law had just lost a relative and so wanted ready cash to provide the customary quantities of palm wine at the funeral. If he did not pay up the father-in-law would summon him, he said, and "all time he trouble me plenty-too much, so I no fit to leave my house and come to work at all." My department could hardly run without him, I paid the money and my boy paid me the instalments for his wife instead.

The Cheerful Funeral

As I discovered several times, a funeral out there is a great occasion for celebration. It is, in fact, an exaggerated counterpart of our own ceremony of "burying him with ham." and the death of a relative is rather a cheerful event, if anything, as it provides such an excellent opportunity for a "burst" and the consumption of a great quantity of palm wine. And so when the cook comes to you grinning cheerfully, he says, "My brother he die. I want go to my country," and then bursts out laughing and hugs himself, you realise that it is but sober fact and not the office-boy's grandmother story badly told. And so, of course, you give him leave, and you can be sure he will not be fit for work again for about a week. If your department is run smoothly you must keep your boys' relatives in good health.

Not only that, but a large number of funerals, if you are in earshot of the village, would rapidly drive you crazy. Next to drinking palm wine, a native loves to thump a tom-tom; and when anyone dies his relatives celebrate by keeping up a devil's tattoo for twenty-four hours, or sometimes even two days, with deadly persistence. If they have no tom-tom a kerosene tin or an old tub will do just as well, and anyone, relative or not, will come to shuffle-dance and help to beat out the rhythm out of pure piety. Their sense of rhythm is, of course, proverbial, and they will tap out the same curious, halting beat with horrid accuracy for hours, day and night—it is all one to them. The continuous shrill of the crickets and the roar of the mill faded into nothing beside it. I have often been at dinner in the mess while this maddening beat was on. It affected everyone; the steward-boys carrying the dishes seemed to shuffle alone in step with it; the very hum of the insects seemed to be in time with it, and if the conversation flagged no one could start up again because the tune seemed to bore into your brain and you could do nothing but eat mechanically moving your jaws, it seemed, in time to the measure. And that was right across the valley and we could only just see the dim figures in the glare of the bonfire they had lighted; what it was like close to, Heaven only knows.

Mr. Gandhi Among The Villagers

ENGLISHWOMAN'S ACCOUNT

Miss Agatha Harrison, who has done a great deal of social work for the Y. W. C. A. in the East, has recently returned from India, where she has been in close touch with Mr. Gandhi. She accompanied him and his party for nine days during his tour of the earthquake district in Bihar, when they travelled by train and boat and automobile. It was after his tour that Mr. Gandhi made up his mind to travel henceforth on foot, accompanied once more by a number of his friends. Miss Harrison has described her impressions during eight days spent on one of these journeys in a letter, from which extracts are here given.

Heomd myself invites Miss Harrison facing a strenuous time. Mr. Gandhi will do the difficulties before me—of walking in the heat (even though they try to escape this by only walking early in the morning and again about sunset), of every simple Indian food, of sleeping on the ground, and so on. But I said, "I want to try, and if I am a nuisance I will just stop." "Good!" he replied. And so I found myself included in the party of about twelve or fifteen people who were to accompany him.

The night before our start we all had been up till the early hours of the morning at a committee, and Mr. Gandhi himself had talked with some of the members till 2:30 a.m. We spent the first day and night in the train. The same incidents occurred as on the earthquake tour. The stations were a surge of people and he put his hand out for funds for his work. At one junction he said, "You can get your poison here, and a bath if you would like it," and detailed a man to see I got both of these. With respect to the "poison" I found this thoughful host had ordered a pound of tea to be included in our provisions!

At the horrid hour of 3:45 we reached our destination. Here, after the train had pulled out, we sat on the platform and had prayers. It is during this time and very beautiful. Then we started off across a narrow path, meeting bullock carts and field workers, beginning their day. After about four miles, we reached an ashram and had some food and baths and rest. Here we stayed for a day and a half. Mahatmaji meeting the local workers and speaking at several meetings. Then on again to our next point.

The Daily Procession

What an strange sight we must have! The procession is led by the Mahatma on each side of him he has different people from time to time. Always he rests his hands on the shoulders of each person, and goes along at an amazing pace. On each side of the path would be villagers, who left their fields and trailed along. As we neared the next place a strange contingent would meet us and swell the crowd.

We are on soon after 3:45, roll up our bedding, and get it ready for the two bullock carts that follow us; then prayers for half an hour, then a little food. A bowl of tea and that for me. Then we start off and walk for a couple or so hours, stop at some enclosure made specially for us and have baths, food, and rest. At night we sleep en famille, on the floor—all of us on a roof.

One night will always stand out in my mind. Some person had arranged a tableau—one for Mahatmaji and one for me. So I was perched on this in full view. All round were a crowd of villagers who had come from some fifteen miles radius to spend the night watching the Mahatma sleep! The volunteers tried to get them to go home, but they said they would be quiet and would not come close. They kept their promise. The next day Mr. Gandhi was very stern with them and asked them why they wasted time like this, and what was happening to their homes and farms.

Pierre Cerole joined us for two days. We both walked with Mahatmaji and talked. My shoulder is about the right height for him; in the case of Pierre Cerole it had to be his belt. The British shoulder bearing all the burden,' as the Mahatma lauchingly remarked. At another point two people from Hindustan joined us — the girl like a gipsy queen, who brought her lute with her and at night would sing some of the Poet's (Tagore's) haunting songs.

He has given me a great deal of time—we talk of everything under the sun, often, to talks about religion, and frequently uses words from the Bible. Often he says, "Bring your Bible say to-and-so?" And I have to say, "I'm not quite sure, Mahatmaji."

These have been indescribable days full of simple living and good comradeship—of listening to the things he says to the villagers. What he is saying is straightforward and very simple—about the evils of untouchability, insanitary behaviour, and dirtiness. In fact, just as he did in that. This man must leave a trail of practical ideas behind him that many will follow. They see him as one of themselves— living without a roof over his head, on simple food, up-setting no money, believing in the infinite value of each human being.

Sometimes knowing how widely he is misunderstood by many of my countrymen it is unbearable to know this man as he really is watching him at work with his divergent followers, yet seeing that among them all he has this great spiritual hold, a practical hold too, so that they have no step without first consulting him.

DIET AND SENSE

If one would be fair but not fat during the forties and fifties, the dieting should be lived with care. Tables have been worked out, after much investigation and calculation giving the normal weight for age and height. So if a person consults these tables and at the same time keeps in mind her inherited tendency, she may do much to control her weight. The normal weight at thirty is regarded as the most favourable for health, during the succeeding years.

To eat out of proportion to one's needs either on the side of insufficiency or over-abundance, is to court disaster. Too little food and an unbalanced diet takes its toll from the body, quite as much as too much food. No matter how little or how much food one may need all the food elements must be included, and the first effect when the food increases in weight above normal begins to be evident. Temperance in food is the only wholesome and certain way to regulate fat. A curb on the appetite may do much to prevent the necessity of actual and serious dieting later in life.

After a good excess of fat has accumulated, the problem of its removal without more or less damage to health becomes a difficult one. Rapid reducing diet should not be undertaken without the advice of the family physician. Many women have developed "nerves" and condemned themselves to a "poor health" as the result of ill-advised "dieting."

With the first gain in weight shown by one who is particular about what she eats, "counting the calories" will be found well worth while. It will not mean any particular hardship or sacrifice. Often a simple substitution in selection of foods will save many calories and eventually pounds of fat. Again, smaller portions than one is in the habit of eating may reduce the number of calories but keep the diet balanced and healthful.

Many fashion columnists of society, fashions will undoubtedly suggest others that are more elegant. Choose ices and sherbets in place of ice creams, parfaits and mousses. Fruit drinks in place of the too sweet "sodas, "coolers" and milk mixtures. French dressings in place of mayonnaise and salads. Boiled and thin vegetable soups in place of cream soup. These simple precautions consciously persisted in, may prevent untimely and undesirable gain in weight.

Many mothers have reason to bless Mother Graves' Worm Exterminator, because it has relieved the little ones of suffering and made them healthy.

Vassar opened with thanks to God, the giver of Life, for the life of the one who had gone on before. He spoke of the happy and helpful character of the deceased, of her spiritual life and her kindness in her own home and community. Special mention was made of her mother, who was unable to attend, and of her brothers and sisters and sons of her own family, far across the continent.

The Late Edward A. Kayler

After an illness extending over a period of several months, the death occurred at his home at Morven, on Friday afternoon, August 17th, of Mr. E. A. Kayler.

Mr. Kayler was one of the best known and most successful farmers of Ernestown Township, where he had lived all his life. He was born about seventy-six years ago on the farm now occupied by his son, Mr. H. W. Kayler. He was the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Fred Kayler, early settlers of the, township, who came to Canada from England, many years ago. He was one of eleven children, only one of whom is now surviving, Mrs. Grant, wife of Mr. Gideon Grant, K.C., of Toronto. The late Mr. C. O. Kayler, who died about two years ago, was an older brother.

Mr. Kayler's chief interest aside from his farm, was the raising of fine horses. For many years he always kept some fast horses and it was his delight to drive them at local and district race meets.

Mr. Kayler married a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Willard Hunt, man, who survives him, and had spent all his married life on the farm on which he died.

To Mr. and Mrs. Kayler were born five children. They are H. W. Kayler of Morven, Mrs. Earl Daner of Vancouver, B.C., Mr. Carlton Kayler of Edmonton, Alta., and Miss Bernice and Mr. Fullerton Kayler, at home.

The funeral was conducted Sunday morning at the family residence, by Rev. Harry Pawson, minister of Trinity United Church, Napanee, of which Mr. Kayler had been a faithful have been valued members for some years. A large number of relatives, neighbors and residents of Napanee and district, were in attendance to pay their last tribute of respect.

The Late Mr. James McCutcheon

On Sunday morning, August 5th, 1934, there passed peacefully away to his eternal reward, an aged and very highly respected citizen, in the person of Mr. James McCutcheon, of Roblin.

He was born on October 9, 1853, on the same farm where he had practically spent all his life, with the exception of a few years lived on a nearby farm. He was a man of sterling character, his word was as good as his bond; a good neighbor and friend in time of sickness and trouble, and will be greatly missed. Reared among a family of nine, and in pioneer times, he had passed through many hardships, but through it all maintained an optimistic nature.

Deceased was twice married, first to Miss Katharine Piper of Camden, who died after a few years of wedded happiness, leaving him with two children, a son, Melville McCutcheon, who resides on the homestead, and a daughter, Ethel, now Mrs. Stuart Shetler, near Napanee. He later married Miss Elizabeth McKeown of Croydon, who has been his faithful helpmeet for nearly forty years, and who still survives.

His funeral was held Tuesday morning, August 7th, from his late home to Roblin United Church, of which he was a loyal supporter and was conducted by his pastor, Rev. Foot Craig. The remains were placed in Roblin cemetery.

Deepest sympathy goes out to the bereaved family, who are left to mourn a faithful husband and father.

The Late Mrs. Harvey Lake

The body of the late Mrs. Harvey Lake, who died at Kingsville, Ont., Saturday, August 18, was brought to Napanee on Monday for burial at Wilton Cemetery.

The late Mrs. Lake, who was 96 years of age, was the widow of Harvey Lake of Sydenham, who died in 1907. She was a sister of the late Peter and James Miller of Switzerville. After her marriage to Mr. Lake, she lived for some time at Murvale and later at Sydenham. Thirteen years ago she moved to Kingsville to be with her daughter, Mrs. Baldwell.

She is survived by one son, Calvin, of Sydenham and two daughters, Mrs. Baldwell of Kemptville, and Mrs. Geo. Vanhyen of Toledo, Ohio. Her two daughters accompanied her body to Napanee on Monday for the interment which took place in the family plot at Wilton Cemetery.

Local S. A. Corps Attend Festival At Belleville

About fifty members of the local Salvation Army Corps were in Belleville last Wednesday attending the united field day, held in Victoria Park.

The event was arranged by Major Frances Brown of London, England, a visitor in Canada for some months. It was the first of its kind held in Canada, and was such a great success that it may become an annual affair. Army Field Days are frequently held in the Old Land and grove of great value to the work.

Ensign Russell and Lieut. Sharp, of Napanee arranged for transportation, which was made possible by the use of Mr. Moore's truck, driven by Frank Babcock, and by several motor cars. Besides the Belleville Corps, large numbers from Campbellford, Kingston, Napanee, Picton, Trenton and Tweed, were present. It is estimated nearly 1,000 persons were in attendance. Bands from Cobourg, Picton and Belleville provided the music.

Two separate programs were presented one at three in the afternoon, the other at seven in the evening. In the absence of Mayor Tice, an official welcome was extended by a member of the City Council. The programs were almost entirely musical in character. Included were band selections, instrumental solos and duets, vocal solos and hymn singing. Mrs. James Thompson and Mrs. Alex. Stevens of the Napanee Corps, contributed a guitar and harmonica duet.

At the interval, between five and seven o'clock, refreshments were served.

The event was brought to a close with fireworks and a grand march to the Belleville Citadel.

Late Rev. W. B. Tucker Was Former County Minister

Rev. William B. Tucker, founder and head of the Montreal City Mission, died in Bristol, Eng., recently. Mr. Tucker was formerly a minister of the Methodist Church and was stationed in Hastings County and around Napanee, some years ago.

He came to Northumberland County at the age of twelve years. At the age of eighteen years of farm life he became a school teacher, near Belleville, and then a lay preacher. Shortly afterwards, Rev. Dr. Wellington Jeffers sent him as a missionary into the northern townships of Hastings, where he preached to quarrely mixed groups, consisting mostly of German immigrants, gathered by two Oxford men, a former editor from Liverpool and others of rich education.

Further schooling in Victoria University followed and then he went out on circuit work near Napanee, Ont., and later in many other frontier and urban communities.

In 1889 he and Rev. Frederick Stephenson founded the Montreal City Mission. He was an ex-president of the Methodist Missionary Ministerial Association and for four years, its secretary.

Surviving him are three daughters and a son. They are Miss Edith M. Tucker, Mrs. Bruce Adams of Montreal, Mrs. Harry Rake of Chateauguay and William Tucker.

The funeral was held in Bristol, England, and a memorial service was conducted in Montreal.

OBITUARY

MRS. DELBERT COOK

Oshawa, August 20.—The death occurred at her home early this morning of Mrs. Delbert Cook, 74 Drew Street, Oshawa, in her fifty-third year. Although she had been in failing health for some time, her passing came as a distinct shock to her family and many friends in Oshawa. Born in Napanee, Mrs. Cook was Miss Laura Louise Toppings before her marriage, and had resided in Oshawa for many years. She was a member of the King Street United Church and an active worker in the W. M. S. and Ladies' Aid, as well as in the cause of the W. C. T. U. Surviving are her husband; two daughters, Mrs. Lena Sills and Miss Ruth Cook, both at home, and three sons, William, of Orillia; Ross and Stanley, of Oshawa. The funeral takes place from the family residence this (Wednesday) afternoon, with interment in Union Cemetery.

SEARING ROAST BEEF

Contrary to general opinion among those who cook at an even internal searing of beef in roasting, with a view to prevent the escape of juices and more volatile constituents, is not important. As a matter of fact recent scientific experiments in the cooking of meat have shown that while searing lessens the time, it increases the losses in cooking. Seared roasts, it is true, brown better than those cooked at an even temperature throughout, but, on the other hand, roasts cooked at the lower temperature throughout are sufficiently brown to be attractive and they are more evenly cooked. They are less likely to be cooked too much on the outside and extremely rare in the centre. These experiments have proved that, while a slightly longer period is necessary when cooking at a lower temparture this was formerly thought advisable, the lower temperature produces a more evenly cooked roast with considerably less shrinkage and loss of fat and the volatile elements.—Beef, How to Choose and Cook It Bulletin. Dominion Department of Agriculture.

ORCHARD MULCHES

When the grass is cut in the spaces between the trees of the orchard and used for a mulch it should be applied while still green. When dry hay is used, it will not begin to decompose until soaked by rain. In the meantime, it constitutes a serious fire hazard and the trees suffer. Before the mulch is delayed As a general rule, where grass is used as a mulch, it should applied before July 1 and after the terminal buds have been formed in the new wood in late the summer. It is also desirable that the early summer application be comparatively light, two or three inches of green grass being sufficient, so that it wil ble decomposed by the middle of August, in order to permit the trees to mature and ripen the new wood. According to the practices of the Dominion Experimental Farms, the most satisfactory time to apply mulch is in the late fall, or early winter, when the material can be tramped into the snow as this is done, it will not be moved by winds and will be found lying compact and close to the ground in the following spring. Furthermore, with the material in this condition, decomposition will rapidly begin with the advent of warm weather, after which a mulch will rarely, if ever, get dry enough to burn.

Canadian Recovery on Firm Foundation

BY CY ROGER W. BABSON

Business has been rising steadily since last summer. The present level of activity is 50 per cent above its depression low and has made a new recovery high this year. The revival in the Dominion has shown more sustained vigor and vitality than that in the United States. As in the States, however, Canadian activity is now slowing up, but any weakness which lies ahead should be only a temporary breathing spell in the undamental upward trend.

No Turning Back for Canada

The interesting thing about Canada's recovery is the fact that there has been no artificial stimulation. Demands have been made to have the Dominion imitate the experiments tried in the United States, but those in control of Canadian affairs have made few concessions. Much sound judgment and great courage have been shown and consequently the Dominion's recovery is built on a firm foundation. Canada is not trying to borrow her way back to prosperity. She has not set up huge bureaucracies to hamper business in the future. Hence, I feel that Canada will not have to tear down and rebuild. She has definitely turned the depression tide.

Now, let us look more closely at the keystone of Canadas revival. Electric power output, in itself a good index of business, is 24 per cent above a year ago. Automobile production for 1934 to date is 116 per cent greater than in the same period of 1933. Industrial activity in general is 70 per cent above the depression bottom, while bank debits are 42 per cent higher. Car loadings, although off slightly from their peak, have made a 35 per cent advance in the same period. Newsprint production has recently been declining, but output for the first half of 1934 was 41 per cent greater than in the first six months of 1933.

Canada Benefits From World Crop Disaster

The agricultural situation is the high spot of Canada's business picture at present. Indications now point to a wheat crop at least as good as last year's harvest. At the same time the United States will have the smallest wheat crop in nearly fifty years. The harvest will be very short in Europe, Russia and China; while Canada's dry weather is reported in both Argentina and Australia. Canadian wheat has already advanced well above 85 cents a bushel and should go higher during coming months. With both prices all around and a comparatively good crop in Canada, Dominion farmers stand to benefit from large increased exports.

Canada's mining industry is continuing at the high level of recent months. Mineral output—gold, silver, nickel, and copper—is approximately 30 per cent higher than a year ago. On the other hand, the stagnation in the building industry, as in the United States, is a serious depressing factor. Construction, while above the low point of the depression, is lagging far behind other industries. The tourist business, which suffered so badly in 1933, is making a sharp comeback. High cost of travel in France, unsettled conditions in Italy and Europe and excessive heat in the United States are bringing to Canada thousands of new vacationists this year.

Trade and Employment Increasing

For the past four or five years the decline in Canada's foreign trade has been a most serious problem. This was reflected in the weakness of the Canadian dollar two years ago. The Ottawa Trade Pact has been in force since 1932 and most economists agree that it has given Canada a decided advantage in Empire trade. In 1933-34 Canada reported the largest favorable trade balance since 1927 and an actual improvement of about 15 per cent over 1932-33. The increase included a gain in both exports and imports. An advance in imports is very important because customs duties are a big source of government revenues. Thus, Canada has made excellent progress toward a balanced budget in the last year.

The remarkable increase in employment throughout the Dominion is perhaps the soundest indicator of Canada's recovery. Latest reports show that 20 per cent more people are now being employed than a year ago at this time. In the United States, the problem has been met by placing millions directly and indirectly on government payrolls. In Canada, however, the unemployment situation has been met with only a minimum of aid from the government and no NRA, CCC or CWA programs have been adopted. The Dominion, this year, is spending about $4.60 for every man, woman, and child for relief, while in the United States the amount will be over $26 per capita.

Government Not Financing Recovery

With laudable courage, Canada has made strenuous efforts to keep her costs in line with her revenues during the depression. She has heavy fixed charges which could not be reduced, but other expenses have been slashed to the bone. Appropriations for emergency relief have been held to the minimum. It is believed government expenses in 1934 will be less than in 1933. The entire monetary system of the Dominion is on a sound basis which, after all, is a bulwark in any nation's economic setup. With rising revenues and declining expenses, the time is rapidly approaching when Canada's burget will be balanced.

Canadian citizens are to be congratulated that they are not riding along in a recovery automobile bought on borrowed money. The former cost of the Dominion an increase of only 17 per cent in the national debt in the last four years. This contrasts with an increase of 40 per cent in the debt of the United States, 32 per cent in Germany's and 25 per cent in apan's. The initiative and aggressiveness of the Canadian people in relying on themselves, rather than their government, to lift the country out of the depression, will be rewarded in the years ahead. The day of reckoning lies before those nations who are trying to lift themselves by their bootstraps.

BASEBALL NEWS

By C. E. GIBBARD.

Congratulations to Gilbbard B's.

They won a tough series from Enterprise that reminded one of the hectic series that the locals used to play with Odessa.

Congratulations to Enterprise, too!

They put a real battle. It is tough to lose a game, and a series and a championship all in one day on a game like Saturday's, but that is baseball.

The first club which the B's meet in the Ontario play-downs is Sydenham. The game is at Napanee on Saturday, August 25th, at 3.30 p.m., play-time. Sydenham are the champions of the Frontenac County League. This should be a great series.

On Thursday night, at 6 o'clock, fast time, the Junior play-off will take place at the baseball park. The Cardinals, of Kingston, and the Crystallaces, of Belleville, are playing off for the right to go on in the Ontario play-downs, each having won their home game. These teams are playing a sparkling brand of ball, and we hope the local fans will turn out and give them a break. It costs money to carry these junior clubs, and the management of both clubs will appreciate support from the Napanee fans. The game is at 6 o'clock, fast time, Thursday night, in the local park.

THE HAVEN OF LOVE

BY JUDSON BERNARD

The sun shone down brightly upon the little garden of pilox and gladioli. No less brightly did it shine on a figure; bending low over a mulberry hedge; inspecting one of the most remarkable creations for whose welfare he held himself responsible. The tall, blond, handsome, immaculately white flannel clothed figure of Perde Lyons, the idol of every girl in town.

Everyone had read his books and every one played, whistled, hummed or sang his songs. As a matter of fact, both old and young came to him with their most intimate problems. In each case sympathetic friendly, helpful advice on love, business or some other problem, whatever might be the subject at hand, was given. Many were given something much more substantial than advice.

The people who came to him, had never guessed the secret behind the winning smile and the kind but sad grey eyes. The secret had been locked in his heart for so long. Perde had almost forgotten where and when it had had its birth. Only on the occasions when a new love song or a story was being written, did the old pain return, and with the pain the phrase "— but she could never tie herself down to a cripple."

Like all people who have ever had or ever will have a deformity either by birth or by accident, he was very self-conscious about his limp.

When a child he had fallen out of a tree, breaking his leg. It had not knit properly, and had left his leg slightly shorter than his good leg.

As he bent, inspecting the birdnest, he heard a slight rustle on the travel path behind him. Turning he faced Sonia Ryden, — suave, petite, wise-cracking, sophisticated, wealthy Sonia; she whom he had secretly loved since his early school days.

As he met her gaze his heart began to thump wildly, but in an almost steady voice said, "Good afternoon Sonia. Come on over here and see what secrets I share with the little yellow birds.

"Hello, Perde," replied Sonia in a voice weighted by woe. "Birds are such fortunate things; I don't believe that I could bear confiding anything symbolic of contentment.

"They aren't nearly so fortunate as one might think. They have to protect themselves and their young against all sorts of dangers and harm. They quite often have great difficulty in obtaining food." replied Perde.

"What I meant was; they are so much more fortunate than we humans. They never have to make a decision which has already been made for them. They don't have to like, without anyone or anything interefering or saying a word to them."

"Aren't you in a blue mood today Sonia? Come on over here in the shade and tell me what you have on your mind." Just being able to share her problems with the presence of impersonalism, was a source of great satisfaction to Perde. It meant more to him than Sonia could ever guess. Unable to trust himself to take her arm, Perde thrust his hands forcibly into his pockets.

Together they walked, in silence, each struggling with their own emotions; to a spot where gay colored lawn chairs were invitingly placed in the shade of a large willow tree.

"Sit down Sonia, and tell me your story. You know I'll use it however, if I can, in some one of my future stories." He thought how inadequate that last phrase was, if he could just tell her what he felt, and be near, — as near as he was now—to her always.

"I don't care what you do with it, but please listen to me." Tears were smarting her eyes, but she was fighting with all her strength to keep them back.

"Don't interrupt me Perde, and I'll start at the beginning and tell you everything." Tears were now dropping on her carefully rouged cheek. With the tears all sophistication drained from her like a cloak.

"A couple of years ago, when I first came home from school, Dad asked me to be nice to Tad Morrison—the banker's son, of course but getting home, I was content to renew acquaintances and to meet the new crowd.

"One afternoon at Patricia Martin's I met Tad. I fell; or I thought that I did; for him almost immediately. We saw a lot of each other, went everywhere together. Before very long I began to realize that I wasn't in love with Tad. What I had felt for him was just a case of infatuation.

"The other day Dad told me he was making plans for me to marry Tad. That same night Tad asked me to marry him. We quarreled when I refused. He accused me of all sorts of mean nasty things, which were quite untrue and unfounded. As usual, I flew up and walked home. When I got home; Tad, the damned pest, has been there before me and told his tale of sadness and woe; of course Dad was waiting for me. We had a scene that I'll never get out. He told me not to come back until I was ready to marry Tad, and see that I was. Well I left home and went to the hotel. Since then I've prayed for help. I honestly believe my prayer has been answered, for I have had an uncontrollable urge to come back all day. Perde, I've lived these last two days in a hell that I can't even begin to describe."

Hysteria enfolded her speech stifling of a severe mental strain. Tears were flowing unheeded and freely down her cheeks and deep, genuine sobs were convulsively shaking her body.

Perde reached out his hand and took Sonia's limp, cold one.

In a voice choked with emotion he commanded, "You poor kid."

"My God, Perde, I couldn't marry Tad. I don't love him. It would only be torture for us both and would end up in the divorce courts. I couldn't stand that.

"God, when He put us here on earth didn't intend for us to live with a person without loving them. I have only loved one person ever since I can remember, but—he—he is so big, so fine and wonderful that I could never hope for him to love me. Me! a cheap little flirt.

"Oh, Perde, can't you see — don't you know. This isn't exactly pleasant, but I'm going to tell you—

"Perde I love you, love you — I love you so much Perde that I'm willing to do anything for you. I've loved you for so long. I can't remember when I started to love you. It was in the big Lake days I think.

How they got to a standing position, they have done everything, neither knew. But they did know that heaven is somewhere between earth and sky, and that the two first kiss all earthly things fell away and they were hiding in the clouds.

While they exchanged kisses all doubts of each other's love were forever banished. All disadvantages of Perde's 'bad leg' were forgotten.

They both realized and felt in their minds and hearts that at last they could watch the world roll madly by, while they lived secure in a world of their own making. A world—a paradise of love, dreams, understanding and companionship; a haven of love.

Outlook For Tourist Trade Best Since 1929

The Composite Index of Canadian busines sfor June is unchanged from the May level—15% below "normal." This is the peak of activity since September began. Business is now 47% above the depression low and 17% above last year. This is the highest level of activity for the Dominion since mid-summer, 1931. The most active lines of industry today are mining, textiles, rubber, paper, lumber, fur, and meat products. Hence, these industries offer the best prospects for sales campaigns during the next two or three months.

Newsprint production continues at a high rate of activity—it is now approaching a new high since 1929. While latest figures show gains in expenditures for home and office construction, the building industry is actually one of the laggards in the Dominion's recovery. The Government's $40,000,000 public work program, however ,will boost construction figures over the next few months. Increased freight loadings are also a reliable barometer of the speeding up of distribution of goods. Electric power is one of the most bullish indicators in the present-day picture—output is 46% above this time last year.

Employment totals are the best in three years with 29% more people having jobs today than a year ago. The manufacturing industries deserve the most credit for this improvement. In the banking picture, the highlight is the continued low level of commercial loans outstanding and the steady increase in deposits. Looking ahead, this is optimistic for the basis is now being laid for a period of rapid expansion in credit. The feature of the summer outlook is the excellent prospect for the tourist trade. In 1933 tourists spent $117,000,000 in Canada, compared with $700,000,000 in the peak year of 1929. In 1934, however, publicity efforts by the various local governments are being rewarded by good advance bookings for travel and resort accommodations. The very unfavorable European exchange rates and the recent Nazi "putsch" in Germany, are keeping Americans at home. Furthermore, the boom in automobile production both here and in the United States, plus Canada's wonderful natural resources, promise the best year in the tourist trade since 1929.

BOOK MIDGETS AND MONSTERS

In the hope of producing the smallest book in the world, a printer of Worcester, Mass., has published forty-six of the hundred-and-one quatrains of Omar Khayyam in a volume half the size of a postage stamp. It is doubtful, however, if the claim to be the world's smallest book will hold good, for the Earl of Dufferin, who was Viceroy of India in 1884, was the owner of a book that was said then to be the smallest in the world. It was "about" half the size of a British penny postage stamp, and perhaps that "qualifying term may mean that it was a little smaller than the Massachusetts "Omar." It contained the text of the Rig-Veda, and was about thick as it was long, so that, on that count, it might lose to the American production, which is very thin and weighs less than a grain.

The craze for these books in miniature has produced some interesting curiosities, such as "The Tale of Troy in Verse" in midget folio—that is, an inch and a half by one inch—which was published in 1604. The "Thumb" Bible which John Taylor, the "Water Poet," brought out in 1693 was not much bigger than a postage stamp and was a versified epitome of every book in the Scriptures. It was the forerunner of many midget Bibles, one of which, in London's Guildhall Museum, measures only three-quarters of an inch by five-eighths and may justly claim to be the smallest in the world.

At the other end of the scale there are the giant books, some of which are to be found in the Escurial and measure six feet in height by four in breadth; monsters that, together with the midgets, make one understand Andrew Lang's fondness for the "dear and the dumpy twelves" that filled his bookcases.—Miscellany.

Vice-president, Mrs. R. Vandyke conducted the rest of the meeting. Current events were read, followed by the roll call, which was answered by "a summer drink," and some interesting clippings were read.

A piano solo by Miss Helen Wright was enjoyed by all, after which an interesting paper on education, was given by Mrs. H. G. Claringbold. She stressed the point that for teachers to succeed in educating the children, they should have the full co-operation of the parents. Alovely piano duet by Misses Elizabeth and Marion Wright, followed. Paper by Mrs. N. Galt on historical research, dealt with "One Hundred Years of Muddy York," or Toronto a hundred years ago. As it is centennial year at Toronto, it was a very timely paper. A delightful piano solo by Miss Evelyn Ackerman, was greatly enjoyed. Miss Edna Morrow read a poem, "The Cattle in the Stall," from the interesting book of that name. Miss Ruth Sanders sang a solo, very sweetly. Moved by Mrs. M. Young, seconded by Mrs. Galt, that a vote of thanks be extended to all who helped to make the program a success.

20TH ANNIVERSARY MAPLE LEAF W'I.

The 20th anniversary of the Maple Leaf Women's Institute of Lennox County was held last Thursday, Aug. 14th, at the North Fredericksburgh Town Hall. The afternoon was ideal and the attendance very pleasing. Covers were laid for nine tables with one long table arranged for the past and present officers. The hall was tastefully decorated with buntine and flags and flowers, while the tables were decorated with the Institute colors with marigolds and blue delphiniums. At the long table at which was centred with a birthday cake were noticed place cards bearing the names of Mrs. Bruce Robinson and Mrs. Fred Allison, the District President and Secretary of seventy years ago; Mrs. Loynes and Mrs. Young, the present District President and Secretary; the past presidents and secretaries and the present president and secretary.

The meeting opened by singing the Institute rally and ode. The roll call was responded to by every member giving the name of some pioneer member. The minutes were read and approved. The minutes of the first meeting, held twenty years ago at the home of the president, Mrs. Brisco, were read by Mrs. Will Freels, the first secretary and who retained their position for twelve years.

The president, Mrs. Day, then asked all to stand while she read the names of the deceased members and to remain in silence for two minutes, in fond memory. Flowers were donated in memory of the departed members.

Mrs. R. M. Black favored us with a beautiful piano number which was followed by the address of the afternoon, by Mrs. Loynes, who chose for her subject, "the Nail, the Screw and the Pot of Glue," making a comparison of how Institute members can be held together in true citizenship. Mrs. Young brought greetings from the Conway branch. Mrs. J. B. Miller, a past president, was then invited to address the meeting, which she very ably did and gave a brief summary of her work while holding office particularly Red Cross work.

Mrs. J. W. Cumming, past president, gave a summary of work done during her turn of office, particularly the schools and renovating the Town Hall. After another piano number by Mrs. Black, lunch was served by six young ladies, all dressed in white. After the lunch was finished and the birthday cake cut by Mrs. Brisco, a toast to the King was proposed by Mrs. Loynes, which was responded to by all singing the National Anthem. Mrs. J. B. Miller proposed a toast to the Institute, which was responded to by Mrs. Will Freels.

Just as this juncture, two lovely little girls, Dorothy Storey and Dorothy Cuthill, each with a huge bouquet of gladiolus, came forward and presented them to Mrs. Brisco and Mrs. Will Freels, for their pioneer work.

A very pleasant gathering concluded with the singing of "God be with You Till we Meet Again," and many good wishes for another anniversary.

MORVEN W. M. S.

The regular meeting of the Women's Missionary Society was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Sharp. Hymn 81 and prayer by Rev. A. E. Oliver. I Corinthians, the thirteenth chapter, was read by Mrs. J. Sharp, and the usual business period followed. A reading given by Miss Stella Craig was much enjoyed.

Mrs. C. L. Sharp told us of their recent boat trip from Vancouver to Alaska, which was most interesting, describing the appearance of the mountains along the coast.

Miss Jean Milling, Napanee, closed the meeting with a very beautiful story of a lady who eventually, by her entire consecration, was instrumental in winning many for the missionary cause.

At the close of the meeting, a delicious lunch was served us.

MORVEN LADIES' AID

The August meeting of the Ladies' Aid was held at the home of Mrs. J. B. Sharp and was opened by the president, Mrs. William Withers, in the chair. A hymn was sung and prayer was offered by Mrs. Street. The roll was answered by Biblical verses containing the word "Love." Another hymn was sung after which the business was transacted. Plans were laid for the annual lawn social and various committees were formed.

An instrumental was given by Miss Stella Craig and an interesting reading read by Mrs. MacCormick.

The closing hymn was followed by the Mizpah benediction.

WILTON WOMEN'S INSTITUTE

On Tuesday afternoon last, Mrs. W. C. Snider, president of Wilton W. I., welcomed about forty-five members and friends to her home for the August meeting. The meeting opened with the ode, followed by the Lord's Prayer. Roll call was answered with "Uses of common salt." The minutes of the last meeting and the financial statement were given by the secretary. It was decided to donate two dollars toward financing trips to Ottawa, of girls competing in judging work. The name of Mrs. A. E. Boulton was added to those occupying the flats and flowers committee.

A splendid paper on current events was given by Mrs. Fred Sharpe. Mrs. Gladys Wallace contributed a piano solo. A comic reading, "Poor Pa," was read by Mrs. Arthur Burt. The guest speaker of the afternoon, Miss Ruth P. Fletcher of Odessa, had chosen as her subject "A Mother's Influence," and she gave us a very fine address. Mrs. K. Martin rang a vocal solo which was accompanied at the piano by Miss Marion Miller. A very nice demonstration of cress paper pottery was given by Mrs. Maitland Boulton.

Mrs. W. C. Snider extended thanks to all who contributed toward the program, and especially to Mrs. Fletcher.

The meeting came to a close with the National Anthem after which a social half hour was much enjoyed.

TYENDINAGA EAST W. I.

The regular monthly meeting of the Tyendinaga East Women's Institute was held at the home of Mrs. Fred Kimmerly on Friday, Aug. 10th. It was grandmothers' day and children's day combined. After the opening exercises, the roll call was unanimously answered by „Grandmother's Maiden Name,' many of the visitors answering also. The minutes of the previous meeting were read and approved. The topic was "what grandmother as a boy and girl were nice's given by Mrs. P. German showing in humorous side of life as well. Mrs. Fred Husband then gave a demonstration on "frosting a cake" The cake of plain was very prettily decorated with flowers and an inscription of "Grandmother," in colours, was cut by the eldest grandmother present, in the person of Mrs. Robert English, mother of the hostess. A second roll call was answered by the children, "my favorite pet," six suitable replies being given. The children then presented each of the six grandmothers present with a beautiful floral spray. A delectable luncheon was then served by the hostesses, including a treat for the children. The meeting was closed by singing the National Anthem.

During the meeting it was decided for the members to hold a corn roast at the home of Mrs. E. Whittington, on Wednesday, August 29th. An evenings entertainment of games and music will be conducted. Recipes & Hints

It is the desire of "The Beaver" to devote this section of the paper, regularly, to the publication of Recipes and Household Hints, received from local women or women's organizations. We would be pleased to receive recipes and suggestions and would withold or publish the contributors' names, as requested. Contributions will be used as space permits.

(Send them in early in the week.)

LIMA BEAN AND CELERY SALAD

Two cups lima beans -canned or carefully cooked dried ones', one cup diced celery, one tablespoon minced onion, two tablespoons shredded green pepper, two tablespoons grated cheese French dressing. The green pepper, if coarse, may be omitted, but it gives a pleasing touch of color. A vivid yellow cheese is attractive, too, if available. Mix celery, onion and pepper, tossing lightly to avoid crushing beans. Pour on French dressing and arrange on crisp lettuce. Garnish with grated cheese and serve more French dressing in a separate sauce boat.

BARBECUED HAM

Cut large slices of cold boiled ham and fry them in their own fat. Prepare a sauce to pour over them by various parts ground mustard, of each vinegar and sugar, and a little made mustard and pepper, to the fat left in the pan. Lay the slices of ham in a hot dish. Add the sauce and serve at once.

TOFFEE FRUITS

Toffee fruits, although they look most professional, are really simple and quick to make, and they are an original novelty to serve with coffee or at a party. They look attractive in bon-bon dishes. Make the toffee by boiling two pounds of sugar in one pint of water. Mix two teaspoonfuls of cream of tartar with the sugar before cooking. While the toffee is cooking the fruits should be prepared — such as skinned whole grapes, orange sections, pineapple cubes ,apple slices, nut kernels, and grapefruit quarters. When the toffee almost candies dip each fruit into the hot toffee and leave it to harden.

DATES AND CREAM

Dates and cream are delicious together, particularly if the dates have been stewed and chilled some time before serving. Allow two teacupfuls of water to every half-pound of stoned dates. Place the dates and water in a pan and add the juice and grated rind of one lemon. Then add one tablespoonful of sugar to each half-pound of dates. Cook gently for not more than thirty minutes. Strain of the juice. Pile the dates on a dish and, when cold, pour round the juice and serve with cream.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

A PIECE OF PUMPKIN—

To keep cut pumpkins and marrows from becoming mouldy keep handy a piece of notepaper or any paper with a good surface, brown will do. As soon as you cut the pumpkin or marrow, seal up the place by covering it with paper. The moist beads which ooze out will serve as glue. Do not use a porous paper, as this will absorb the moisture. The soft seeds may be taken away as well as the pulpy part, and if this is done cover the space with paper. Then put the vegetable in a very dry, warm place; the sun will not injure it, but on no account allow rain or dew to get on it. Treated this way a pumpkin or marrow will keep from two weeks to a month.

FOR MINT SAUCE—

Gather some mint, chop finely, and place in wide-mouthed bottles. Boil vinegar, pour over the mint, and cork. When needed, take out the required amount and sweeten. Mint thus treated will keep good for months.

CURDLED SALAD DRESSING—

When mayonnaise is inclined to curdle, mix it again into a bowl which contains the yolk of an egg, and it will become smooth.

NEWS AND INFORMATION FOR THE BUSY FARMER

(Furnished by the Ontario Department of Agriculture)

Early Topping of Turnips

Three years of investigation of the effects of cutting turnips tops for green feed some weeks before the roots are pulled conducted by the Division of Chemistry, have proved that the practice is not profitable. A storage of nutrients takes place in the turnips during the autumn weeks and this storage is checked by early topping.

Control of External Parasites of Poultry

Lice and mites are often the cause of poor egg production during hot weather. Body lice can be controlled by the use of blue ointment applied beneath the wings and around the vent. Dusting off the birds at night and living in cracks and crevices during the day have to be treated differently. Ordinary coal-oil will kill the mites, but as it evanorates quickly the effects are not lasting. An excellent "paint" to apply to the roosts and nest boxes is cocmposed of one part crude carbolic or, possibly better still, nicotine sulphate, to three of four parts of coal-oil or a mixture of coal-oil and crank case oil.

Wilmot Township Solves Roadside Weed Problem

For 19 years cows have been allowed to pasture on the 120 miles of Wilmot Township roads in Waterloo County. The Township Council charges a rental of $2 each for the first and second cows of a herd, $2.50 for the third, fourth, $3.00 fifth, $2.50 sixth $4.00, seventh $4.50, eighth and above $5 each. This sliding scale of charges is arranged to assist the small farmer from 1 to 4 or 5 cows.

The average yearly revenue derived from this source is $1,152. The annual cost of weed cutting ,on Wilmot Township roads is $500 which leaves a tidy annual credit balance in the treasury. Roadsides in this township are among the cleanest in the province. Few, if any, accidents have ever been reported, probably due to the fact that cows are not allowed to pasture on roadsides at night.

There are approximately 5,500 miles of township roads in Ontario. Using Wilmot township as a basis calculation, a total of $400,000 could be collected in rentals. Roadsides are cleaner where pastured and the cost of weed cutting is greatly reduced. With the shortage of pasture, falling municipal revenue and as a source of reduced weed control costs, this plan appears to have many features which would warrant its trial in other municipalities.

Prepare for Fall Crops

To insure having a supply of lettuce; spinach, radish and Chinese cabbage for fall use, the seed should be sown, at this time.

The varieties that are best adapted, according to the Dominion Horticulturist, are Grand Rapids and Iceberg lettuce; King of Denmark and Princess Juliana spinach; Chilli and Petsai Chinese cabbage, and Scarlet Turnip, White of Scarlet Globe radish.

Should the soil be quite dry it is important to open the drills and if irrigation is available apply sufficient water to moisten the soil, and as soon as the land has dried so as to not be sticky, the seeding should be done.

Suggestions in Preparing Sheaves for Competition

In connection with sheaves for competition, J. A. Carroll, superintendent of Agricultural Societies, says that in the first place, consideration should be given to competition rules governing size of sheaf, etc. A minimum of eight inches in diameter means a fair measurement at the center binder.

Freedom from disease and blemishes is essential and only heads true to variety should be chosen. Some exhibitors cut a number of sheaves in a good part of the field and from these make a selection. A much better way is to choose uniform dual stalks from standing grain. This may be done by walking in from the fence when cutting is in progress. Plants should be cut close to the ground with a pair of scissors.

When two or three times the amount required for a sheaf has been collected, it should be placed on a rack or table to dry, protected from the weather, particularly rain and dew. A few boards on trestels in a loft or drive shed should be suitable. A piece of cheese cloth or other light material spread over the heads would afford protection from birds.

Every straw in an exhibition sheaf should be stripped of leaves or flags. This may be done by taking a small handful of 40 or 50 at a time. In this process any diseased or faulty specimens should be rejected.

The round form desired may be achieved most easily by the use of a mould of some kind. Some exhibitors use three hoops nailed to a bar or left open at the top for the entrance of straws. These hoops should be considerably larger than the size required for a bound sheaf.

The next step is to place binders and draw tightly after which a sharp knife should be used to even off the butt squarely. Any straws which may break, leaving the heads hanging down, may be removed with scissors. Ribbons for decorative purposes may be added.

A box or crate of light but strong materials, should be made and preferably provided with hinged lid. A suitable size for wheat would be 16 inches by 16 inches by 6 feet. Oats would require a larger crate, probably 18 inches by 18 inches by 6 feet. While a shorter box would be placed inside to support the head end of the sheaf.

Package Bees

There are approximately 5,030 bese in a pound and they may be obtained in packages holding one or more pounds, but the two-pound one appears to be the most popular for all purposes. There are, however, many beekeepers, especially in eastern Canada, who prefer a three-pound package, thinking that the extra pound of bees will enable the new colony to build up more rapidly. But, says Mr. C. B. Gooderham, the Dominion Apiarist, experiments with the two sizes of packages do not seem to warrant this assumption for the two-pound packages will usually build up as rapidly and store just as much honey as do the three-pound packages. If the bees are young and the less during transportation not excessive, there are enough of them in a two-pound package to care for all the brood that can be produced by the queen, and the colony will build up as well without the excess workers.

Club work among the rural boys and girls has been very successful this year.

The gardens in the Boys' Home Garden Club and the Girls' Garden and Canning Clubs ,Junior and Senior have been judged and we are well pleased, with the results so far. These clubs will make a special exhibit at the Lennox Fair on September 10th, 11th and 12th. Marks have been awarded on the gardens and will be added to the marks of the exhibits and the awards based on the total. Cash prizes are being offered.

The Boys' Dooley Potato Club will also have their Achievement Day in connection with the Lennox Fair. Eighteen boys received a bag of certified Dooley seed potatoes in the spring and planted and cared for them. The Potato Inspector, Mr. O. W. Lachaine, Department of Horticulture, Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph, will be in the County this week to inspect each member's plot of potatoes. The Club has been the means of the boys getting a good start with certified seed and it is expected that the majority of the members will be recommended as growers of certified seed. The potatoes must pass an inspection in the field and then again in the bin before the grower is recognized as having certified seed for sale. The demand for certified seed potatoes is becoming more keen every year. Cash prizes will be awarded at the Lennox Fair and again points for the exhibits will be added to the points attained for field score, and the awards based accordingly.

Another junior exhibit at the Lennox Fair, they should create a good deal of interest will be that of the Napanee District Boys' Holstein Calf Club. The prize money is being supplied by the Dominion Department of Agriculture, the Ontario Department of Agriculture, the Royal Bank and the T. B. Wallace Estate.

$25.00 is being offered in prizes to the boys taking part in the Live Stock Judging Competition at the Fair on Wednesday, September 12. Competitors must be under 26 years of age and we hope a record number of boys will take part. This competition has always been a successful feature of the third day of the Fair. Three classes of livestock will be judged under the supervision of Agricultural Representatives from adjoining Counties.

On Sunday, August 19th, a party of seven girls and three boys, left for Ottawa, to take part in the various judging competitions in connection with the Central Canada Exhibition. The following girls represent Lennox and Addington as a team in the Inter County Girls' Household Science Judging Competition: Hazel Baker, Sharp's Corners; Muriel Millman, Newburgh; Irene Bradford, R.R. No. 1, Napanee; and Grace Hume, R. R. No. 5, Napanee. The following girls will judge in the Open Competition: Hilda Preslar, R. R. No. 1, Napanee; Esther Purcell, Colebrook; and Dorothy Spearman, R. R. No. 3, Napanee. Donald Pool, R.R. No. 4, Napanee; Clifford Shannon, R.R. No. 3 Bath, and Robert McFarlane, R.R. No. 1, Odessa, will take part in the Judging Classes provided for boys.

Watch this column for the results in these competitions.

Prize lists of the Lennox Fair may be secured at our office or from the Secretary, Mr. D. A. Garrison.

HERE'S WHERE YOU SEE CHAMPIONS

Hard-fisted pioneers of Ontario had barely sown their first grain among the stumps of the Niagara peninsula when leaders had paved the way for what has grown into the Canadian National Exhibition. Down through the succeeding decades agriculturists of Canada have brought their finest livestock, blooded horses, poultry, pigeons and pet stock, along with products of the field and orchard to compete for valuable prizes.

A prize list of approximately $100,000 attracts the very best that modern agriculture can produce from Ontario and other provinces. Canada's greatest Horse Show and Speed Trials, featuring the Standard Bred Society's $6,000 Futurities, are two of the leading events at your Exhibition. NORTHBROOK

Northbrook, August 20.—The people of the northern parts of Frontenac and Addington are disappointed that Magistrate J. L. Lloyd is retired from his official duties. It is conceded on all sides that he has been the most capable Police Magistrate and Judge to occupy the office in these parts, always applying himself diligently to his work. His decisions met approval, as in his many years in office there has never been an appeal. Impartiality and justice have been the characteristics of his bench work. He has been father confessor to thousands. We hope he will remain in our village in some capacity, as the family ever take active parts in public activities and would be greatly missed.

Mr. Henry Atkins is employed with the Fox Mining Co., 200 miles north of Basin.

Miss Velva Thompson is home from Kingston, where she has been visiting her grandmother, Mrs. G. Pyke.

Mr. Gordon Wood is slowly recovering from a severe attack of pleurisy. Mr. Carl Rosenplot has managed the garage in his absence.

Mrs. Marshal Vanness is visiting her daughter, Mrs. Frank Peterson, at Bordentown.

Death claimed our oldest resident, Mr. Peter Hughes, in his 85th year, after long unconscious illness. He was a native of Ireland, but has been in Belleville Hospital from injuries received when struck by a car on No. 7 Highway, near Kaladar. Mr. Hughes was born in Quebec Province. His only child, Mr. William, lives at Kaladar. He leaves many to mourn his loss, including fourteen grandchildren. Six attended the funeral as bearers to the family plot in Northbrook United Cemetery. Deceased had been in good health, living alone in his own home at Kaladar until the accidental injury.

The Liberal nomination meeting at Sydenham was well represented from these parts, denoting the Manly support awaiting candidate Colin Campbell.

Mr. Wilfrid Baker, of Cornwall, is visiting friends in the village.

Two drowning accidents on Saturday have cast a gloom over the tourist colonies. Mystery surrounds the tragedy for the present.

STRATHCONA

Strathcona, August 20. — Most of the farmers have finished threshing in this vicinity, and taking into consideration the dry weather the yield was exceptionally good.

Messrs. Arthur Tompkins and Arthur Uens figured in a motor accident on Friday night when the car in which they were riding went into the ditch, just west of Annen Mc-Keown's, on the Railroad road, and side swiped a hydro pole. The top and one side of the car was completely wrecked. Both boys received a severe shaking up, also a few cuts and bruises.

Several from the village attended the funeral of the late Edwin Miller, which was held in Trinity Church, Napanee, on Sunday afternoon.

Mr. W. J. Finlay is home on Toronto last week, relieving Mr. Geo. Finlay, who has been holidaying on the farm.

Mr. C. B. Simmons, C. N. R. Agent, returned from a two weeks' holiday on Wednesday, 1st inst.

Mrs. Ed. Rook and Mrs. A. Bratt of Rook dinner with Mr. and Mrs. Harold McKeown on Thursday.

Mr. Richard Jones spent the week end at Oshawa.

The Sunday School picnic, which was held at Bell's Grove, Varty Lake, Fletcher McKim, was a great success. The day was ideal for a picnic, and sixty-five hungry stomachs were filled with a very delicious dinner, which included sandwiches, pie, cake, etc. The afternoon was spent with races for the children, candy scramble, contests, boating, swimming, and fishing, on a very enjoyable day was spent by all present. George Scott won over Harold Roare in the pie eating contest, although it was a very close draw.

Misses Mildred and Doris Schoolcraft, of Tamworth, are visiting at Clarence Baker's.

Mrs. W. P. Asselstine, of Moscow, spent the week end with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Wilson.

Mr. and Mrs. W. K. Huffman and son, Mrs. Everett Evans and daughter, and Mrs. George Huffman, of Moscow, were guests on Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Harold Hoare.

Mr. Stanley Hanes was in Kingston on Sunday, attending the Free Methodist Conference.

Last, but not least, we had a nice shower of rain on Sunday afternoon.

DORLAND

Dorland, August 20.—A nice shower on Monday evening revived drooping vegetation, but occasioned a slight delay to the threshing.

The ball game between the Maple Leafs and Hayburn was postponed until Tuesday evening. Hayburn team were the victors, but the game on Wednesday evening reversed the standing, and a final play-off was staged at Conway on Thursday evening, when Hayburn won 11-8.

Miss Edith Foster, of Ottawa, is visiting her brother, P. E. Foster, and other friends here.

We were sorry to learn of the serious illness of Mr. F. Allison, and hope for his speedy recovery.

BREAKING IN NEW BOOTS

I have just come back from taking my new walking-tour boots on a twenty-mile walk to break them in. It was the first time that I had worn them, not counting the time I tried them on in the shop and said they felt comfortable. Having bathed my blisters and bandaged my feet, I feel in a position to give some excellent advice on how to break in new boots.

1. The boots should be warmed at the temperature of the feet before putting them on. Each boot will take about as long to warm as it takes to boil an egg. If this is too much trouble—the feet may be placed in cold water and chilled to the temperature of the boots. (And much good may it do you.)

2. If possible walk the first time out to a zoo or a circus and ask the man who rubs down the elephants to give the boots a massage.

3. If no circus or zoo is in walking distance, walk about a mad time in under repair and ask the steam-roller man to give the boots the "once-over." Standing on warm tar while this is being done will prevent chilblains. This boot-roll will either (a) soften the uppers or (b) upset the steam-roller.

4. When the boots hurt, remember how the hard lugs of new braces in time become as soft as silk. The first thousand miles will be the worst. The time is sure to come when either (a) the uppers are as soft as silk or (b) the little toe of your left foot is as hard as a trouser button.

5. If you have planned a walking tour, either (a) wear shoes and go on a push-bicycle or (b) wear slippers and go in a car.

USE RICH SUDS TO WASH CURTAINS

Curtains are easily washed in a rich suds of soap flakes, using enough water to cover the curtains. Let them soak for a few hours, pour off the water and make a fresh suds in which to finish the washing. If the curtains are very badly soiled, they may need a third suds. Rinse them thoroughly in warm water.

Curtains which need a little stiffening may be dipped in a thin starch solution, one or two teaspoons of starch to each quart of water. While curtains and linens are improved by a trace of bluing in the final rinse water. Even whites may by lose some of their color during washing, but this is easily restored by dipping them in a solution of black tea or clear coffee.

Hang curtains straight across a line to dry. Pull out lace or net materials, put them on stretching frames which measure just slightly smaller than the curtains before washing.

CLEANLINESS IS IMPORTANT WHEN USING COSMETICS

It is not so much what preparations you buy but how you use them that counts in the beauty game. These do, for instance, a woman who can afford to buy—and does—the best powders, creams and lotions on the market today. Her dressing table looks like a display of beauty preparations. On seeing it, one naturally would say to herself, "Here's a woman who really feels herself equipped and well groomed." Yet, sadly enough, such is not the case. That woman has only skin and flesh and blood like the rest of us.

Then there is another girl who uses a limited number of cosmetics, a minimum of beauty preparations and the jars and bottles on her dressing table are few and far between. Yet she is one of the loveliest creatures you've ever laid eyes on. Her skin is clear, her hair shines. The answer to the contrasting picture is that the second woman knows how to make good use of the few cosmetics and that cleanliness is her most important consideration.

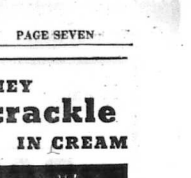
She uses cotton pads instead of a soiled powder puff to apply powder and she makes sure that her facial tissues are scrupulously clean before she starts to blend her rouge. The powder puff is her enemy. It is used at least twice a week. She brushes her hair with a clean brush and she cleans her skin with soap and water as well as cleansing cream. Then she removes the cream with clean tissues instead of using a towel over and over again. Her example is a good one to follow.

MARMALADE

Take six pounds of sugar, two quarts of water, and one lemon to every eight Seville oranges. One or two sweet oranges may be substituted for one or two bitter ones or one grapefruit for two oranges, or again, three tangerines for one Seville orange. In this way variety may be obtained.

Peel and shred the thin yellow part from the fruit. Cut the fruit into fin pieces, and with a lemon squeezer squeeze the juice on to the shredded peel, putting the seeds into a separate basin. Add to seeds a pint of cold water. Put the remaining pulp through the mincer, and add it, with three more pints of water, to the seeds and juice. Let all these stand for 48 hours. Boil for one and a half hours to soften the peel, then add the sugar to warm it in the oven. Let the softened fruit cool a little and the hot sugar and boil quickly for half an hour, when a little should set when tested on a cold plate and the marmalade begin to be setting round the handle of the spoon. A clean fifty cent piece put in the bottom of the pan will prevent it to keep the pan from boiling over and will also prevent splashes on the stove and hands. Put the marmalade into warm jars, and cover while hot with paper or cellophane. If the sugar and fruit be well washed before peeling, any scum which has to be removed after boiling can be used for marmalade puddings.

THEY crackle IN CREAM



THERE'S no other cereal like Kellogg's Rice Krispies. Bubbles of rice so crisp they crackle and pop in milk or cream.
Children, especially, like this fascinating cereal. Wholesome, too — let them eat all they want. Fine for breakfast, lunch, or the kiddies' supper. Made by Kellogg in London, Ontario.

FIRST QUALITY STRAWBERRIES

Strawberry varieties show remarkable variation in different districts and between different farms in the Canadian Strawberry Test statement, says Professor D. A. Kimball, Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph, has so often been made that one hesitates to repeat it, however true it may be. Any attempt to establish soil differences as to the cause is very much like trying to settle which tooth of a comb is the longest or shortest. The only real difference between varieties with good dessert qualities that will still have good yields under reasonable methods of culture. We have the latter, and to a certain extent, the second, but are woefully lacking in the first quality.

ENTERPRISE

Enterprise, August 20.—Firing a gun for the third time in his life, John Joseph Dillon, son of John Dillon, a well known farmer three miles east of here, killed within a few rods of his home a timber wolf, one of a pack of five that have been destroying sheep throughout this district. The young man, armed with a shot gun loaded with bird shot, left the house to scare a flock of blackbirds which were feeding on a field of grain, and, sighting the wolf, fired at it at such close range that it dropped dead without a struggle. Within twenty minutes after leaving the house he was back, proudly showing his kill. He will be richer by the bounty which is paid for the destruction of these pests.

The whole village was practically deserted on Saturday, nearly the whole population accompanying the baseball team to Yarker to witness the final game of the County playoffs with Gibbard B's. of Napanee. The large crowd which was on hand to see the game certainly got their money's worth in the fourteen innings played before the championship was settled.

Owing to the absence of the President, Mrs. Dopking was in charge of the meeting, which was opened by singing the hymn, "In the harvest field there is work to do," followed by the Lord's Prayer in unison, and the reading of the 23rd Psalm. The Secretary read a letter from the Presbyterial Supply Secretary, telling the society what their allocation was and when it was to be sent in. Mrs. Dopking read a leaflet, "Holiday times with our Missionaries," showing that holiday time was a very busy time with them as they go about their Master's business. The study leaflets were given by the following: China, Mrs. J. S. Reid; Korea, Mrs. Wilson; Africa, Mrs. MacGregor; Trinidad, Mrs. Dopking; Japan, Miss Salsbury. This was followed by the hymn, "He Leadeth Me". Mrs. Dopking read the devotional leaflet, "His Resurrection", and the singing of "Lord, I hear of Showers of Blessing", which brought the meeting to a close. A vote of thanks was tendered Mrs. Bell for the use of her home. The next meeting will be at the home of Mrs. W. J. Mellow.

Hundreds of People Attend S. S. Picnic At Driving Park

All Denominations Well Represented

Each year, the United Sunday School Picnic becomes more and more a community affair. This year that fact was well evidenced by the large attendance of citizens representing all creeds and classes. From the time when plans were first being made, there has been shown a splendid spirit of co-operation on all sides.

The afternoon was all that could be desired so far as weather was concerned and each church in the town was well represented. The churches which entered into the event were Trinity, Grace and St. Andrew's United, St. Mary Magdalen, Anglican, St. Patrick's, Roman Catholic, and the Salvation Army. Father Healy, Archdeacon Dumbrille, Rev. J. Y. McCoskrie, who is supplying for Rev., R. T. Richards, Rev. A. J. Wilson, Ensign Russell and Lieut. Sharp were present and entered heartily into the spirit of the occasion. Rev. Harry Pawson and Rev. R. T. Richards, who are on holiday, this month, were out of town.

Splendid Co - operation

Representatives of all the Sunday Schools gave assistance in making the plans and carrying out the sports events. But a great deal of credit is due Jack Adams for the splendid way in which he looked after the sports. Jack and his committee arranged the events and Jack, himself, took charge of the purchase of the prizes, which numbered 95. Every prize was a worth-while article and represented the expenditure of a good deal of time and thought in purchasing.

It would be impossible to mention all who gave assistance to make the day a success. Special mention should be made of Mr. Ernest Gibbard, who donated the prize for the person who found the mysterious, well-dressed man, who revealed his identity when asked: "Is that what the well-dressed man is wearing, mister?" The man was Mr. Hartley Lapum and the lucky discoverer was Miss Christie Young, who won a Gibbard solid walnut sewing cabinet, as a prize.

Donations of five gallons of ice cream came from Harry Card, Peter Canas and the Rotary Club. Each child was given three free tickets for ice cream or lemonade, which were served by members of the Rotary Club, M. P. Graham, A. L. Dafoe, D. H. Mayhew and Peter Canas. In all, twenty gallons of ice cream was used and many gallons of lemonade.

At 1.20 p.m., a procession of cars formed at the Market Square, headed for the Driving Park. It was led by the Napanee Boys' Band under the direction of Mr. M. A. Eppelt, followed by Gibbard's and Howitt's trucks, loaded with children and a long string of private cars, all filled with boys and girls and grown-ups.

Immediately after arrival at the park, judging of the pets in the contest arranged by the Humane Society, was conducted. (Details in another column.)

The Sports Events

The doll carriage parade was the first event in the afternoon sports, after the copper scramble. The girls who entered the parade, were dressed in fancy costume and had shown considerable originality in their ideas of decorating their carriages. There were nine exhibitors. On Friday evening last a surprise party was given Mr. and Mrs. James Gordon on the occasion of Mr. Gordon's 85th birthday, in the combined gardens of three neighbours on Symington Avenue, Toronto.

The grounds were lighted by Chinese lanterns and beautifully decorated with streamers, and about eighty friends assembled to congratulate Mr. Gordon and to express regrets that the family is moving from the district.

After a short musical program, an address was made by representatives of the Bible Class of Perth United Church and Mrs. Gordon was presented with a leatherbound Hymnary while Mr. Gordon received a signet ring.

Lunch was served and a large birthday cake with eighty-five candles was cut, after which the party broke up with the singing of "Auld Lang Syne."

Extensive Repairs Will Be Made To Post Office

Extensive repairs and improvements are to be made in the near future to the Post Office building and property in Napanee. Word was received during the past week, that the contract for the work had been let to Mr. Sam Knapp.

The stonework is to be re-pointed. The building will be painted inside and out and the driveway and courtyard at the rear are to be paved. This work will necessitate the excavation of small fourteen inches of the surface of the present driveway. The old wooden fence around the rear of the property has been removed and will be replaced by a modern metal fence.

It is eight years since the post-office was painted. The work planned will make a decided improvement in the appearance of the property.

Building Fairly Active In Napanee

Three new houses are in the process of being erected in the town of Napanee and others are being improved at the present time.

On Thomas Streeet, the home of Mr. William Barrett is practically complete and recently, Mr. and Mrs. Barrett have moved into it. It is situated on the south side of Thomas Street, just west of Centre Street. It is a two-story bungalow with gray stucco walls and is an entirely modern dwelling, compact, and artistic in design.

Further east on Thomas Street, Mr. W. C. Smith is erecting a double bungalow on the property formerly occupied by the Napanee Curling and Bowling rinks, near the county buildings. Each part of this house is of roomy proportion and is up-to-date in every detail.

On East Street, at the north end Mr. J. E. Brown has, last year, built a brick bungalow for his own dwelling place is constructing another house on the vacant lot just south of his home. Those two new dwellings will make a great improvement in the appearance of the locality; also on East Street Judge J. E. Madden is improving his commodious residence by having it stuccoed.

In the west end of the town, on Bridge Street, Mr. Thos. Tierney has recently had his home improved by covering the brick walls with an attractive coat of stucco.

The metal roof of Trinity United Church is being given two coats of aluminum paint, which will greatly improve its appearance. On the opposite corner, the Post Office itself is to be improved by paint and other repairs.

All over town, dwellings and stores throughout the summer months, have been repainted and repaired and the town presents a spic-and-span appearance.

A point interesting farmers whose fields are flooded by power scales is that lightning voltages caused by the discharge of a single cloud are estimated to cover 1,000 to 2,000 feet of line on long circuits. Generally, in the urban circuits, the voltages are restricted considerably more by the closely-spaced lightning arresters.

WINNERS NOW PLAY TWEED

The Deseronto "Grads" met and defeated Sills' Napanee team in the second game of the first round of the Ontario Amateur Softball play-offs at Napanee on Tuesday evening August 21. Deseronto's second win gave them the right to meet Tweed in the second round of the play-offs.

In the first innings Napanee scored four runs and Deseronto one. Neither team scored again until the fifth when Napanee got three and Deseronto five. The fifth was Napanee's last scoring innings, but Deseronto got one in the sixth, three in the seventh and three in the ninth.

"Tommy" Pointer Injured Right Hand While at Work

On Friday, Tommy Pointer, the Gibbard Athletic's left-hand twirler, met with an accident while at work in the Gibbard Furniture Co. He was using a very sharp chisel with his left hand, it slipped and gashed the fleshy part of the right hand, at the base of his thumb. He received a deep gash, which will take some time to heal.

It is a most unfortunate accident, comparing as it did, just before the play-down games, which Gibbard's Athletics enter in the near future, for the Ontario Intermediate championship.

Pointer's many friends hope for a speedy recovery.

Napanee Returns To Standard Time On Saturday, Sept. 1st.

On Saturday night, September 1st, at midnight, Napanee returns to Standard Time. Clocks will be put back one hour and Napanee will have one more hour's sleep on Sunday morning.

Daylight Saving Time has been in effect in the town since the last Saturday in June.

Many poultry producers obtain the highest prices for their birds by marketing through organizations known as poultry pools. The Poultry Services of the Dominion Department of Agriculture give every assistance and information regarding organizing and markets.

Napanee Collegiate And Vocational School Re - Opening

This well-known and successful institution will re-open for the Fall Term on Tuesday, September 4th. Pupils intending to register in the Commercial Classes or in the First Form of the Matriculation or Teachers' Courses will meet at 9.00 o'clock in the Assembly Room, and all others will meet at 2.00 o'clock.

A staff meeting will be held at 11.00 o'clock to consider doubtful cases of promotion.

The staff remains the same, with the exception that Miss Marjorie Daly, B.A., a graduate of the University of Toronto and the College of education, has been appointed to the position vacated by Miss Margaret Grant, B.A.

Former students of this school, who attended the Normal School last session, again had the advantage of securing qualification as teachers of Agriculture without having to attend Summer sessions

The Department of Education emphasizes the fact that unless one expects to attend a Normal School or University, a school Graduation Diploma granted by the Honourable the Minister, the Chairman of the Board and the Principal, is just as valuable as a Matriculation Certificate.

Parents are again urged to sutdy carefully the report cards issued after each set of tedm examinations. These will indicate whether the pupil is making sufficient progress to ensure success in the final examinations.

Dr. Burrows, Marlbank Disposes of Practice To Dr. Hunt

Dr. J. G. Burrows of Marlbank has disposed of his practice to Dr. George G. Hunt. Dr. Burrows has been practicing for many years in Marlbank and has built up a large business throughout the district. He was a native of Napanee, a son of the late Peter Burrows, for many years Inspector of Public Schools for the county, who died a few years ago in British Columbia. In his early days, Dr. Burrows established a considerable reputation for himself as a cricket player.

Dr. Burrows has not definitely decided where he will settle, after disposing of his practice. His many friends in Napanee would be pleased to be made Napanee the choice of his future home.

Dr. Hunt who succeeds Dr. Burrows at Marlbank, is a County boy. He is a graduate of Queen's University. He was a house surgeon at the Hotel Dieu Hospital for one year and more recently has been doing extensive post-graduate work at St. Joseph's Hospital, Toronto, and the Toronto Western Hospital.

Earlier Examinations Promised by Minister

Will Also Lower Costs

Reduction in the cost of examinations, as well as the simplification of the system of departmental examinations, is heralded by Hon. Dr. Leonard J. Simpson, Minister of Education, coincidently with definite announcement that the examinations in subjects taught in the middle and upper school of high schools and collegiate institutes will be held a week earlier in 1935.

It is felt that, under the present system the time between the announcement of the results of the matriculation examinations and the opening of the high schools and universities is inadequate to permit pupils and parents to make plans in a satisfactory manner," said the Minister yesterday. "Under the arrangement now proposed, middle school examinations would be completed by the end of June, and with the exception of language papers on which relatively few students write, the upper school examinations would be completed by the same time, and the results of all departmental examinations should be made known relatively early in August.

"With the system of accepting the recommendations of the teachers of local schools in middle school subjects now in operation in 1932, the number of papers actually written was substantially reduced, and the burden placed on the markers of the departmental examination papers was made much lighter. In the interval, however, the number of candidates presenting themselves for upper school or honor matriculation examinations has increased substantially, with the result that this year the number of papers required to be read in connection with upper school examinations is more than double the number written five years ago. The result is that the saving in time and effort made in connection with the middle school examinations has been offset by the increase in the burden of the upper school examinations.

The Minister has under consideration plans for the reduction of the cost of examinations and likewise for the implification of the system of departmental examinations.

Bay of Quinte League Championship Goes to Gibbard's Athletics

Great Interest Shown in Third Game of Series

Well over a thousand fans attended the deciding play-off game between Picton and Gibbard A's at the Geo. W. Gibbard Memorial Park, on Wednesday last. The grand stand was filled to capacity by excited supporters of the two teams. At least half of the occupants of the stand were from Picton. With Picton at bat first, in the tenth Church singled. Hudgins and Rorke were caught out. Prout at bat, Church was out stealing second, to spoil Picton's chance of scoring.

James R. Botting Former Napaneean Killed Instantly

Falling about twelve feet from a roof at the residence of H. Godden, 246 East Sixth street, where he had been making repairs, James R. Botting, a foreman carpenter employed by James C. Harding & Son, contractors, was almost instantly killed at 11.30 o'clock Tuesday morning, Aug. 21, when he struck heavily on the ground on his neck and shoulders. Physicians were summoned at once, but he breathed for only a few minutes and it was stated his neck was broken in the fall.

Born in Napanee, Ontario, Mr. Botting came to Oswego, 47 years ago and was for a number of years a carpenter contractor. He was a skilled craftsman, one of the old school, who had received an unusual training, through serving a long apprenticeship, and there was no phase of working in wood with which he was not intimate. Not only could he undertake work himself, large or small, in heavy timbers or the finest of cabinet detail, but he was an executive of rare ability. Most of the yachts and power boats, built for members of the Oswego Yacht Club during Mr. Botting's residence in Oswego, in some manner or other, had a contribution from his knowledge and skill. He was for years foreman for Post & Henderson Lumber Company, where that company operated a planing and woodworking mill, and one of the handsomest power cruisers ever turned out on Lake Ontario was built by him for the late James D. Henderson. It was a labor of love, yacht building, for Mr. Botting was an enthusiast in matters and yachting, and his boat he built from his own designs a beautiful cruiser that attracted wide attention for its comfort and seaworthiness and which eventually was bought by the State Conservation Commission for use with the fisheries division. Mr. Botting was an officer of the Yacht club for years, and was a trustee at the time of his death.

For a number of years, recently, Mr. Botting has been a foreman for Harding & Son, and had charge of the Harding woodworking plant. He was a member of Frontier City Lodge No. 422, F. & A.M., of the Order of Foresters and the Carpenters' Union. He was a member of the First Methodist Episcopal church.

Mr. Botting resided at 97 West Schuyler street, and is survived by his widow by one daughter, Mrs. William Scofield, Columbus, O.; three sons, Rockwell, Buffalo; Harold of Hartford, Conn., and Leon, Yeoman, by one brother, Clark Botting, Philadelphia, Pa., and one sister, Mrs. Edith Pralick, of California, and by three grand children.

POLITICS AND EDUCATION

The effort on the part of the new Government to curtail expenses and relieve the taxpayer of his will nigh crushing burden, has met with sympathetic approval, even by those who opposed the Government at the polls. The debt had increased by leaps and bounds during an era of business expansion and unprecedented road building. The interest on this has to be met now, when the people are least able to pay it. The result is that there has been very little criticism of the new Government for instituting economies in administration, and in eliminating extravagances.

There is coming to our notice, however, evidences of drastic changes which can, in no sense, be attributed to a desire for economy. It is reported, for example, on good authority, that it is the intention of the Government to ask for the resignation of Mr. H. B. Fetterley, the Principal of the Ontario School for the Deaf at Belleville. There can be no possible justification for such a proposal either on the grounds of economy or efficiency.

Mr. Fetterley came to the School for the Deaf, four years ago. In that time he has accomplished a complete transformation in the institution. He has revolutionized the method of training the handicapped children. Sign language has been replaced by lip reading and by the methods which made Helen Keller a world figure, a few years ago. The School has been equipped with individual ear-phones, which the child can adjust to its own needs. Recording instruments record the child's voice four times a year. In this way an accurate and scientific account of the pupil's progress, is kept. Individual work of the most painstaking and personal kind is done by the teachers, for these handicapped children.

But the group work is not neglected. Children who have never been able to hear—or in some cases hear but very little—are taught to play in groups, to dance to music, and even to sing. This rhythm work of the Ontario School for the Deaf, is one of the outstanding accomplishments of the present method of teaching.

In addition to their academic work, the children live in the Institution, and great care must be taken of their health. A great tribute to the care expended on them, that during the past four years, while Mr. Fetterley has been in charge, there has not been one death in the Institution, though there has been approximately four hundred in attendance, all the time.

Mr. Fetterley has been at great pains to acquaint the public with the quality of work which is being done for the deaf. This is particularly true of Eastern Ontario. He has organized groups of the children, whom he takes to various centres, for demonstration purposes. This has always been done on the basis of financial agreement with the community to which they went. This involved absolutely no expense to the School. When fifty of these children came to Napanee, last Spring, the Town Hall was crowded to the doors. Few who saw the demonstration but left with the highest admiration for the ability, the sympathy and patience of Mr. Fetterley and his group of highly trained and loyal workers. Mr. Fetterley, in his address on the work of the children on that occasion, made a stirring appeal for public sympathy with the physically handicapped.

In the farm work in connection with the Institution, Mr. Fetterley has shown as much ability as he has displayed with the deaf children. Here, too, far reaching changes and improvements have taken place during the past four years. The herd of grade cattle, which was on the farm when he took charge, have gradually been replaced by a herd of thoroughbred Ayrshires. All of these are tuberculin tested. The cattle rate high in milk production, which had been a considerable saving to the Institution. In addition, it has been a practical demonstration to those of the children who are eventually to make farming a life work, of the value of maintaining good herds of dairy cattle.

Through it all, Mr. Fetterley has taken absolutely no part in politics. He has lived for the children under his care. He has built up a loyal and efficient staff. It is doubtful if he knows the political leanings of any of them. They have all been chosen for their fitness for the particular work which they have to do.

This School requires a man of unique qualifications. He must be a good administrator, able to direct a school, a farm and a dozen different trades and vocational activities. He must have some understanding of music, and possess a deep-seated sympathy with handicapped children; and able to inspire a high esprit-de-corps among his staff. Above all, he must be a real educationalist. These qualities, Mr. Fetterley possesses in an eminent degree. He has made a distinct contribution to the educational accomplishments of the Province. He is in the prime of his life and has many plans for the furthering of his work. To replace a man who has made such an outstanding success in a highly specialized field, will be a source of great sorrow to four hundred handicapped children; of deep regret to a loyal and devoted staff. It will, as well, shake the faith of the public in the unbiased nature of the Government's programme. Surely, education above all, an education which has to do with handicapped children, should not be subject to changing winds of political opinion.

We believe that when the situation is carefully investigated by the present administration, which, as yet, can scarcely have had the opportunity to arrive at a reasoned judgment, Mr. Fetterley will be allowed to go on with his work of fitting the deaf children of the Province to become useful citizens in a civilization which becomes more exacting every day, even for those who have been endowed by nature with all their faculties.

THE SALOON IS BACK

There is no disguising the fact. So far as Napanee is concerned, the saloon is back. Naturally, after being closed for years, excesses were to be expected. For this reason, we refrained from making any comment on the disgraceful and disgusting conditions which accompanied the opening of the saloons in our town. But a month has passed, and with the passing weeks, the saloons have won neither the respect nor the confidence of the citizens. Never, in twenty years, have we seen the conditions such as are now of daily occurrence. Every evil we were accustomed to associate with the old bar days, is patently evidenced once more. The saloon is back.

There is one feature of the present situation, however, which did not enter into the picture twenty years ago. Then the traveller had no place else to stay than at the hotels, where he had no option save to put up with the noise, the revelry and the boisterous conditions of the saloon. To-day, that is all changed. The motor car has worked a transformation in more ways than one. Since their advent into our society, there has come into existence a fine chain of tourist houses. And the restaurant business has developed to a high state of efficiency as it caters to the wishes of the travelling public. It is, therefore, no longer necessary to patronize the saloon either for sleeping accommodation or for meals. The Service Club which, in Napanee, for ten years held its weekly lunch meetings in a hotel, is now holding them in a restaurant. The hotel keepers made their choice between serving booze and legitimate hotel business. If they suffer loss of prestige and support, they have no one to blame but themselves.

The temperance people of this Province had nothing to hope for from the late Henry Government. They turned to Mr. Hepburn, who promised to remove the liquor question out of politics. That promise was, undoubtedly, taken to mean that there would be an independent vote on the issue. But, apparently, that is not to be. Monday night, Premier Hepburn pronounced definitely against a referendum and said: "We are not going to be stampeded by a lot of temperance cranks." That sounds very much like the sort of language that Hon. Howard Ferguson was wont to use. But, it is well to remind Premier Hepburn that nothing is gained by denouncing temperance leaders as "temperance cranks" and "offensive prohibitionists." The people who signed the petitions signed protests to the late Henry Government against the re-introduction of the saloon, were not all cranks, by any means. True, there are always a few cranks in every movement and the world owes much to the fearless enthusiasm of such cranks as Shaftsbury, Howard, Beck, Wilberforce, Wesley and Booth. But, it is inconceivable that the 800,000 who petitioned the Government were all cranks. They were the cream of Ontario citizenship, who, remembering the past and fearing the future, had no axe to grind but were desirous of protecting the youth of our Province.

Napanee sent in over a thousand cards of protest. The people who signed them were not "cranks" nor "offensive prohibitionists." They were a majority of our adult citizens in every walk of life who were eager to forestall the very conditions which now besmirch our town.

To be sure, a month is hardly long enough to enable a government to judge the success of the new law. By the same reasoning there is insufficient evidence to justify the Prime Minister in stating there will be no vote on the issue. This, at least, is evident, that so far as Napanee is concerned the experiment is an unqualified success from the point of view of the saloon keeper, and a tragic and pathetic failure so far as the parents of the youth, who frequent the so-called beverage room, is concerned.

UNITED WE STAND—

Probably, no town has a finer community spirit than our own! This was not always so. But within the last few years, a number of community projects — Community Days, the Old Boys' Reunion of a few years ago, and the growing importance of Turkey Days, have thrown the people together, and broken down much of the narrow parochialism that is commonly associated with the small town. One evidence of this is the Annual Community Picnic, which was held last Wednesday. This institution is probably without a parallel in Ontario. To be sure, other communities have their outings. Churches have always provided a Summer outing for their families. Of late there has been an increasing number of political groups, and service clubs, who have taken advantage of our ideal Summer weather for picnic purposes.

Editorial Comment

LABATT'S A TEST CASE

Canada's first kidnapping for ransom, suggests a possibility that the frequently drawn contrast between crime conditions in this country and in the Dominion, not to mention the Mother Country as well, may be attributable merely to the fact that American criminals have been more enterprising. The true explanation still may lie in the fact that the punishment of crime in Canada and Great Britain is swifter and surer than the brand we visit on our criminal element; or it may lie deeper than that, in some environment condition or ingrained national attitude that differs as among the three countries. In any event, Americans are going to be keenly interested in following the success of Canadian justice in its efforts to bring the Labatt kidnappers to book. Swift success in that respect will go far to clinch the theory that American crime detection, criminal law and court procedure are not what they should be. Lack of success, on the other hand, will invite Americans to draw other conclusions regarding our crime problem. Certainly, if there is anything to the theory that the Labatt kidnappers are Americans, who dared perform their operations across the border in defiance of Canadian justice, our Department of Justice should do all in its power to assist Canada in vindicating her reputation for swift and sure punishment of the guilty.—Detroit News.

MIGRATION CURRENTS

A number of British migrants to Australia have returned to Britain under a banner proclaiming their disappointment and bitterness. They are deserving of sympathy from every part of the Empire, but it is important to remember that each individual case should be investigated before settlement is delivered. It is not the first group of miscants to have returned. During the depression the tide of migration has set Homewards. And long before the depression there were instances of that sort of thing. One family returned from New Zealand to England in great clamour because of the existence in this country of compulsory military training. In the early days of settlement many arrivals were not permanent. Thousands went to Australia and a considerable number, under the lure of gold, sailed for the western shores of the United States. All these facts give point to the belief that under no circumstances can there be a flow of migration without check, and all such movements should bear this in mind.—Auckland News.

GLASSHOUSE STREET

(In the laboratories of the General Electric Company of U. S. A., photographs have been taken through steel plates, four inches thick.)

Where is that man who rashly spoke
Of Bomb homes as English castles
Who thought that he could sport his oak
And feel secure with goods and vassals
Wrapped in 3 deep and private peace
Beyond disturbance or inspection?
Alas! that boasted freehold lease
Is subject now to strange correction.

Thewireless booms through stone and slate,
Proof against bolting out or locking;
Why, Moorside Edge in fullest spate
Can't keep my trefflers hunting it
And now his own domestic part
Will soon be ripe for illustrating—
For how can bricks withstand the art
Which peeps and peers through armour-plating.

Publicity pervades his path—
They'll snap him yet in scenes domestic.
Both at his meals and in his bath.
When few men look their most fantastic.

But face the worst and make no bones;
For one small hope this news arouses—
Perhaps we shan't throw many stones
When all reside in crystal houses.

FRUIT RECIPES

Now is the time for the enterprizing housewife to try out enticing fruit recipes, of which the five-fruit sauce is an ever welcome one. Twenty tomatoes are required with 6 apples, 6 pears, 6 peaches, a pint pitted plums, 3 red peppers, 5 cupfuls of sugar, 2 sticks of cinnamon, 1 tablespoonful of whole cloves, 1 tablespoonful of salt, and 1 quart of vinegar. Boiled for two hours, this makes seven pint jars of sauce.

INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON, SEPTEMBER 2ND, 1934

MICAH 6: 1-12

"MICAH CHAMPIONS THE OPPRESSED"

Most of the wards and difficulties which modern civilization have centred around the ownership of property, in one form or another. Until quite recent times this meant almost wholly the ownership of the soil. Micah lived during a period when the struggle for the ownership of the land was just beginning. Originally all the land, when tribe, owned the land. The cattle were allowed free range. Everyman who had cattle was free to pasture them anywhere he wished. But the growth of agriculture changed all that. Fencing became necessary, and the struggle for the best land for agricultural purposes, began. And along with it went the bitterness and envy which always accompanies a change of civilization.

Like Amos, Micah was essentially a man from the country. But whereas Amos had lived on the hills in the back country, Micah belonged to the rich fertile farming community where he saw the evil of land grabbing at close range. Finally, exasperated with what he saw going on, he went to Jerusalem and then poured forth his protest in vitriolic and scathing terms. His protest was not so much against the legitimate agriculturalist as against the princes and rulers who used their holdings as a means of providing them with palaces in the city, where they revelled in luxury and idleness.

Amos had thundered against the injustice of the legal system. Hosea had cried out against the conditions surrounding the shrines. Micah is concerned with the city as a whole. Like a true patriot, he identifies himself with its sins as though they were his own personal responsibility. He seeks to turn the minds of the citizens and Jerusalem from their avarice and greed, to a finer interpretation of religion as it expresses itself in civic life.

He received a responsive hearing, and ended by proclaiming the ultimate destruction of the city. In the verses before us in this lesson, Micah describes Jehovah as holding a debate with His people. He summons the mountains as witnesses—those great evidences of endurance in the world. In pleading, tender tones, Jehovah sets out His side of the debate: "O my people, what have I done unto thee and wherein have I wearied thee; testify against me. For I brought thee up out of the land of Egypt and redeemed thee out of the house of bondmen, and I sent before thee Moses, Aaron and Miriam," etc.

The people make no denial of God's goodness, but ask how they can be reconciled to Him. Would Jehovah be satisfied if they offered up thousands of rams? If they poured out rivers of oil, or if they offered as a burned offering their first born children? No! None of these things satisfy the Divine demands. What God requires of man is that, "he should do justly, love mercy, and walk humbly with God."

With this grand sentence, God's requirements of mankind are never better nor more aptly put. In a sense, Micah sums up all that had been contributed to the growing knowledge of God and His relation to man by his immediate contemporaries. What does the Lord require of thee, but to do justly—that was Amos—love mercy — that was Hosea — and walk humbly with God—that was Isaiah—the sole testimony of Micah.

Were these requirements partially met, much that blots our modern civilization would be eliminated. Justice, mercy and walking humbly before God are as essential to the curse of the world's ills in the twentieth century, as they were to the growing, expanding life of the eighth century, B.C.

Miller's Worm Powders work so effectively that no traces of worms can be found. The pests are macerated in the stomach and pass away in the stools without being perceptible. They make an entire and clean sweep of the intestines, and nothing in the shape of a worm can find lodgement there when these powders are in operation. Nothing could be more thorough or desirable than their action.

A Remedy for Earache.—To have the earache is to endue torture. The ear is a delicate organ and few care to deal with it, considering it work for a doctor. Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil offers a simple remedy. A few drops upon a piece of lint, or medicated cotton and placed in the ear will do much in relieving pain.

Ontario Department of Agriculture

LENNOX - ADDINGTON COUNTY

C. W. BUCHANAN, B.S.A.,
(Agricultural Representative)

During the week Mr. R. E. Helmer, the Potato Inspector, was in the County and, accompanied by the Representative, visited the members of the Boys' Potato Club and inspected and judged their plots of potatoes. The boys have had excellent success with the potatoes and they are all contemplating growing a half-acre of certified seed next year. While Mr. Helmer was in the County he also inspected plots of seven of the older growers of certified seed.

A potato demonstration is to be held on the farm of Mr. Joseph Foster, Moscow, on Thursday, August 30th, commencing at 5:30 p.m. Mr. O. W. Lachaine, District Potato Inspector, Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph, will be present to give a short talk on "Potato Diseases," and will also lead in the discussions. All interested potato growers are invited to be present to see the plots of potatoes and to note the results of the fertilizer that has been used in these demonstration plots. A number of other experimental plots have also been conducted at Mr. Foster's. These include soy beans, turnips, mangels and millet, and the results should be of interest to everyone. The representative will give a short talk on these varieties and the results of this experimental work. A cordial invitation is extended to all interested farmers.

The Junior Section at Addington Fair, Centreville, on September 7th and 8th, should attract a record number of entries. Cash prizes are being offered on calves exhibited by members of the Centreville Boys' Calf Club. This Club was organized in 1932 and this will be the third opportunity the boys have had to exhibit their animals at the Fair. A class is being provided also in which members of the Centreville Swine Club (organized last year) will be allowed to exhibit their sows. Addington Fair prize list may be secured from the Secretary, Mr. George McGill, Centreville.

Success at Ottawa Fair

Lennox and Addington County made an excellent showing in the judging competitions at the Central Canada Exhibition, Ottawa, on Monday and Tuesday, August 20th and 21st. Our County team of girls stood third in the Inter-County Household Science Judging Competition and the members won prizes as follows :—

Nutrition— (6th), Irene Vanslyck, R. R. No. 1, Napanee.

Clothing— (6th), Muriel Milligan, Newburgh.

House Furnishings— (2nd) Hazel Baker, Sharp Corners.

The girls who took part in the open competition received prizes as follows :—

Nutrition— (tied for 3rd), Grace Huver, R. R. No. 5, Napanee, and Dorothy Soracrett, R. R. No. 3, Napanee; (7th), Hilda Preslar, R.R. No. 1, Napanee.

Clothing— (5th), Esther Purcell.

The girls, and this Department, are very much indebted to the branches of the Women's Institute in the County, who gave special cash donations to help defray the expenses of girls' trip to Ottawa. The excellent showing the girls made is just one small proof of how much this help assisted this assistance from the Institutes. The Institutes have always given a ready response to any calls they have received from this Department and the representative realizes that without their help it would be very hard to carry on certain phases of work among the rural girls and boys.

The three boys from this County who attended the Central Canada Exhibition and judged in the various competitions open to boys, also made an excellent showing. Their results are as follows :—

Sheep— (3rd), Robert McFarlane, No. 1, Odessa; (12th), Donald Paul, No. 4, Napanee.

Dairy Cattle— (1st), Donald Paul, R. R. No. 4, Napanee; (3rd), Robert McFarlane, R. R. No. 1, Odessa.

Beef Cattle— (9th), Cliff McLaughlin, R. R. No. 3, Bath.

Showmanship— (8th), Robt. McFarlane R. R. No. 1, Odessa.

On Tuesday, September 4th, the following girls go to Toronto to take part in the Inter-County Household Science Judging Competition at the Canadian National Exhibition :—Esther Purcell, Colebrook; Hilda Preslar, R. R. No. 1, Napanee; Dorothy Soracrett, R. R. No. 3, Napanee (spare), Hazel Baker, Sharp Corners.

This team should make a real showing as the first three girls have had experience as a team at Ottawa last year, and then again this year in the open competition. Hazel Baker is a new girl to the work this year but she has proved herself capable of taking part in any keenly contested competition.

Dr. Farnsworth will join the staff on the first of September. He is a graduate of Toronto University Medical School and has been practising in Belleville for a few years. Dr. Farnsworth is the son of Rev. and Mrs. Enos Farnsworth, formerly minister of the United Church at Selby, and is well-known in and about Napanee.

Vegetable canning requirements for the 1934 season are expected to be normal in most lines, with the possible exception of corn, which will show an increase.

Many Inspectors Of Brewery Warehouses To Be Dismissed

It was reported last week, that it is the intention of the Ontario Government to dismiss between 120 and 140 brewery warehouse inspectors at the end of this month. It is understood that the Provincial Government and the Liquor Control Board are doing away entirely with this office.

It is expected that a saving of over $200,000 in yearly salaries will be effected in this way. The dismissal of the inspectors is made possible by the new method of taxation of breweries, which in the past three weeks has proven unusually successful.

Mr. and Mrs. F. Knapp Are Moving To Kingston

Mr. Pred Knapp has severed his connection with J. J. Boyes and son and has accepted a position in Kingston with Abernethy & Sons Ltd. Mr. Knapp left on Monday to assume his new duties.

Napanee citizens regret very much to lose Mr. and Mrs. Knapp. They have been residents of the town for over twenty years. Mr. and Mrs. Knapp are both former residents of the Bethel district.

For one year Mr. Knapp was employed at the "Fair" Grocery in Napanee, and for twenty years has been with the firm of J. L. Boyes & Son. Both Mr. and Mrs. Knapp and their daughter, Miss Doris, have been popular and prominent citizens. Mr. Knapp has been interested in fraternal societies and he and Mrs. Knapp have been very active workers in Grace United Church, where they have each held executive positions for some time.

Mr. Knapp, previous to leaving for Kingston, disposed of his attractive home on Centre street to Mr. Arthur Dupre, who will occupy it later in the fall.

Mrs. Knapp and daughter, and Mrs. Knapp's father, Mr. William Malone, who lives with them, will be staying in Napanee for a short time before taking up residence in Kingston.

The price of bacon for the domestic and overseas markets depends principally on quality, and also on volume which must be maintained at a steady flow.

Premier M. F. Hepburn Issues Statement Re-Beer, Wine

Premier Mitchell F. Hepburn, on Monday night, definitely declared there would be no Provincial beer and wine referendum in Ontario—every municipality would retain its right to vote itself wet or dry.

With equal emphasis the Premier expressed his disinterest in Rev. Dr. T. T. Shields's published intention to stump the Province in opposition to beer and wine sale.

"Won't be Stampeded"

"I do not care what he does," declared Premier Hepburn. "We are not going to be stampeded by a few offensive temperance cranks. We are going to give this law a good chance for the best we can.

"They can raise all the ballyhoo they want, but it is not going to budge in one iota. We shall not only give the act a fair trial, and we propose to do that. Let it tour the Province. But I can tell you this much: There will be no Provincial referendum. Every municipality will have the right to vote itself wet or dry. We might as well take the municipalities as entities to deal with the question."

After apparently with finality squelching the hopes of those who have been demanding a referendum on Ontario's vexed issue of beer sale, the Premier went on to promise improvement in conditions as they now exist — improvement both of a compulsory and evolutionary character.—The Globe.

The Late Wilhelmina McGill

The funeral of the late Miss Wilhelmina (Billy) McGill, who was drowned at Wasaga Beach on Sunday, August 19, was held on Wednesday, August 22nd, from her late residence, 114 Westmount Avenue at 2:30 p.m. The service was conducted by Rev. A. L. Richards of Barbourville United Church and burial followed at Prospect Cemetery.

The pall-bearers were her three brothers-in-law, Messrs. D. W. Huycke, R. A. Bell and W. E. Taylor, and Murray Dawson, William McKenzie and Thomas Richardson.

Miss McGill was a victim of a double drowning accident at Wasaga Beach, when she and her cousin, Miss H. Goltz, Bracebridge, stepped off a sandbar into deep water at Wasaga Beach and sank before help could reach them.

The late Miss McGill was born at Centreville, where she lived until a few years ago, when she moved with her family to Toronto. She was educated at Centreville Public School, Napanee Collegiate and Toronto High School of Commerce, in Toronto. She was a girl of very cheerful disposition and charming personality as a fact well demonstrated by the many beautiful floral tributes and expressions of sympathy and caused many friends who gathered to pay their last respects at her funeral.

She is survived by her father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. T. E. McGill, and five sisters, Bessie (Mrs. W. E. Taylor, Bernice and Jean, Marion (Mrs. D. W. Huycke), and Evelyn, (Mrs. R. A. Bell)

Among the out-of-town relatives who attended the funeral were her grandmother, Mrs. W. J. McGill, of Centreville; Ont., Mrs. P. C. Gerow of Tamworth, Mr. and Mrs. C. S. McGill, Centreville, Mrs. F. E. Marlin, Welland, Mr. and Mrs. P. L. Thompson of Buffalo, and W. E. Taylor, Moose Jaw.

APPLES IN EGYPT

It appears that centuries were to pass and the pyramids crumble and decay before Egypt, the ever-old and ever-young, knew the delectability of the Canadian apple. Indeed, until two or three years ago, Egypt was entirely neglected by Canadian apple growers, but as soon as the Canadian apple became known, Egypt soon became the fourth largest consumer of that popular Canadian fruit. The quality of the Canadian apple is supreme, and had an ancient Pharaoh of All the Egypts been able to introduce it into his realms, that masterful monarch would have been a feather in his duplicated hat.

The value of the exports of Canadian apples to Egypt in 1933 bounded the high level of $135,177. This may occasion no surprise to Canadians, generally, for Egypt grows apples, but it is all the more to Canada's credit because as a cold matter of business, emphasized by the Canadian Trade Commissioner in Egypt who states, in a recent report: "It is difficult to find a reason for the increase during the last season, as the slight improvement in the economic condition in Egypt were not such as to warrant such an increase in apple imports." But quality always tells

FARM POWER EFFICIENCY

The Canadian Pioneer Problems Committee, commissioned Mr. R. R. Robson and Professor G. L. Shanks of the University of Manitoba to investigate the efficiency with which Manitoba farmers were utilizing the various power units, and consequently a series of draw-bar tests. As in all, were made to determine the extent of overloading or underloading with regard to horses and tractors. The draft tests made during the survey, says Scientific Agriculture, show conclusively that the average operator has little idea of the power being developed by his horses or tractor. In the case of horse-drawn implements, there were examples of three horses pulling the same load as six horses, and of four horses drawing practically as much as eight horses. In so far as horse operators are concerned, the odds seem to be just as great that the horses are underloaded as overloaded. With tractors, a fixed minimum cannot be exceeded, and all tractors tested in the survey were found to be underloaded. No simple method for determining when the tractor has an adequate load is available to the farmer, and therefore the average tractor in these tests was found to be operating with an inefficient load.

Dominion Mortality Rate at Low Figure

While Canada's mortality figure for the first six months of the year was identical with the record high point established for the first half of 1933, the United States mortality figure is far from showing the same favourable conditions. Indeed, after having experienced favourable mortality rates throughout the depression years, the United States is confronted with the paradox of an unfavourable change at a time when economic conditions generally are improving. This fact is revealed by statisticians of the Metropolitan Life in a report on health conditions in Canada and the United States.

At the end of May, the margin between the death rate for the first half of 1934 and that for the like part of 1933, was 4.4 per cent. in the United States, but one of the best June health records in the history of the American population, brought the margin to 2.9 per cent.

The statisticians report a doubling in the decrease for measles this year over last year's figure, while the increase for whooping cough is almost double. Rises are also recorded in the mortality for cancer, diabetes, heart disease and pneumonia.

The outstanding unfavourable development in the health picture of 1934 in the United States, is an abrupt rise of 15 per cent in the pneumonia death rate.

Indeed, after having experienced favourable mortality rates throughout the depression years, the United States is confronted with the paradox of an unfavourable change at a time when economic conditions generally are improving. This fact is revealed by statisticians of the Metropolitan Life in a report on health conditions in Canada and the United States.

At the end of May, the margin between the death rate for the first half of 1934 and that for the like part of 1933, was 4.4 per cent. in the United States, but one of the best June health records in the history of the American population, brought the margin to 2.9 per cent.

The statisticians report a doubling in the decrease for measles this year over last year's figure, while the increase for whooping cough is almost double. Rises are also recorded in the mortality for cancer, diabetes, heart disease and pneumonia.

The outstanding unfavourable development in the health picture of 1934 in the United States, is an abrupt rise of 15 per cent in the pneumonia death rate.

THE CANADIAN NATIONAL INSTITUTE FOR THE BLIND EXHIBIT at the Canadian National Exhibition

The talking book, one of the latest sensations in the world of sound, is now being demonstrated at the exhibit of the Canadian National Institute for the Blind in the Electrical and Engineering Building at the Canadian National Exhibition, at Toronto. This year, for the first time, all the activities in which blind persons are engaged are being carried on under the premises, and every phase of the Institute's Canada-wide programme is included.

The National Library of the Institute which contains over 17,500 volumes, is conducting a booth where Braille books are on view, and Braille typewriter operated. The current issue of the monthly Braille magazine "The Courier" sent out by the National Office in Edmonton, Alberta, is being produced, showing the process of Braille printing, followed by the stitching of the pages together.

Thirty-one blind persons are present, some demonstrate home handicrafts, another turning out attractive dresses and aprons on one of the power driven machines used in the garment factories of the Institute located in Toronto and Winnipeg.

Rubber door mats, made from old automobile tires are being manufactured in the booth representing the Western Division of the Institute (British Columbia and Alberta) and setting is one of the occupations found in the booth of the Prairie Provinces Division (Saskatchewan and Manitoba) where a blind man is caning chairs, next a blind girl from the Quebec Division typing letters on a standard typewriter taking her dictation from the dictaphone, and a blind man in the Maritime Division booth (New Brunswick, Nova Scotia and Prince Edward Island) demonstrating the manufacture of willow signal cones used by the Dominion Meteorological Department for weather signalling on the sea coast.

The Industrial Placement Department arranged for a blind man employed in industry by a well-known sporting goods company to carry on with his regular job of stringing tennis rackets, another to fit spokes to bicycle wheels, while a blind employee in one of the Motor Car Companies is demonstrating his skill in stuffing cushions for automobiles and assembling control handles for car windows.

Games used by the blind, such as Braille playing cards, dominoes, etc. are on display, as well as Braille watches, thermometers and other appliances. In this booth information can be obtained regarding the special privileges for blind people such as radio services, street car passes, theatre passes, etc.

Institute factory work including the process of manufacturing Blindcraft brooms is fully demonstrated with one blind man sorting broom corn, another winding brooms and a third sewing and clipping them. Wicker furniture is being made and serviceable baskets take shape while they are being watched.

One of the special features of the exhibit is the engaging group of dolls in the apprentices of blindness both portraying, with the assistance of artistically designed verses above them, the particular care that must be taken of the eyes at various stages of life.

Literature published by the Institute is available in a number of the booths also cards for testing vision that may as well be used for telephone number memorandum, and Braille alphabet cards.

The complete structure, containing all the demonstration booths of the Institute, which is finished in red, black and cream, was constructed so that a general view of all the various activities can be seen from the main entrance, there being no high partitions between the different booths.

Members of the Toronto Women's Auxiliary to the Canadian National Institute for the Blind are conducting a special branch of their Blind Craft Shop and have also an Information Booth most attractively furnished with wicker chairs, desk, ferns in fern pot-holders and flower baskets, all cleverly fashioned by the hands of blind workers. The furnishings of this booth are carried out in the cream, black and red of the entire exhibit.

If you are visiting the Exhibition this year, you shouldn't miss this intensely interesting and enlightening display. Remember the location "Electrical and Engineering Building, near the Prince's Gate.

Hollywood is Coming To Napanee!
HERE ON FRIDAY, AUG. 31.

Although that may sound like a brief statement, it is, save for perhaps slight exaggeration, the truth, for on Friday, August 31st, the far famed Metro-Goldwyn Traveling Motion Picture Studio will pay the "Wonderland" Theatre, a brief visit from 3 to 3:30 p.m.

This traveling studio, which was designed and constructed to special specifications at a cost of $150,000, is literally a miniature Hollywood on wheels; what with its elaborate motion picture sound equipment, its cameras, and its expert cref of camera and sound men from the famous Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios, in California.

Facilities for both the taking and the projection of talking motion pictures are included aboard the studio, and realizing that the general public would be greatly interested in having an opportunity to inspect this equipment, it is announced that during the studio's visit here, this will permitted.

Painted a colorful red, and tastefully trimmed in gold, the studio measures over 90 feet long and 9 ft. wide. Wherever it goes, it creates a terrific sensation, and since it began its tour of the country, it has been visited and inspected by countless thousands, everywhere.

The studio is designed so the public may pass through it to view the projection equipment at one end, and the sound studio for the recording of voice tests and the filming of screen tests, at the other.

The screen is located on the rear of the studio proper, and is so arranged, talking motion pictures can be shown to an audience congregated about the rear of the studio outside. With the projection machine equipped with special, powerful lens, and with the electric power units about five times as powerful as those used on the regulation theatre projection outfits, it is even possible for motion pictures to be shown in broad daylight, it is announced.

The Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Company, latest motion picture producing organization in the world today, in sending this elaborate studio around the world, to visit virtually every city of importance in the United States and Europe where Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer pictures are exhibited.

Not only will this traveling studio serve to enlighten the movie public with the secrets of motion picture production and recording, but it is expected that this world tour will effect a reconciliation with educational and industrial leaders, promoting both the advance and visual education and the return of prosperity.

Accompanying the studio on this world tour is a special Studebaker Camera car, fully equipped for Hearst Metrotone Newsreel work, and two special built Studebaker cars, one of which carry the official Hollywood party making up the studio's personnel.

NEWS AND INFORMATION FOR THE BUSY FARMER

(Furnished by the Ontario Department of Agriculture)

Weekly Crop Report

Harvesting of fall wheat is nearing completion and threshing is well under way. While yields are irregular, sample is good. Cutting of barley and oats is well advanced and threshing has commenced. Grain is of good quality. Corn is growing well and promises an average crop. Roots, grass pastures and second growth alfalfa have benefitted by recent rains. Tree fruit yields will be considerably below average. Grapes continue to develop satisfactorily. Rainfall has helped tobacco crops generally, but a severe hailstorm destroyed about 10 per cent of the crop in the Delhi area.

The Maintenance of Soil Fertility

A more permanent agriculture for Southwestern Ontario will require a more definite soil building program than has been practised on many farms in the district during the past decade or two. Have we become so interested in cash crops in many districts that we are overlooking some of the fundamentals in the maintenance of soil fertility ? Shall we be able to maintain soil fertility and crop yields under many of our present systems of farming ? Is our whole program on the average farm definite enough to insure improvement rather than decline ? These questions deserve the serious consideration of the man who is thinking of the future as well as of the present possibilities of his farm.

We certainly have access to better seed today than was available thirty years ago. However, good seed alone will not insure continued good yields. The humus in the soil and soft fertility must be maintained as well. These facts are borne out in the various rotation studies of the Dominion Experimental Station, Harrow, Ontario.

While nothing has been found that will quite take the place of barnyard manure in a soil building program, the available supply is entirely inadequate to meet the demands of our soils in most sections of Southwestern Ontario. Where an adequate amount of manure is not produced on the farm, either more livestock should be kept or green manure should be produced in the soil by the use of such soiling crops as sweet clover, rye, and soybeans. After all, a green manure crop is the cheapest method of adding humus to the soil. Alfalfa, as well, should play a much more important part in our soil building program. It is the cheapest and most productive hay crop we have and, in addition, should be utilized for pasture much more than it is at present. A more definite soil-building program, combined with good soil management, will certainly result in a more permanent and profitable agriculture.

Raspberry Planting

During the month of September, or even as late as mid-October, raspberry canes may be planted with as much success as in the early spring before the canes have started to grow. The distance at which the rows and plants are to be placed depends largely upon the type of training to be followed. In Eastern Canada, two systems are in general use, the hill system and the hedgerow. In the hill system the plants are set at least four by four feet apart, which permits, with care, the use of a single horse cultivator either way. Where land is cheaper and the labor higher, the distance may be increased to seven by seven feet, permitting the use of a double cultivator and eliminating most of the hand hoeing. If the hedgerow system is adopted, the rows may be placed six feet apart, or wider, and the plants set three feet apart in a row. If the plants are checked in rows so that they all come opposite, a single horse cultivator may be used the first season and thus cut down maintenance costs by a considerable amount.

Some Poultry Parasites Easily Controlled

At this season red mites and body lice frequently cause serious loss in production, deaths and follow a bad infestation among both the young and the old stock, and considerable time and care may be required to bring the flock back into condition after the trouble has been located.

Carelessness or unsanitary conditions are usually responsible for the presence of these pests. They thrive on dirty nests and multiply rapidly in filth if it is allowed to accumulate in corners or cracks and crevices of the henhouse.

Lice live entirely on the body of the bird and irritate by crawling and biting. Their eggs are laid at the base of the feather, usually around the vent or under the wing. Fortunately, they are easily controlled and by using ordinary precautions the flock may be kept free and clean. The usual practice at the Experimental Station at Harrow is to apply Blue Ointment, which can be obtained at any drug store. A portion of blue ointment about the size of a pea is smeared between the thumb and first and second fingers and rubbed in and around the vent and at the base of the wing close to the body. One thorough application when the birds are being placed in their winter quarters is usually sufficient to keep them clean for the year. However, the birds should be examined at intervals because a re-infestation may occur during the hot weather.

The red mites do not stay on the birds constantly. As a rule they spend the day in some crack or crevice or on the underside of the roosts, returning to the birds at night by piercing the skin and gorging themselves with blood. The control is comparatively simple. A solution of 1 to 3 crude carbolic and kerosene or one of the good coal tar preparations usually used as a disinfectant may be applied with a brush to the droppings boards, roosts and nests after they have been thoroughly scraped and cleaned. In the case of a bad infestation, when the mites have migrated to all parts of the house, a thorough cleaning and spraying with one of these agents will be necessary and should be repeated after an interval of two or three days.

Persian Palm is unrivalled for promoting feminine loveliness. Tones and rejuvenates the skin. Makes it unsightly soft-textured. Makes hands flawlessly white. Especially recommended to coache and relieve roughness or chafine caused by weather conditions. Indispensable to every refined woman for daily and refreshing. Delicately fragrant. Magical in results. Never leaves a vestige of stickiness. Persian Balm is the one toilet requisite for the woman who cares for charm and elegance.

Barbers' Itch and Ringworm are relieved by the use of Douglas' Egyptian Liniment; quick, certain results. Relieves the most obstinate cases.

Local And District News of Women's Organizations

REIDVILLE W. I.

The Reidville Women's Institute met at the home of Mrs. James Phillips on Wednesday, July 25th. Mrs. E. A. Hannah presided at the chair. The meeting was held in the form of a quilting. It opened by singing the opening ode. There were thirteen members and two visitors present. The roll call was answered by naming a law of the country, and was well responded to. The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved. It was decided upon to give the school children a treat of ice cream. Other business was dealt with and the president brought the meeting to a close when the National Anthem was sung.

The hostess served a delicious lunch which was very much enjoyed. The collection was taken.

VIOLET-SWITZERVILLE W. I.

The members of Violet - Switzerville Women's Institute held a very interesting meeting at the home of Mesdames Robson, Violet, Thursday, Aug. 9th, with a fairly good attendance of members and guests, considering the busy season. A goodly number of the business matters were despatched, promptly. The roll call, "Vegetables, pros and cons," was very much alive with good suggestions as to preparation, serving and canning.

Our agricultural representative, Mr. C. W. Buchanan was unfortunately unable to be present, but we anticipate a splendid evening meeting in the near future with the men of the community present and our representative as the guest speaker.

Interesting current events were given by Mrs. Rae Brown and a discussion followed. Community singing was enjoyed and a very fine reading of Pauline Johnston's, entitled "Wolverine" was given by Mrs. Harold Robson.

A guest present at the meeting, who had lived for some years in the State of Montana, gave us a bright little talk on conditions in her native state, comparing crops, seasons, etc., and it was delightful. An agricultural contest was prepared by the hostess and caused a great deal of merriment, the prizes being won by Mrs. E. A. Wright and Mrs. Wells.

The meeting closed with the mizpah benediction and dainty refreshments were served by the hostesses. A happy half hour followed over the tea cups. A vote of thanks was extended to Mrs. Robson and to those taking part in the program.

The members are asked to bear in mind the grandmothers' meeting on Thursday, September 6, at the home of Mrs. Wilson. A splendid program is being arranged and all ladies in the community are cordially invited.

Members are reminded of the button contest and are requested to bring along their packages of quilts at the grandmothers' meeting and to compete in both for the prizes.

CAMDEN EAST W. I.

Grandmother's Day and the August meeting of the Women's Institute was held at the home of Mrs. Gordon Scott, and was attended by twenty-one members and visitors.

The roll call was answered by "Something a Grandmother told me." Following the usual ode and the reading of the creed, the minutes were read and several letters of thanks for fruit, flowers and sympathy, and a letter to the Market Branch "Achievement Day," were read.

The business of the meeting dealt with the exhibits for Centreville Fair; a scrap-book for W. I. items, and selecting a committee to attend to outfitting a high school student for the coming year. At the close of the business meeting, Mrs. A. Lewis in very appropriate words, welcomed the grandmothers.

The next item on the programme was a very interesting and delightful resume of the early history of Camden East, by Mr. H. R. Purcell, of Colebrook. As Mr. Purcell was born at Camden East, 95 years ago, he was able to take us back to the early days of our community, when Clark's Mills, as the settlement was then known, was east of the present village. Bush's Tannery was situated where Mr. Babcock's garage now stands, and four hotels were in operation. After speaking of the business life of the community, the speaker mentioned some thing of some of the farms, particularly the Williams and Nimmo farms and the one now owned by Mr. M. Hinch. On the last mentioned farm stands the oldest house in the district and was built in 1812. Mr. James Williams, great-grandfather of Mr. S. Williams, came to Camden East in 1803, building his house on the south side of the river, before a bridge was built across it. In speaking of Mr. Nimmo, Mr. Purcell paid tribute to his great generosity and interest in the community, saying: "he was the best man to the poor of any ever in the county." His interest in the religious life of the community was shown by conducting a Sunday School in his village and later in a large room in his own home.

There are only a few of the interesting things mentioned by Mr. Purcell, in an address that showed a remarkable memory and an unusually active mind for a man of his years. The members of the W. I. felt it a great honour and pleasure to have Mr. Purcell with them and wish to thank him for his very able address.

Several grandmothers displayed costumes of by-gone days, Mrs. A. Parrott winning the prize.

The Grandmothers and Mr. Purcell were then seated in the centre of the room and each presented with a nosegay of sweet peas and baby's breath. Prizes to the grandmothers were often distributed and the meeting closed with the National Anthem.

Lunch was served by the hostess and her committee, and everyone enjoyed the meal and the social time together.

The September meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. W. Hinch, on the fifth inst.

Recipes & Hints

It is the desire of " The Beaver" to devote this section of the paper, regularly, to the publication of Recipes and Household Hints, received from local women or women's organizations. We would be pleased to receive recipes and suggestions and would ask that you publish the contributors' names, as requested. Contributions will be used as space permits.

(Send them in early in the week.)

DATE LOAF

Cut up half a package Karavan dates. Add one teaspoon baking soda and one cup boiling water. Allow to cool and then add one cup brown sugar which has been well beaten with one egg. Add two cups of sifted flour and butter the size of walnut, melted. Beat well and pour into loaf pan lined with wax paper.

Bake 45 minutes in moderate oven.

BACON AND EGGS
(New Style)

Eight slices bacon, diced.
Six small slices dry bread, diced.
Four eggs.
One-quarter cup milk.
One-eighth teaspoon pepper.
One-quarter teaspoon salt.

Fry bacon until brown. Add bread and toss with the bacon and fat until well seasoned and slightly browned. Then add the eggs beaten with the seasoning and milk and scramble as usual.

PEACH AND MELON COMPOTE

One and one-half cups diced peaches, one and one-half cups of diced melon, one and one-half cups granulated sugar, two and one-quarter cups water, two tablespoons of ginger syrup, two or three pieces of preserved ginger.

Make a syrup of the sugar and water. When about as thick as maple syrup, add syrup from preserved ginger and the preserved ginger finely minced. Bring to the boiling point and add peaches and melon. Simmer very slowly until the fruit is clear and the syrup thick. Chill and serve plain or with a topping of whipped cream.

MUSCOVITE OF PEACHES AND MELONS

Two cups finely cut honeydew melon, two cups finely sliced peaches, three-quarters cup orange juice, two tablespoons lemon juice, three-quarters cup powdered sugar, three sprigs mint, half cup whipping cream.

Choose perfectly ripe fruit. Crush mint leaves in sugar and combine with juices and lemon juice. Let stand until sugar is dissolved and remove mint. Add prepared peaches and melon, turn into freezer and pack in six parts ice to one part ice cream salt. Let stand three hours or longer and serve topped with cream whipped until firm and slightly sweetened with powdered sugar.

This frozen dessert is unusual and delicious for a summer dinner.

CAULIFLOWER RELISH

Two quarts minced onions.
Two quarts minced cucumbers.
Two large cauliflowers (cut fine).

Put each vegetable in a separate dish, cover with boiling water and salt (half cup salt to 2 gallons water) and let stand over night. Drain next morning and combine with this sauce:

Four green peppers minced fine.
One ounce tumeric powder.
Two quarts cider vinegar.
Eight cups granulated sugar.
Half cup mustard.
One ounce curry powder.
Two-thirds cup flour.

Mix dry ingredients first, so that the flour will not curdle. Boil ten minutes, remove from the fire, add two ounces mustard seed and one bunce celery seed. Bottle hot, in sterilized jars.

COUNTRY MERCHANT EGG GRADING

An interesting development of recent years from the standpoint of country shippers of eggs, says the Department of Agriculture's Egg and Poultry Market Review, has been the increasing numbers of comparatively small shippers, such as country merchants, who have been able to develop their grading to the point where buyers are anxious to receive their shipments and pay for them on the basis of the shipper's grading. This practice has been growing for a number of years but has made particularly rapid advances during the current season, especially in the five eastern provinces. Some Montreal dealers at the present time, for instance, are paying a premium of as much as two cents per dozen for such eggs over ordinary quotations and sell to exporters on the shipper's cases. The advantage of this method of trading is obvious, not only to the shipper himself but also to the producers whom he serves. In addition, a serious application of grading in this way is resulting in a marked improvement in districts where it is applied.

GREEN TOMATO PICKLE

To make tomato pickle, take 4 quarts of green tomatoes, 4 small onions, and 4 green peppers. Slice the tomatoes and onions, sprinkle with half cup of salt and leave overnight in a crock. The next morning drain off the brine. Put in a preserving kettle one quart of vinegar, one level teaspoon each of black pepper, mustard seed, celery seed, cloves, allspice and cinnamon, and three-quarter cup of sugar. Bring to a boil and add the prepared tomatoes, onions and pepper; cook slowly for thirty minutes, fill the jars and seal them.— Preserving Fruits Bulletin, Dominion Department of Agriculture.

This is the ninth year of the Marathon swims at the Canadian National Exhibition. That they continue to hold a high place in the sporting calendar is evidenced by the crowds of upwards of 100,000 who attend to see the international professional natators compete.

CELERY PICKLE

Fifteen tomatoes.
Three or three heads of celery.
Ten onions.
Two Red Peppers.
Two pounds sugar.
Three cups vinegar.
A little cayenne pepper.
Boil 1¼ hours. Bottle.

CANADIAN MUSTARD RELISH

One quart cucumbers.
One quart onions.
One quart cabbage.
Two red peppers.
Two quarts vinegar.
Half-pound mustard.
Three cups brown sugar.
One cup flour.
Celery seed (about 5 cents worth.)
Tumeric (about 3 cents worth.)

Procedure : Chop all vegetables finely, soak overnight in salted water, drain thoroughly, mix well and cook with the sugar, flour and celery seed. Add the tumeric in vinegar. This recipe will keep nicely, bottled in sterilized jars.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

A DARNING HINT—

Darning table, linen calls for exquisite work if the darns are to be neat and inconspicuous. It is a good plan to stitch a piece of fine white net on the wrong side of the article, over the hole. Then run your stitches in and out of the holes in the net, taking up a little of the linen around the hole. In this way the darn can be kept perfectly flat and even, and the net also strengthens the weak place. The same method can be used for darning stockings, using colored net to match.

HINTS TO THE COOK—

When you boil or roast meat, the principle to bear in mind is that a crust should be formed on the outside as quickly as possible, in order to retain the juices. The temperature must then be lowered in order that the inside may cook through.

When boiling meat, plunge it into boiling water and boil it rapidly for three or four minutes, then add a little cold water to check the boiling, and draw the pan aside. After the first boiling, the meat should only simmer.

When roasting meat, put it into a very hot oven, or close to a clear red fire, and leave until the whole outside is crusted over. Then move the joint further away from the heat to finish cooking at about half the original temperature. Allow fifteen minutes per pound when roasting, and twenty minutes per pound when boiling. The shape of the joint should not make any difference in the calculations—only the weight.

A stew will be more savory if the meat is first browned quickly on both sides, by frying in hot fat for two or three minutes. After frying, lay the meat in a stewpan, sprinkle with seasoned flour and pour in sufficient stock just to cover. All vegetables are added to the stew, put in less than the vegetables increase the liquid. Bring a stew up to boiling point, then immediately put it in a far corner of the oven and keep it gently simmering for two hours. Do not use a larger stewpan than is necessary.

CANADA'S CUT FLOWER INDUSTRY

Canada's cut flower industry, which may be said to have passed its initial stages of development, is blooming the value of cut flowers sold in the Dominion in 1933 representing 62 per cent of the total of the various categories of floricultural and decorative plants. Indeed, both in volume and value, the cut flower industry exceeded all the other classes put together, as shown by 206 completed reports from most of the leading growers, dealt with by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics. The total value of cut flowers sold in Canada in 1933 was $897,723; outdoor roses $39,087; other outdoor trees, shrubs and plants, $355,827; specific indoor plants $203,190; other indoor plants, $33,196; and $19,617 for flowering bulbs. In all, the value of the floricultural and decorative plant production in Canada for the year ended May 31, 1933, totalled $1,451,477, as represented by the statistics obtained.

Orchard Mulches

Where the grass is cut in the spaces between the trees of the orchard and used for a mulch, it should be applied while still green. When dry hay is used, it will not begin to decompose until soaked by rain. In the meantime, it constitutes a serious fire hazard and the beneficial action of the mulch is delayed. As a general rule, where grass is used as a mulch, it should be applied before July 1, or after the terminal buds have been formed on the new wood in late summer. It is also desirable that the early summer application be comparatively light, two or three inches of green grass being sufficient, so that it will be decomposed by the middle of August, in order to permit the trees to mature and ripen the new wood. The most satisfactory time to apply mulch is in the late fall, or early winter, when the material can be trampled into the snow. If this is done, it will not be moved by winds and will be found lying compact and close to the ground in the following spring. Furthermore, with the material in this condition, decomposition will usually begin with the advent of warm weather, after which a mulch will rarely, if ever, get dry enough to burn.

The cheapness of Mother Graves' Worm Exterminator puts it within reach of all, and it can be got at any druggist's.

A BARBER WHO HAD RHEUMATISM

Tells How He Carried On

A barber who had been "a martyr to rheumatism" writes :—

"I have been a martyr to rheumatism for some ten years. For five years I was so affected that it was with the greatest difficulty I was able to carry on my business. I may say I am a barber by trade. After having tried numerous remedies, I was finally advised to try Kruschen. I am pleased to say that after having used Kruschen for some twelve months, I am now freer from aches and pains than I have been for some ten years. In fact, I consider I am rid of rheumatism, thanks to Kruschen Salts."— W. M.

Two of the ingredients of Kruschen Salts are the most effectual solvents of uric acid known to medical science. They swiftly dissolve the sharp edges of the painful crystals, then convert them into a harmless solution. Other ingredients of these Salts have a stimulating effect upon the kidneys, and assist them to expel the dissolved uric acid needles through the natural channel.

SUMMARY OF NEW REGULATIONS AND LAWS AFFECTNG AGRICULTURE

PASSED AT 1934 SESSION OF PARLIAMENT

— BILL 26 —

AN ACT RESPECTING FRUIT AND HONEY

The more important features of Part 1 of the amended Fruit and Honey Act eliminate the establishment of grade marks, the marking and standardization of fruit packages which the old Act prescribed, and in order to obtain a more desirable flexibility to meet changing conditions, seasonal variations or emergent crop or marketing conditions, the Minister of Agriculture may now put into effect, by regulation, all grades for fruits, standard packages and their marking, requirements in respect of import and export shipments, and miscellaneous regulations.

Another amendment, unanimously admitted to be necessary for proper enforcement of the Act and regulations, is that any lot of fruit may be placed under Detention and be at the risk and expense of the owner until made to comply with whatever requirement is in violation.

It is provided that no fruit of any kind intended for sale shall be packed in any package other than the packages or packages prescribed for that kind of fruit, except that where packages are not specified for any particular kind of fruit, they may be used for any fruit; also that soiled or dilapidated packages shall not be used to the injury of the shipping or marketable quality of the fruit; also more definite regulations against the practice of overfacing immature fruit with mature fruit.

Provision is made to control the movement of bulk fruit, which the industry claims has adversely affected marketing; also provision for transit interception and inspection of truck-borne fruits, which were not considered in the original framing of this legislation.

The export markets are to be safeguarded by requiring the common carriers to condition their acceptance of any defined traffic on the presentation of an export inspection certificate, whenever it may appear to be in the public interest that such a regulation shall be issued for any product from any district.

The distribution on domestic markets of fruits below certain grades that is cull fruit—may now only be shipped for processing purposes.

Any Provincial Fruit Growers' Association may request the registration of foreman or head packers.

Part 2 of the Act is new and its purpose is to prevent unfair and fraudulent practices in the marketing of fresh fruit and vegetables by : 1. Licensing commission agents, dealers and brokers ; 2. Requiring bonds in assurance against defalcations ; 3. Requiring that licenses keep full and correct accounts and records which will be subject to examination ; 4. Prohibiting fraudulent accounting, unjustifiable rejections or failures to deliver and misrepresentations ; 5. Authorizing the investigation of complaints and issuance of assessment and compensation awards, the publication of facts concerning offences and violations and the suspension or revocation of licenses.

Part 3 provides for the establishment by regulation of grades with our classes and grades for Canadian honey moving from province to province or out of Canada ; the inspection and certification of honey for export from Canada and compulsory inspection for interprovincial shipments ; and for registration of export and interprovincial shippers and for inspection of premises and the sanitary conditions under which honey may be packed for export or interprovincial shipment.

As a result of the legislation governing honey, it is hoped to place on the market a more uniform class of Canadian honey ; to put Canadian honey on a more favourable competitive basis with other standard food products, and to inspire greater confidence on the part of the consumer —in general, to better marketing conditions.

It was the uniform excellence of Grade A turkeys of the Canadian Poultry Pool in Western Canada in 1933 brought repeat orders from Great Britain, and this remark may also be applied to the recent export shipments of chickens.

The exports of Canadian concentrated milk products, last year, amounted to 27,700,600 pounds, an increase of nearly 3,000,000 pounds on the preceding year.

HOW WE GOT OUR NAMES

BY "PENPOINT"

Anyone who would like to form a clear idea of the way we got our surnames, should imagine a young fourteenth-century countryman going to London to visit his uncle John, who had left Buckingham many years before to seek his fortune in the metropolis. The fourteenth century is chosen because it is the period during which the city name, until that time a changeable accident, was becoming, for the purpose of practical convenience, fixed and hereditary.

Our friend, whom we shall call Richard (the) Shephard, only knows that John's father's name was Andrew, that John is doing well with the poultry line and that he lives not far from St. Paul's Church. Arriving in the city he seeks information from the elderly bpst of the "Bull" Inn, commonly known as Henry (at) Bull; and explains that he is looking for one John Andrews or Andersen. The host replies that that description is too vague and enquires for further details. Learning that the object of the search lives near St. Paul's, he suggests that John (at) Powles, the draper, may be the man or possibly John (at) Church, the tailor, citizens, whom in ordinary intercourse, he himself would perhaps address rather as John Draper or John Taylor. But the London of John's trade at once limits the scope of the enquiry and Richard starts hopefully for the poultry, here in the middle ages, John's trade was concentrated.

As before, he asks where to avail for John Andrews or Anderson, and when he tries the amended description of John (the) Poulterer, he meets with ill-concealed derision, for there are a hundred "poulters" (now poulterers) in the city, and a hundred of them are called John. Undismayed, he asks if anyone knows John (at) Blackthorne, the aged churchwarden of the street remembers two men who formerly bore the name and if so, to be distinguished, are now known as John (the) Little, named antithetically from the gigantic stature of John Gathergood, named from his success in gathering wealth. Richard remembers Augustyn Goldsmith and uncle John was of dwarfish proportions and acquisitive temperament) and so he seeks John Gathergood. A few doors farther on he discovers his kinsman, the owner of a flourishing business.

Settling down to help his uncle in his business, Richard soon becomes a thorough Londoner. But it takes some time for his name to settle down. Buckingham he had been known indifferently as Dick Robinson after his father one Robert; Dick Scott, an immigrant from the north and Dick Brytheway, from the position of the parental cottage. Neither of these names appeals to his new neighbours, who call him for a time Dick (the) Shepherd in playful allusion to his rustic ways, Dick (the) Strong from his physical powers or Dick (the) Crisp from his crisp, curly hair. His success at the city sports further helps him, for about 1400 Lightfoot, whereas a successful appearance in a mystery play performed by the guild, changes the name of his name to Dick Herod. His friends also help him to nicknames, naming Rich. Rickett, Hick Hitchin and so on, which in case his children should be named from their father's name, will lend name holds out many possibilities for the surname of his later descendants. For Richard is the head of a family mish; on succeeding to the business of his deceased uncle, he has married one Mary Maggs or Meggett, so named from her widowed mother, Margaret, who carries on a small grocery business at the sign of the angel; to that circumstance the Saxons owe the alternate names Mary (at) Angel, and Mary (the) Spicer. Unfortunately, Richard is spoiled by success. His arrogance is reflected in his temporary appellation of Richard (the)Proper, and his sanctimonious affectation of pious phraseology in the name Richard Godfather, which is first applied to him by a contemporary ironist.

Naturally, he goes to opposite extremes, takes to drink and roaring, whence he is known as Richard Drinkall and Richard Revelour (Rev. Dieu). Wasting a once considerable fortune, he dies in the prime of life as Richard Shatterpate, and his widow might have been fastened on his unfortunate descendants were it not for the courage and energy shown by their mother. Rapidly building up again the fallen fortune of the family she is known for many years in the poultry, as Mariota the Wise, being variously the name to her descendants, the Marriotts.

The experience of Richard's, of course, is exaggeration. No man even in the fourteenth century would be known by so many surnames, though it is known where some had four, one from each of the main classes into which all surnames can be divided—baptismal, occupative, local descriptive. Thus the descendants of the man in question are called de Rolls as Henry Wills' son, the fletcher of the town's end called Nightingale, may now be Harris, Wilson, Fletcher or Nightingale. Or they have preferred to translate the foreign Pleidy, or (from French fleche—arrow) by the English Arrowsmith; or again they may have taken their surname not from the above Henry but from his grandson "Hugh Tom's son, the archer of the dale with the long bow," with the result that they are now known as Hughes, Hewson, Fewtest, and so forth; Archer, Dale or Benbow.

The point is that the surname or supername is not 'really a name at all but a description or address which in English in the Middle period was subject to accidental changes. So far as words show the Anglo-Saxon was usually known by a single name such as Alfred, Edgar, Athelstan, Godwin, Maynard or Osbert; and description was often added for convenience, but of recognised surnames, few traces are found.

Several years were required to convince many long-distance swimmers that unless they are top-notchers the Marathons at the Canadian National Exhibition are not for them. The result is that none but rugged, courageous, capable swimmers now face the starting gun.

Three Years Of Isolation

Three years of isolation and monotonly came to an end recently for Mrs. J.E.P. Wight, wife of Sergeant Wight of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, when she returned to Ottawa after a lengthy sojourn in Cherchefel Inlet. Mrs. Wight joined her husband at that remote northern post in 1931, but her association being four sisters of the Grey Nuns Hospital, three Roman Catholic priests, two Salvation Army Captains, a radio operator and two R.C.M.P. constables, the last named constituting Sergeant Wight's small command.

"At the four sisters devote all their time to caring for the sick and needy of the Indian and Eskimo tribes in the district, I rarely saw a woman during the whole time I was at the post," said Mrs. Wight, recently. "There are two children, Daniel and Edward, were born at Chesterfield Inlet.

"It was very lonely, of course, nothing but rocks and sand, with ice and snow nine months, but even in our small community we sometimes had enjoyable parties. Very often we got together for a game of bridge on Saturday evenings."

"We lived in a frame house and the children seemed to thrive on the climate. None of us had any accidents, perhaps address rather as John Draper or John Taylor. But the London of John's trade at once limits the scope of the enquiry and Richard starts hopefully for the poultry, here in the middle ages, John's trade was concentrated.

As before, he asks where to avail for John Andrews or Anderson, and when he tries the amended description of John (the) Poulterer, he meets with ill-concealed derision, for there are a hundred "poulters" (now poulterers) in the city, and a hundred of them are called John. Canadian Women In Parliament

Although Canadian women have been active in politics since they were granted the franchise towards the end of the war, few have actually gained election to Parliament or the Legislatures.

At present, four women hold seats either at Ottawa or provincial capitals and one of this number has signified her intention to retire in the next general elections. She is Hon. Irene Parlby, member of the Alberta Legislature for Lacombe and minister without portfolio for several years, she will not seek re-election.

The other three holding seats are Senator Cairine Wilson, of Ottawa, Miss Agnes Macphail, member of the House of Commons for Grey Southeast, and Mrs. Dorothy Steeves, member of the British Columbia Legislature for Vancouver North.

Mrs. Steeves is the latest woman to win a seat, having been elected on the Co-operative Commonwealth Federation ticket at a by-election a few days ago. She is not the first woman to sit in the British Columbia legislature, however, as the late Mrs. Ralph Smith sat there for a Vancouver seat a few years ago and enjoyed the honor of being the first lady member to address the British Empire. She was a Liberal and became minister without portfolio.

Interesting Career

Many elements combine to make Miss Macphail's political career one of the most interesting in all the annals of Canadian politics. As a country school teached, she sprang into prominence as a champion of farmers' rights. Her election by a constituency of hard-headed Ontario farmers was a keen tribute to Miss Macphail's personality and ability.

Miss Macphail was first elected in 1921 on the crest of the great wave of farmer political consciousness which sent a large United Farmers' or Progressive group to the House of Commons and gave the United Farmers of Ontario control of the government of the province. When this movement receded, Miss Macphail held on. She is not the only woman in the House of Commons, but is the only woman sitting in the original straight farmer party.

Miss Macphail's public services are not confined to parliament. She has come a leader in the movement for world peace and consistently takes part in the work of the League of Nations Society and went to Geneva last year as a member of the Canadian delegation to the assembly of the League of Nations.

The only woman of the Senate, Mrs. Cairine Wilson is a Liberal and comes of a family long prominent in politics. Senator Wilson's appointment was received with widespread favor, being hailed as a successful prosecution of a court action initiated by a number of prominent women who considered that the time was ripe to sit in the upper house. She has no election worries although she frequently goes out in the stump to aid her party.

For Miss Macphail, Mrs. Parlby has represented Canada at the League of Nations Assembly. She entered the political arena as president of the United Farm Women of Alberta and subsequently was elected to the legislature. She became minister in the cabinet without portfolio in the United Farmer government and still holds office in that province.

THE LIVE STOCK PRODUCTS ACT

The amendments to the Live Stock Products Act passed at the last session of Parliament, provide for the licensing of cattle exporting agents, as well as exporters of cattle and for the exportation of live cattle to Great Britain, and define the procedure for issuing exporters and exporting agents under license. Control regarding the quality of cattle exported may be exercised under this provision, and security may be required from exporting agents. Authority has been given for requiring operators of public commercial vehicles transporting live stock or live stock products for sale to guarantee the proper return of the process vehicles to the point of departure thereto, in order that the owners may be assured of payment for their stock marketed by truckers.

Provision also is made for securing a compulsory grade for cattle purchased at assembling points and at abattoirs, comparable to similar regulations governing the next in importance to the stock yards, in order that full statistical records of live stock marketings at stock yards and packing plants may be available. The period of time in which the grade change is given for compliance with a Ministerial order is reduced from thirty days to thirty days, so that quicker action may be secured, and the responsibility of banks and of commission merchants and live stock operative associations with respect to the handling of cattle upon account of funds has been more clearly defined. With regard to poultry, the Dominion Department of Agriculture has been given the necessary authority to proclaim regulations for the control of live chicks brought into any province requesting such proclamation. Certain provinces have asked for such action.

IRISH FREE STATE BACON BONUS

The Irish Free State has decided that this season there will be a bonus of five dollars per cwt. (112 pounds) to exporters of bacon, an additional two dollars per cwt. being given as an "encouragement bounty" to each exporter who has exported two-fifths by bulk weight of his bacon to countries who have completely filled their export sub-quota a bounty of $4 per cwt., as well as the bounty of 48 cents per cwt. on the first two-fifths. With regard to live pigs, an increase of $2.40 per pig is to be made on the present 25 per cent. bounty.

There has been more tomato puree, tomato sauce and ketchup, and tomato soup imported into the British Isles from Canada than from any other country during the first six months of 1934.

Spinach – Home-Cooked and Canned

Although the word "spinach" is supposed to strike terror into the heart of every youthful member of the family, the vegetable itself is the most important of all the leafy species, containing as it does large abundance, iodine, calcium, and all known vitamins. However, if all these essential elements are to be secured, several stipulations enter into the question, namely the condition of the plant itself, the way it is harvested, methods of handling, and most particularly important of all the care in preparation.

To be of the best, food value, spinach should reach the table within a few hours of picking. The longer it is held after cutting, especially if allowed to wilt, the less tender it becomes and there is some loss of food value. If the leaves are exposed to the sun's rays after picking, the vitamin content is affected. Fresh, home-grown spinach is the highest in food value, tenderness, and flavour but unless spinach is used while young and tender it develops acidity. The tender inner leaves may be used for salad, imparting a pleasing flavour.

To avoid loss in cooking, steaming is recommended, and spinach may also be cooked in its own juice in a stew pan over a slow fire. It should be heated gradually to extract the juices and be cooked 25 minutes. A little sugar sometimes improves the flavour of old spinach. Spinach has a high percentage of water in its composition, so allowance must be taken, if whole weights are given in the original straight farmer party. Miss Macphail's public services are not confined to parliament. She has come a leader in the movement for world peace and consistently takes part in the work of the League of Nations Society and went to Geneva last year as a member of the Canadian delegation to the assembly of the League of Nations.

FASCINATING HISTORY OF MOUNTAIN CHURCH

One of the most beautiful of mountain churches and one that has a fascinating history is the little Church of St. Mary and St. George, that stands in the Canadian Rockies in asper National Park.

Building of the church, which was commenced in the summer of 1929, was begun a year earlier, and the corner stone was laid by His Excellency Viscount Willingdon, the then Governor-General of Canada. Unique among mountain churches and unique, indeed, among the churches of Canada, is the Church of St. Mary and St. George. The building with its furnishings, was the gift of a lady from England who visited Jasper one summer and she was so much impressed by the beauty of the surroundings that she resolved that there she should erect her loving memorial to the son who was killed in the war. Thorough addition she made the arrangements: her name never appeared; no one in Jasper knows who she is. The son whose testament, taken out of his pocket when his body was carried in from No Man's Land, is hidden under the corner stone, is to Jasper, an unknown soldier.

Built of stone and stucco, with a tiled roof, tattered within the building is simple in beauty and simplicity is true memorial. The oak panelling to the right and left of the altar was the gift of the Misses Shawcross of England, in memory of their brother, the processional cross, a piece of beautiful craftsmanship in hand-beaten copper, the work of Canadian Indians at London, England was presented by Mrs. E. Holland of Westminster, England; the font from the old church was the gift of "the Women's Auxiliary; and the ewer was given by Mr. and Mrs. W. Bryden, members of the congregation, in memory of their son. The bell which summons people to worship was the gift of Lord Willingdon. Graven on it are the words: "O come unto the Lord the honour due unto His name." It is a church of gifts. The Bible and the prayer book, too, are gifts and make contact with older history. For his kind and unremittant labors during the cholera epidemic of 1848-49," the parishioners of Offchurch presented the books to their rector ,Rev. James Riddell. They were given to the Archbishop's West-minster Palace, and in the end they found their way to Jasper.

ELAVOR OF HAM IS MUCH IMPROVED BY LONG SOAKING

Before the days of scientific refrigeration, ham and cured meats of various sorts were the principal summer meats. Now although fresh meats are available in abundance, ham still finds special favor during hot weather.

If you are going to bake a ham or any cured meats, soak them, after it stand in cold water for at least eight hours, depending on texture and the size of the cut. Both the flavor and texture of the meat are greatly improved by the soaking.

Cook in Low Temperature

Another point to keep in mind is the necessity of slow cooking. The high temperature hardens the fibers of the meat, so, in order to prevent brittleness long, slow cooking is necessary. Whether the cooking process be boiling, broiling or baked which had reached in the interior cuisine test made recently by the Health of Animals Branch of the Dominion Department of Agriculture.

VIOLATION OF PEDIGREE ACT

For violation of the Live Stock Pedigree Act by submitting a diagram to the Canadian Live Stock Records purporting to show that a Jersey bull, Silver Boy II, was identified or tattooed, Ralph A. Hanes, of Brinston, Ontario, was fined $100 in the Ottawa Police Court on August 17th. Two other farmers, Sherman Ball of Winchester, Ontario, and Almond Mc-Intosh of Inkerman, Ontario, were each fined $100 for causing Hanes to sign and present to the Recording Officer of the Canadian Live Stock Records an application for registration and transfer of Silver Boy II. The three defendants pleaded guilty when charged. Hanes was also charged with failure to keep or maintain a private breeding or herd record and with submitting an application for registration of Silver Boy II, which contained false statements. He also pleaded guilty to these charges and was allowed to go on suspended sentence.

An interesting sidelight in connection with these cases and that when Hanes made application to register Silver Boy II the animal was dead. Moreover, he appears to have been a grade bull and not purebred which had reared to the interior cuisine test made recently by the Health of Animals Branch of the Dominion Department of Agriculture.

Representatives of County Attend Service

The first Sunday in September is set apart by the Grand Lodge of the Orange Association, as a memorial Sunday. The County of Lennox and Addington held their annual memorial service at Centreville United Church, Sunday afternoon, September 2nd, at 2:30 p.m.

There were representatives from Lime Lake, Marlbank, Forest Mills, Croydon, Roblin, Selby, Adolphustown, Enterprise, Bay View, Newburgh and Centreville. The service in the church was in charge of Rev. R. M. Silnson, of Enterprise. The County Master, Rev. J. E. Beckel of Napanee, preached the sermon, which was based on the words of I Corinthians, 16th chapter, 13th verse: "Watch we stand fast in the faith, quit ye like men, be strong." The speaker pointed out the need in these days to watch carefully the principles of Protestantism.

The male choir, under the direction of Mr. Corporan, furnished the music and lead in the congregational singing. The opening selection by the choir was "Abide With Me." In the third selection, Mrs. James Robson, pianist of the group, sang the solo, the choir joining in the refrain. Among those in the male choir were Messrs. Adam Scott, Forest Mills; H. P. Crossman and Lynn Crossman, Marysville; L. E. Tunnicliffe, Desertenio; Malcolm Woodcock, Napanee; Adam Scott, Forest Mills; Clarence Bradshaw, Selby; Karl Reeves, Napanee; James Robson and Wm. Unusual Attractions In The Midway, At Lennox Fair

The management of the Lennox Fair are to be complimented on securing Canada's largest travelling outdoor organization to provide the midway at this year's exhibition. This organization, known as the Conklin All Canadian shows, travel in their own train of twenty steel cars and outside of the various freaks and performers that have to be imported from other countries, the personel of the show is one hundred per cent Canadian, with headquarters in Hamilton, Ont., and Vancouver, B.C.

Among the many attractions carried by this aggregation of amusements are twelve side shows, each and every one containing something new and novel in the entertainment world. First and foremost comes "Eric the Robot" the world renowned mechanical man, a feature that came direct to this country from London, Eng., where it was the prize exhibit of the world wide Electrical Exhibition.

Another remarkable attraction is "Ernie and Len" the double-bodied boy. This extraordinary freak has four arms, four legs, two bodies, but only one head and is very much alive being a versatile entertainer.

Six big, new, and up-to-date rides are carried and with the midway a veritable fairyland of lights, one is assured of a real good time.

Municipal Debt Default, Largest In Ont. Province

Toronto.—Thomas Bradshaw, president of the North American Life Assurance Company, told the Ontario Municipal Association that Ontario's municipal debt in default is the largest of any province in Canada.

Forty municipalities in Ontario, Mr. Bradshaw said, are in default to the extent of $96,640,819, while the nearest approach to that figure is found in Quebec, where the defaulting debt is $13 000,000.

"No section of Canada, up to four years ago, had a finer reputation for municipal credit than the Province of Ontario," he said. Today no section in Canada has a more municipal problem on its doorstep than Ontario.

"So numerous have been the defaults, so large an amount do they total, and so many ratepayers and investors do they affect, that it is of prime importance for those who have undertaken to administer our municipalities to realize the seriousness of this situation."

Refers to Loans

Mr. Bradshaw referred to recent loans obtained by the Dominion, Ontario and Quebec Governments. He said the loans were made possible "because of the unblemished credit and fine reputations of these three great Governments."

The speaker admitted that money was cheap and plentiful but suggested that the loans would not have been possible if credit had been damaged.

He said that of the total amount of defaulted municipal bonds in Ontario, 79,229,755 worth were in the hands of investors. "The loss and suffering of defaulting investors as well as the damage to credit as a result of such a lamentable and unenviable record," he added, "can hardly be estimated."

Among the causes of such defaults he listed extravagant and unwarranted expansion during recent years involving abnormal capital expenditures, resulting in taxes that could not be met, failure to reduce expenditure with falling revenue; failure to balance budgets.

Mr. Clarence King Appointed M'gr. Picton C. D. Stores

Mr. Clarence King, a former manager of the store at Picton, will again be manager there.

Turning Cars Into Money

Some $34 000 was realized for the taxpayers, of Ontario by the sale of 67 cars bought by the late Conservative Government for use by the Government officials. The sale was a cash proposition. Some of the cars brought good prices. Premier Henry's car brought $1,500. The average was $280 and is said to be above the government's estimate of the value of the cars.

The attendance was estimated at 8,000. It was the biggest event in auction sales ever held in Ontario.

Runnymede Grads Blanked by Gibbards In First Play Downs

Locals Display Snappy Brand of Baseball

Saturday's two games of baseball between Gibbard A's and Runnymedes of Toronto, resulted in decidedly one-sided scores in favor of the locals.

The first game score was 11-9 and the second 8-0. While the visitors were evidently outclassed, nevertheless the Athletics were right on their toes and delivered two excellent performances. In the first game no errors were chalked up to the Athletics and in the second only two were recorded. On the other hand, the Runnymede team was guilty of many errors in both games.

Blazetich pitched a great game in the first of the series and Dorey was equally as good in the second game. Both men, in addition to pitching well, did some fine infield fielding, which did much to blank the visitors.

In the first game the Athletics got fifteen hits off J. Mennies and Sexsmith, the Runnymede pitchers, and Blazetich yielded only six. In the second game Sexsmith pitched for the Toronto team and allowed fourteen hits. Only five hits were registered against Dorey.

Firemen Answer False Alarm on Sunday Night

On Sunday evening, about 10:30 o'clock, a general fire alarm was sounded and the fire reels rushed down to the store of R. Davis on Dundas Street, where it was reported there was a fire.

A large crowd of people soon gathered expecting to see a blaze, but none was forthcoming. Evidently it was the work of a practical joker, as Mr. and Mrs. Bovs, the proprietors were surprised by the excitement outside their place of business, and disclaimed any knowledge of the cause of the alarm.

I find the greatest thing in this world is, not so much where we stand as in what direction we are moving. To reach the port of heaven we must sail sometimes with the wind and sometimes against it—but we must sail and not drift—nor lie at anchor.—O. W. Holmes.

Goderich Collegiate Wins Case From Town

The following report was included in the Osgoode Hall news, printed in Saturday's edition of "The Globe":—

The Goderich Collegiate Institute and the Town of Goderich. Frank Donnelly for Collegiate Institute Board; D. Nairn for Town of Goderich.

Judgment: The Collegiate Institute Board's action in bringing suit filed with the Clerk of the Town of Goderich its estimate of the amount of money required for the purposes for the year 1934 at $13,282.88. The town sought to force the Board to reduce its teachers' salaries beyond what the board thought was proper and as a means to this end held up payments to the board after having made partial payments. The town now takes the position that the board never filed a proper estimate because the amount last at the beginning of 1934 it had a surplus of about $4,200. The Town Council must have known this because it appears in the auditors' report for the Town of Goderich, clearly on page 26. . . There will be a mandatory order compelling the Council of the Town of Goderich to approve the estimate submitted, to strike the necessary rate and to raise the money and to pay over to the Treasurer of the School Board the moneys necessary which for the present is about $6,000, and thereafter and town, in the amount of the estimate all moneys necessary. The town shall pay the costs of these proceedings.

Mrs. Allen Wagar Died Monday

MOTHER OF MRS. C. W. HAMBLY

Following an illness of short duration, the death occurred on Monday evening of Mrs. Allen Wagar, at the home of her son-in-law, Mr. C. W. Hambly, ex-M. L. A.

Mrs. Wagar, who had reached the advanced age of 87 years, 6 months and two months, had been in her usual health until two weeks ago, when she suffered a paralytic stroke, which was followed by other seizures, from which she failed to rally.

Mrs. Wagar was formerly the widow of Mr. Allen Wagar, a well-known resident of the county, and for many years a member of Adolphustown, where she lived until her marriage. For some years after marriage, she lived at Sillsville. In 1887, Mr. and Mrs. Wagar removed to a farm on the South River Road, about two miles from Napanee, where they lived until 1913, when they retired and came to Napanee. Since Mr. Wagar's death in 1918, Mrs. Wagar had lived with her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Hambly.

Mrs. Wagar's passing is mourned by her only child, Mrs. C. W. Hambly, who, through her mother's declining years, had given her constant and loving care. She is survived also by one sister, Mrs. Clapp of Picton, who has reached the age of 99 years.

The funeral is being held to-day (Wednesday) at 2:30 o'clock, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Hambly, where a private service is being conducted by Ven. Archdeacon Huntingdale of St. Mary Magdalene Church.

Interment will follow at Riverside Cemetery.

Canadians have come to regard the Canadian National Exhibition as the music festival of the year especially in the matter of famous bands. This year the superb organization of Kneller Hall, the Royal Military School of Music in England, will be the feature attraction.

For the past several years rumors have gained currency that the Canadian National Exhibition is to be extended to three weeks. The matter has not even been discussed by the directors who are content to carry on for fourteen days and nights as usual from August 24th to Sept. 8th exclusive of Sundays.

Mrs. Joseph McAlister Died on Monday at Sault Ste. Marie

Word was received in town on Monday of the death at Sault Ste. Marie, of Mrs. Joseph McAlister, who died early the same day.

Mrs. McAlister was a former well-known resident of Napanee. Her husband, years ago, operated the business now conducted by J. L. Boyes & Son. Mr. McAlister died some years ago, and since that time, Mrs. McAlister had resided with her daughter, Mrs. J. L. Lang. Her only son, Jack, was killed some years ago at Montreal.

The funeral is being held at Sault Ste Marie, and interment will likely take place at Toronto, where Mr. McAlister is buried.

Hydro Customers At Brockville Get Rebate

Brockville— Deductions in electric rates, applicable to Brockville, which will mean an annual saving of 3,000 ingof $31.000 to light and power consumers, have been authorized by the Hydro-Electric Power Commission of Ontario, based upon the favorable financial position of the Public Utilities Commission, and will go into effect with the next billing, due to start on or about September 8th.

No change in the basic rates for either domestic or commercial lighting have been brought into effect, but in addition to the usual 10 per cent. discount for prompt payment of accounts, has been authorized a further discount of 5 per cent. to be applied during the next twelve months. It has also authorized a continuation of the three months' period of electric current, which prevailed last year. Consumers of light and power throughout the town will thus be given three months' service without charge and, in addition, receive a discount of 2o per cent.

New Regulations for Voter's Registration In Franchise Act

Enumerators Will be Appointed Soon

Ottawa — Electors who wish to vote in the next Dominion election are to be advised by the authorities at Ottawa, to see to it that their names get on the list of voters which is to be enumerated in October. Under the new law, there will be no last-minute opportunities of enrolment or no process of swearing in voters on election day.

Next Saturday, it is planned to announce the appointment of 245 registrars under the new Franchise Act. The appointments will be made by Con. John Thompson, Franchise Commissioner, and care is being taken to see that political considerations do not govern this. In the cities, probably most of the registrars will be lawyers, but not necessarily so. In the country districts, they will be town people as municipal clerks or officials of that character.

The initial procedure consists in the returning officers, appointed recently by the Government, defining the limits of each polling sub-division. They are being asked to complete this work by September 22nd. The registrars to be appointed in the meantime will select the enumerators who are to each urban polling subdivision and one for each rural poll. The understanding is that the work will be divided up between the parties.

The enumeration, which will take seven days, will probably be about the middle of October. It will be followed by a process of revision by the registrars, the net result will be the basic list. There will not be any further remuneration under the act. If, however, no election occurs in the meantime—and none is expected—the annual revision of voters will take place on May 1st, 1935, the basic list will be brought up-to-date with the names of new voters added and of any who have died, removed. That will be the ultimate opportunity of getting on the list.

Should the general election not be until 1935, any persons acquiring the rights to vote, as Inspector Ross after the May 15 revision, will have no chance of getting on the list. What is explained as the basic purpose of the new law is to expedite the election once dissolution of Parliament is decided on so that now it can be brought on in about four weeks' time at the outside. Another objective is to prevent impersonation of voters at the polls.

For the whole of Canada, probably from 25 000 to 30 000 enumerators will be required for next month's undertaking.

COUNTY FAIRS

Now that the big swim is over, and the Toronto Exhibition is out of the way, the minds of our people will be directed to the smaller but more intimate and homelike county and township fairs. These fairs have played an important part in the life of the Province. The Centreville Fair is to be held on Saturday, September 8th, and the Odessa Fair on Thursday and Friday, September 20th and 21st. Both of these have enviable records as institutions where keen competition and friendly rivalry in various fields have resulted in stimulating interest in producing the finest from the soil.

Our own County Fair is held in Napanee, next week, on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, September 10th, 11th and 12th. It will be held, as usual, in the spacious and lovely Fair Grounds. Probably, no town of the size of Napanee has better or more naturally artistic grounds than those where the County Fair is held. The buildings are modern and well adapted for the display of produce and other exhibits. These have all been put in first-class condition, and along with the race track, which is a most important part of the equipment, will be in the best of condition by the time that the doors open.

Already, the total space available for exhibitors, has been sold. So that the number and variety of displays is already assured.

The entertainment features, which forms an integral part of the modern exhibition, has been well provided for. The management have been at pains to secure the best available, and they promise plenty of fun, an amusement of the better sort.

Perhaps one of the features of the County Fair which ought not to be overlooked, is the opportunity which it gives for the people to meet and discuss the intimate affairs of the county and the farm. People who have scarcely had time, during the busy summer months, to see their neighbors, will meet at the fair; renew acquaintances and enjoy the fellowship of a few hours together. The Toronto Exhibition, which usually is the indicator of attendance at the rest of the fairs, has shown a notable increase to-date, over last year. If this is an indication as to what will happen at the rest of the fairs, the labors and the toil of the managers of our local institution should be well rewarded.

WHAT OF THE FUTURE !

One of our English poets—perhaps it was Goldsmith — on one occasion returned to the school he had attended as a boy. As he watched the youngsters at play, he is reported to have said : "Regardless of their doom the little victims play." It was rather a sombre and pessimistic reflection. It was a reflection which doubtless came out of the thought of his own bitter experiences.

As we watched them returning, yesterday, to the seats of learning— bright, happy faces, keen, eager and alert—that is the line which kept repeating itself in our mind. Not because of a specially pessimistic outlook on life, but rather because of the difficulties which a strange and changing civilization has placed in their way. Thousands of those who graduated from the schools and colleges during the past year or two, have never been able to find anything like a remunerative outlet for their abilities, nor positions in which they might find the inspiration for a life's work. Unemployment has by no means, been confined to the untrained and the intellectually undisciplined, but there are among them some of the very finest of the youth of our land. Trained, capable, and with all the fire of young manhood and womanhood they are ready for the positions which do not open for them.

But, surely this cannot last long. Surely the organized common sense of the world will assert itself soon, and young people be given that opportunity for the expenditure of their abilities and talents which is their inalienable right. We have faith enough to believe that men who have accomplished so much in other directions, are capable of this, as well.

In the meantime, our advice to the youth of the town and county is, that they should have hope, and that they should take advantage of the opportunities which a generous state has provided for their training and education. Perhaps the depression has, at least, done this for us. It has shown that the obsession that something could be had for nothing, was merely a mirage. The only royal road to learning as to anything else worth while, in this world, is the way of toil, patience, diligence and concentration. Long after the facts and figures learned at school have been forgotten, the habits formulated during those most impressionable years, will have remained.

Not the fear of an examination, but the day-by-day development of character, is the true aim and purpose of education. In that, and that alone, lies our only hope that the great army of youth who returned to school yesterday, may be fitted and prepared to take their place of leadership in the new world, which is soon to be theirs.

TAG-DAY AT THE FAIR

On Tuesday, September 11th, the Victorian Order of Nurses will hold a tag-day in Napanee. This will afford the citizens an opportunity of contributing to one of the most unselfish and indispensible services in the community. Every day, throughout the year, the Victorian Order Nurse, distinctively dressed and carrying her little black bag, is a familiar figure on our streets as she pursues her errands of mercy.

The work which the Order does was always important. But since the era of unemployment and declining wages, it has become absolutely indispensible. Many people who, in better times could very well have afforded to pay outright for their own medical and nursing attention, must now rely, solely, on the Victorian Order Nurse, for services.

The exacting nature of the work calls for a nurse who is not only highly and specially trained, but who has particular qualities of head and heart, which make her acceptable to every type in the community. Besides the bedside nursing, which is part of her work, the nurse visits homes which, but for her presence, would know little if anything about the proper care and feeding of children. She goes into the home, teaches mothers how to prepare food, and gives practical instruction to the incompetent in home making. Many a family is, today, enjoying a measure of health and happiness unknown before, because of the habits of thrift, cleanliness and regularity instituted by the V. O N.

During the Fall and Winter months, the Nurse holds baby clinics in the Town Hall. Here the mothers come and have their babies weighed, proper food for their children is prescribed, records taken and kept. In addition to this the Nurse holds regular health inspections at the public schools. She advises the growing child concerning the proper care of the body, giving particular attention to defects of the eyes, the skin and the tonsils, which often escape the notice, even of the parents. In this way, working through the years, there has gradually been developed a splendid tradition of health among the children of our public schools.

Behind all this is a little group of men and women — mostly women— who, month after month, year in and year out, seek to secure funds to support this unselfish public service. Of late years, like all organizations which are supported by voluntary donations, the Victorian Order, in Napanee, has experienced great difficulty in keeping financially solvent. Just at a time when the need became greater, funds to maintain it became scarcer. Hence the necessity of a very generous response to the appeal of next week.

Very frequently, at a tag-day, a person pays a little attention to the purpose for which the tags are sold. He will drop a nickle in the box in order to secure the insurance against further solicitation which the little tag brings. That is an easy way out, of course. But it takes a lot of nickles to make a dollar—twenty of them—and a dollar does not go very far in providing nurses, doctors and medicines, except when the dollar is administered by loyal and unselfish comical body of women who administer the affairs of the Order. It then becomes amazing how far the dollar can be stretched to cover these essential services.

Let everyone, then, be just as generous as possible when appealed to on Tag - Day, knowing that the money contributed is wisely, economically and carefully spent to bring health, comfort, relief and happiness to an increasingly large number of people who have come to rely on the Victorian Order Nurse, for expert advice guidance and help in those times of illness and despair, which come to everyone, sometime or other.

THE SPOILS SYSTEM

The manner in which the situation at the Ontario School for the Deaf has been handled, has done a lot to shake the faith of the people of this district, and the teaching fraternity, generally, in the honesty and integrity of the present provincial administration. Their oft repeated statements that the dismissals and the changes which have marked their advent into office, were being made solely in the interests of economy and efficiency, needs to be carefully considered, in the light of what has happened at the School for the Deaf.

That which we forecast in these columns, last week, has taken place. Mr. Fetterly, one of the most capable and notable experts in dealing with handicapped children, that the Province produces, has been asked for his resignation. Mr. Harold Holton, of Belleville, is to succeed him. Mr. Holton is a likeable fellow, a man with a suave and pleasing manner. He has engaged in various occupations in and around Belleville. For a time he was an insurance agent. But Mr. Holton never went to Normal School, he never attended University. He never taught. He is not an educationalist in any sense of the word. It is true that Mr. Holton is a defeated candidate, and that he is the secretary of the Liberal Association in Belleville. Whatever qualities he had for these positions, and there is no doubt but that they were admirable, yet by no strength of the imagination could they be regarded as sufficiently specialized to fit him for the guidance, training and instruction of three hundred and fifty of our handicapped children.

It is to weep !

THE LABATT CASE

When the Labatt sensation was at its height we may have been paradoned for feeling that chance of immediate arrest and punishment were better in this country than in innumerable similar cases in the United States, owing to what we believed to be our more flexible and better co-ordinated police system. There would, we believed, be a better chance of delay and even possibly of friction among various Canadian

Editorial Comment

CANADA

This day is the anniversary of Canada's call to arms as well as our own. She enlisted 20,000 men, offering them for service in Britain's quarrel. Gladly, the Dominion Government accepted. Before the war was won Canada sent 530,000 troops overseas. Sixty-two thousand were killed. Canada does not come in the role of a suppliant or beggar, asking favours. The Dominion has a steadily improving estate. Mr. E. W. Beatty, president, of the Canadian Pacific Railway, gives evidence of the recovery. The "C.P.R." is to Canada what the service lift is to a great hotel. All the goods, foodstuffs, luggage are conveyed by it. If that lift is busy, the hotel is prospering. "C. P. R." and Canadian National revenues are up this year, compared with last year by 13.9 per cent. Now is the golden time for the people of Britain and Canada to link their fortunes together. Foreign trading ventures and foreign investments are attended with grave risk. Empire stock paying moderate dividends and Empire loans returning modest interest rates take precedence in public favour. The British Empire is the soundest field of investment on this planet. And the more we put back into that business the bigger the dividend it will pay the British people. — London Daily Express.

CLEANING UP THE LUMBER CAMPS

The Government has done wisely to pay special attention to health regulations as they affect lumber camps, in its latest health by-laws and regulations. There has been far too much trouble — from a health point of view — traceable to these camps in the past and, while a great deal has been done, the work is still far from completed. Unforgettable experience has taught us that so long as one "centre of infection" remains the whole community is in danger.

One encouraging thing about it is the co-operation which the larger lumbering companies have given the health authorities toward making their camps safe not only for the lumbermen themselves but for people outside—since a general epidemic usually arises from one source of infection. It is charged, however, that much difficulty has arisen over the camps of sub-contractors, smaller places, widely separated, often only temporary and of course more difficult to inspect.

The new regulations are stringent and, it may be argued, rather drastic. But apparently the conditions call for such remedies. Under the new regulations, for example, not only the contractor who maintains an unsanitary camp falls foul of the law, but the company or corporation which holds the limit from the Crown will also be held accountable. This provides a double check which ought to prove to make a permanent clean-up sure, since the penalties for maintaining unsanitary premises will be more real as considerable cut in profits. It is a good sign that the lumbering trade is turning its attention more and more to conditions as imposed by the lumbering industry in the number of men. The whole Province will be the better for it.—Montreal Star.

A PROUD BRITISH RECORD

It is worth while recalling what has been done in this country. The National Budget has been balanced, "cuts" in pay and allowances have been restored and taxes reduced — this at a time when every other great nation has been adding to its indebtedness and in most cases increasing the burdens of its citizens. Trade and employment have steadily improved, both imports and exports are up; staple trades are recovering; over half a million more people are at work. Great social measures have been passed, designed to make easier the lot of the underdog and enhance the conditions of working people. Whereas America has experienced wholesale strikes, accompanied usually with bloodshed, none of the great industries in Britain have lost a day's work on this account. The past year has not been exceeded by any period since the War for peaceful progress in all classes. In politics, as in business, the record is one of steady advance. The National Government retains widespread confidence. — Everyman (London).

MOTHERS' PLANS

Safely in mother's arms he lies,
And all his world is in her eyes.
He's quite content. For in her face
He feels the sunshine of her smile.

And as she holds him she can see
The fine, strong lad he'll one day be;
She loves the look and mind in him,
All he will do when he's a man.

All mothers like to sit and scheme
Their babies' futures; Hope and dream
And see them grow to wealth and fame,
Bearing some honoured place or name.

Not all these dreams and hopes come true;
Many great things our babies don't do.
Yet every fine and noble man
Fulfills some baby mother's plan.

police organizations than has occurred in cases calling for the services of Federal and State forces in the United States. As a matter of fact, there is no reason to believe that our police, municipal, provincial and federal did not work together and work well, but the evidence does indicate that they did not work fast enough or fast enough—or perhaps, indeed, well enough.—Montreal Star.

EARLY TOPPING OF TURNIPS

The practice of "topping" turnips some weeks before the date of pulling, in order to use the leaves while still green in the feeding of livestock, has been common in certain parts of the Province, and the question whether it is an economical operation or not has been settled by practical demonstration, by the Dominion Department of Agriculture. The data obtained showed that turnips from the non-topped crops had the higher food value. The inquiry also furnished satisfactory evidence of the marked growth of the untopped crop during the latter weeks of the season, the leaves during this period contributing to function as lungs and stomach, resulting in a heavier yield. The practice of topping the crop three weeks or a month prior to the date of pulling has been shown to result in a lower yield per acre of nutrients, and is therefore non-economic.

TEACHING

I do not know that I could make entirely clear to an outsider the pleasure I have in teaching. I would rather earn my living by teaching than by any other way. In my mind, teaching is not merely a life work, a profession, an occupation, a struggle; it is a passion. I love to teach. I love to teach as a painter loves to paint, as a musician loves to play, as a singer loves to sing, as a stone mason loves to lay stone. Teaching is an art—an art so great and so difficult to master that a man or woman can spend a long life at it without realizing much more than the beginnings, and without realizing his distance from the ideal. But the main aim of my happy days has been to become a good teacher just as every architect wishes to be a good architect, and every professional man wishes to be good at perfection. —William Lyon Phelps.

INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON, SEPTEMBER 9TH, 1934

II CHRONICLES — CHAPTER 30

HEZEKIAH LEADS HIS PEOPLE TO GOD

Internal dissention led to a division among the ancient Hebrews, after they got established in Palestine. Israel in the north, with its capital, Samaria, constituted the much larger section, while Judea in the south with its capital at Jerusalem, was made up of only two of the twelve original tribes. These two groups, Israel and Judea, were the ancient "Belgium"—the buffer state between mighty Assyria on the north and ambitious, intriguing Egypt, on the South. This geographical position determined to a large extent the policies and the history of Israel and Judea. It was no easy task to maintain their national integrity. Sometimes they found it profitable to side with the north, against the south, sometime it was advantageous to side with the south against the north. Sometimes they remained neutral; sometimes Judea sided with one and Israel with the other. It is impossible to understand the lessons in this quarter's series, unless we keep in mind this complex situation of Israel and Judea.

In 722, the climax came so far as Israel was concerned. Assyria, after destroying the countryside, and after a three years' siege, finally captured and destroyed Samaria. Thus Israel the northern kingdom, drops out of the picture and Judea assumes the inheritance. Seven years later, in 715, Hezekiah came to the throne in Judea, succeeding his father, Ahez. Ahez had been rather diplomatic. While the Assyrians were capturing the Israelites, he assumed a benevolent neutrality, so that for twenty years, he kept peace in Juda. Hezekiah fell heir to a troublesome complex of affairs. He had certain noble qualities as we shall see later, but generally speaking he was weak and vacillating and easily influenced by different parties within the nation—the pro-Assyrian party, the nationalist party, the Egyptian party.

In this chapter we have an account of the internal reforms which Hezekiah instituted early in his reign. He called the leaders and princes together and considered, with them, with respect to the national life. Together, they agreed on a program of religious reform. It is interesting to note that in the time of Shewilderment and national anxiety, the prophets called his councillors and on the people to renew their allegiance to God and to the Church. This is a lesson for our own time. Let us be set by foes, when the nation's life was at stake, national days of prayer and humiliation were proclaimed throughout the Empire.

The importance of these days lies in the fact that they constitute a recognition of the place of God and religion as determining factors in history. The tragedy is that, so often, individuals as nations, wait until the day of crisis before making the discovery. We are passing through strange and bewildering days — a deep recognition of God, and a worldwide revival in religion in all its aspects, is essential to the settlement of our problems, and constitute the only guide through the maze of our present perplexities.

The methods of the king, whose reforms we are studying might well be followed by later rulers and leaders. First, he called his advisers and consulted with them; second he sent out a nation-wide call to renewal of religious obligations; third he reformed the religious practices, doing away with certain pagan customs which had been appropriated from the people round about. When we analyse our own situation we come to the conclusion that all our problems are, at basis, moral and spiritual ones. It would be unwise to attempt in the twentieth century, the exact reforms of the seventh century B.C., for our problems are different and the solution must be found in our own way. But in the spirit and methods of the Old Testament King —that of calling the nation to a recognition of God, and to a purified worship—lies the undoubted solution for the problems of our own as of any age.

ENTERPRISE

Enterprise, Sept. 3.—Two of our citizens have been victims of most unfortunate accidents during the past week. On Wednesday afternoon Cephas Bell was struck in the face by a stick of wood while putting wood into the woodshed of his home. The stick struck the window frame of the window through which he was throwing the wood and, falling back, struck him a severe blow in the face, injuring his eye. Mr. Bell lost one of his eyes several years ago, when struck by a piece of stone while engaged in road construction, and it was his other eye that was injured in this accident. He was first treated by Dr. Horton and later taken to Kingston General Hospital, fearing that the sight of the eye might have been seriously injured. While still confined to the hospital, his condition is such that it is expected the sight of his eye will not be impaired and he will soon be able to return to his home.

On Thursday afternoon Charles Hartwick, a well known citizen, suffered painful injuries when thrown from a wagon on which he was riding, when a team of horses owned by Milo Jackson took fright at a threshing engine and ran away. The two men were engaged in drawing in grain and were going with the empty wagon after another load, and in passing the threshing outfit the horses became unmanageable and started to run away. Being in no way unable to control them, Mr. Jackson turned them off the road, when they ran into a telephone pole, freeing themselves from the wagon. Mr. Hartwick was thrown from the wagon falling to the road on his head and shoulders, receiving very severe injuries to his head. He was taken to the office of Dr. Horton, where he was given treatment, and later removed to the Kingston General Hospital, where his condition is now reported to be satisfactory. He is an unmarried man and has lived alone for a number of years, since the death of his mother. Mr. Jackson, the owner of the horses, escaped without injuries, jumping from the wagon when the horses crashed on to the telephone pole. The wagon and harness were damaged to some extent. The horses were uninjured.

Chas. Graham is still an inmate of Kingston General Hospital, where he has been for the past two weeks, suffering from an abscess on the back part of the ball of his left eye. His condition is reported as somewhat serious, and he is suffering very much pain.

The young son of Mr. and Mrs. Eric Jackson was taken to Kingston General Hospital during the week-end, and underwent an operation for hernia. His condition is satisfactory.

Miss Mona Thompson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Thompson, one time residents of Enterprise, is now in Kingston General Hospital, where she was operated upon for appendicitis. She is recovering as rapidly as could be hoped for.

The bush fire, which has been burning for some weeks in the region of Fifth Lake, has done more or less damage to the farming area of about a thousand acres it has destroyed fences and pasture. Wagar Bros., farmers in that district, had just completed harvesting a crop of marsh hay and Calla Bros. finished putting it into a stack when the fire came along and burned it up and they were helpless to stop it. We had cost them a good many hard days work.

The frost of the past few nights has resulted in considerable damage being done to the corn and buckwheat crops.

A number from Enterprise attended the funeral of the late John Peter Peters, at her late home near Camden East, on Wednesday afternoon. Mr. W. H. Vanness is a brother of the deceased.

Milligan, and Mrs. Milligan, Tamworth, became the bride of Harold Maitland Jackson, only son of Mr. and Mrs. Milo Jackson, of Enterprise, the Rev. A. J. Wilson performing the ceremony.

On Saturday, Sept. 1st, Helen Mabel, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Wilson, of Tamworth, was married to Theodore Wagar, only son of Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Wagar, of Centreville.

The Grads met defeat in the second of the home and home series against the Tweed Selectings, on Thursday evening. The Grads offer no alibis, submitting to defeat at the hands of a superior team to the score of 13-12. This puts Deseronto out of the running, as they lost to Tweed last Monday evening in Tweed. It was a hard fought contest, and a large home crowd cheered lustily, but Tweed, playing a better game in the field, clinched the decision. Just the same Deseronto is proud of the showing of the Grads.

TREAT ARMS AND HANDS WHEN MANICURING

The really de luxe manicure does not end with the fingernails. Or maybe its better to say that it does not begin with them. For the smart woman—the who wishes to be perfectly groomed— knows that hands and arms should come in for their share of attention whenever she beautifies her nails.

When you're to give yourself a manicure, get out— in addition to polish remover, cuticle oil, nail file, orange stick, cotton and polish—a nail brush, half a lemon, a piece of pumice and a jar of rich tissue cream. Remove every trace of old polish and then scrub your arms, elbows and hands, with the nail brush and a thick soap cake. Rinse, dry and rub the lemon on hands and elbows.

If there are small callouses on the sides of your fingers, rub them with pumice. Don't rub too hard. You can't expect the first treatment to remove each callous. When you've finished, massage nourishing cream upward from fingertips to elbows. Leave the cream on until you've finished manicuring.

When the nails have been filed into shape, soak them in warm, soapy water and, using a cotton-wrapped orange stick apply cuticle remover around the base of each nail. Push the cuticle backward—never cut it. Then rub cream around the nails and lie down for twenty minutes to give it time to soften the arms, hands and elbows a chance to be absorbed. When you get up, wipe off all cream, wash your hands and apply liquid polish.

VOGUE FOR ACCESSORIES OF PRIMARY IMPORTANCE

"The omnipotent detail," says a friend of ours in the accessory business, "is fine." Frequently, it is!

Gay and strange details and accessories are certainly the vogue at present—the call to fairies to dress for many gowns. Navy blue and black seem to form the most perfect setting for many bright new dresses in these dark tones; bright colored bracelets and exotic glass clips stand out sharply and shoes of black and white kid are fresh and trim looking. White kid, however, is one of the fads that are the order of the day, enormous white hats, white belts, and coal white kid gloves, for instance.

Ebony elips with monograms or quaint figures of ivory add a brilliant chips, are used to hold neckfines in place for varied effects, square, triangular or oval. Belts with one large ring you may tie any of the bright bracelets loop material through it, fastening it with the ends turning back and fastening in the rear, are similar. There are ivory or crystal with black leather or cloth, or in ebony and bright colored quartz with silver or gold mountings, smart looking. Wood, of course, is also used—bamboo, mahogany, maple and walnut.—Montreal Star.

THE HORSE PRICE CYCLE

When the purchasing power of any kind of livestock is calculated for a long series of years, it is found that there are fairly definite recurring cycles of purchasing power with a reasonable degree of periodicity, that is, in length of timing from peak to peak or trough to trough of the cycle. According to Professor B. C. Hope of the University of Saskatchewan, the decline in horse prices, contrary to general opinion, was not due to the increase in the use of tractors, but chiefly to the relatively high price for horses prevailing from 1910 to 1915. The tractor has not eliminated the price cycle of horses, it has only modified it. The recent low period of the horse cycle has been rather longer than usual because the country was becoming adjusted to a permanently smaller number of horses. The horse cycle has definitely turned. Good work horses are again selling at a profit, and it will be some years before breeders can keep up with the demand. Immediately a little more money flows into the hands of farmers, a sharp rise is to be expected in horse prices. If the general commodity price level should continue to rise, horse prices will rise even more than proportionately, for horses should continue to rise until about the year 1937. The return of tractors to more general use for field work will not change the situation.

REDUCING MADE HER LOOK YOUNGER

A BURDEN OF FAT GONE

Here is another case where the trim, slim figure of youth has displaced the coarse, fat outline of middle age. It is a housekeeper writing. She says:—

"I cannot say how much weight I was, but I was very fat — a burden to myself. I have taken three bottles of Kruschen Salts and now I am quite slender. I am over 56, and people take me for 40. I am more than proud of myself. You can take it from me that every word of this is true. I took a teaspoonful in hot water every morning till I used three bottles. Now I only take half a teaspoonful each morning. I cannot recommend the Kruschen Salts enough, for they are worth their weight in gold." (Mrs.) A. H.

Kruschen Salts combat the cause of fat by assisting the intestinal juices to perform their functions properly — to throw off each day those waste products and poisons which, if allowed to accumulate, will be converted by the body's chemistry into fatty tissue.

Nearly Quarter Million Children Start School

Dominion Bureau of Statistics Estimates Number of Youngsters Entering Fall Terms

On request of the Canadian Council on Child and Family Welfare, the Educational Division of the Dominion Bureau of Statistics has prepared an estimate of the number of children who will enter school for the first time with the opening of the fall terms. No less than 220,000 little Canadians in the sixth and seventh year of life will be launched upon the great adventure of school life with the coming of autumn 1934.

As far as an can be estimated, Quebec should lead the parade with 73,000 youngsters wending their way to the schools and convents. Ontario following closely with 63,000. Next comes Saskatchewan with 21,500, closely followed by her sister provinces of the prairies, Alberta with 16,000 and Manitoba with 13,500. Nova Scotia with 10,000 and British Columbia with 10,500 are "neck and neck" with New Brunswick a good third with 9,000 children knocking at the classroom door. "The Island" (P.E.I.) provides a quota of 1,900.

Yet, the Canadian Council tells us, if the same incidence of remedial defect exists among those children that the Health Departments report for recent years, many will be handicapped in the school race before their start be remedial defects Medical science tells us that most of those defects could have been prevented and can still be corrected if knowledge that is already available is really used by parents and children. The provincial health returns available give estimates of defects varying from 20 per cent. to 80 per cent. with dental defects in addition. Such an incongruity must indicate that the actual incidence of defect was highest or lowest or bore any special significance in any one province. It may mean that the school health service of one area, especially those with well organized health departments, was more active in locating and treating defects than others, or that some of the health services are sparsely organized, that few school health examinations take place and that consequently few defects are reported.

The Division on Maternal and Child Hygiene of the Canadian Council is now making a special appeal to parents to co-operate with their provincial and local health authorities in giving their children a chance to start their school life, as free as possible from hampering defect or ill-health. All parents who have not already done so are urged to place their young children under the regular supervision of a physician, and especially to have every child planning to enter school this autumn examined by a physician or dentist at once, with a view to having all remedial defects treated before the child enters school in September.

As part of this whole educational campaign, attention is drawn to the fact that any parents may have for the asking, from their Provincial Departments of Health or from the Council at Council House, Ottawa, a series of pre-school letters, the last of which deals especially with the care of the child during the first few weeks of his adjustment to school.

The Comic Spirit

CONTEMPLATING THE FROG

A favorite maxim of Samuel Butler's was "Cross yourself with the highest mammals." A visit to the Zoo he declared, was one of the surest remedies for discontent. It would be fair to this familiar witticism, however, that I would turn for romantic escape. My refuge from the human scene would be the reptile-house, and I would dissipate discontent in the contemplation of frogs.

The frog has the merit of extreme remoteness. Not in our deepest dreams can we imagine the link between silent, steamy, palaeozoic swamps whence the first amphibians crawled, bellowing to greet ferns and conifers, companions of dragons and dinosaurs, there hopped and croaked the supercilious lords of the primeval world. Fortunately even in a neighbored so remote as Surrey there are some survivors of antiquity abound. In pond and marsh they keep the commonalty busy, and I am glad of primeval slime. Each spring in a small pond in our garden may be seen floating those strange clots of spotted jelly from which the tadpoles eventually emerge. And here throughout the month of March the long-sustained platonic batrachian honeymoons are enjoyed. For some three weeks these amphibian lovers experience their torpid ecstacies; then the eggs, which have been slowly maturing in the female, are laid in the water and there fertilized by the male. What remote reptilian raptures sound in the vibrations of those strange throats. "For like enough may frogs be passionate," wrote the Chinese poet Ou-yang Hsui, for whom all living creatures, even the worst, sang with an individual song.

Passionate the frog may be, but scarcely tender. I have seen a male frog with tiny paw grouping out the eyes of his prostrate wife, whilst beside them another poet bride, suffocating under his embrace, attempted a corpse. Alas! with this species, as with others, the yoke of matrimony is uneasily borne by males. The female during the breeding season shows all the pallor and ungainliness of the neurotic invalid, and it is the little husband, whom she carries pick-a-back, who wears the look of triumph. Yet maternal care for offspring in its earliest stages there are none. Tadpoles, once free from their pond, by a callous decree, was cleaned. Carefully with bucket and dipper I decanted the spawn-infested jellies to a brook at the bottom of the hill. Next day saw the pitiful spectacle of the females, each burdened by her mate, painfully clambering back to the carefully chosen and more stable nursery. In the female's patient bearing of her husband there is little trace of maternal love, and there is something child-like and humorous about the small arms that clasp her neck.

Evolution

Our relationship to the frog, indeed, may be less remote than we suppose. Certainly it is to his efforts to transform his tail into legs as it is his success in climbing that has pushed us up the evolutionary tree. That love of love for which characteristic of the late Romans and young children, was surely from the are of reptiles, and while it is reasonable to suppose that from the pentadactyl amphibian had grown the first amphibians we have gained the multifarious tasks of the hand, despite his forward urge, the frog remains mysterious and paradoxical. A kick-in-the-mud all the winter, he seems the arch-conservative; yet his electrifying leap proclaims him a revolutionary. In contemplation he is static as a stone; in action a lightning flash. Cold-blooded, he is violent, with dancer's legs and aldermanic paunch, in thought inscrutable, in appearance grotesque. Such are the clots out his nature, featuring alternately Mystical and Buddhist.

Of the charge of dullness levied against the reptilian race, the frog is happily guiltless. The one thing unimates his face, his croak has the brevity and unexpectedness of wit. Who that has watched the wrinkled tadpoles can deny them joy in life? How would he be reptile-house, with the-box-like spring of frogs as nature's first and funniest practical joke? One day, walking along a path so narrow that there was no room to turn aside, I came face to face with a frog. Instantly he performed the feat I had thought only possible in a cat. He blew himself up to twice his natural size. Surely this hope to reduce the difficulty by doubling it could only have occurred to a lover of paradox? By raising himself on his hind legs.

Although the bond between the batrachian and the human species is sometimes questioned, there is in my dream that I may one day win the friendship of a frog. If from those deep eyes, set level-like in golden rims, I might win a moment's recognition, if some touch of kinship in those small cold hands, evoke an emotion corresponding to my own from that frond-patterned image of Buddhistic calm, the sound and fury of a world grown mad might be annihilated and I regain the memory of a vast primordial peace.

Hay Fever

DESPERATE REMEDIES

Dickie came in "to have a little look" at me before he went down on the shore with Gerda. He walked to my open window and looked happily all over the blue, choppy sea. Suddenly he wrinkled his small nose and sniffed appreciatively. "Isn't it nice a lovely smell of sea-breeze," he said.

And he was right! Into my room there came a fresh, salty tang, for the breeze was blowing straight off the sea and in at my window. But at the same time I was aware of two other scents: one was sweet and light and came from the freshly cut grass on the lawn; the other was rich and heavy and came from the newly mown hay in the cliff field. Three sounds accompanied the scents; the washing of the waves on the cliffs below, the whirring of the wheels of the lawn-mower, and the satisfying swish of a well-swung scythe.

All the hay in the immediate district has been cut except this one field near the sea. And a few days more of warm, dry weather would see the last remnant carted and housed. Then perhaps the worst of my troubles will be over and my hay fever a thing of the past. Instead of being cooped up in my room I shall be able to be out on the slope again.

Hay fever sounds such a trivial complaint, something at best, to pass over with an amused smile, or at worst with an irritated shrug. But it can be much more than trivial at times. It can, as a matter of fact, be a terrible complaint. The streaming eyes and frequent sneezing which are so obvious, are only two of its many symptoms. But the sufferer is usually aware of others — such as violent headaches, intermittent high temperatures, and resultant strain on the heart.

All these form the early stages of the fever. Sometimes they are the only phases it has to show. But with more acute cases — but the prelude to bronchial attacks of such a severity that going about becomes a real impossibility. And in addition there may come acute spasms of asthma which air the heart more ill than all other symptoms put together.

Cures

This last is the kind of hay fever I have, and for which I have never yet found a cure. It is not for want of trying, for circumstances have caused me to live in many places and to be under the care of a number of doctors and specialists without finding much, if any, relief.

It all seems such an irony, for of cures there appear to be so many I know of at least fifteen remedies which have done me no good at all. And of good advice from other people I seem to have had no end.

An old woman I know cured her husband, she says, by giving him thirteen bottles of a well-known tonic. Since then he has never had the slightest symptom, so naturally she advises others to try the same treatment for themselves. I even call to mind a woman of about forty who is convinced that her hay fever was cured when she began to wear artificial teeth. A man just summer assured me that fruit salts were the only cure. Then there are sprays and douches and inhalants, balsams and unalgesics and snuffs, but so far as I am concerned they do not touch me, although other people seem to find them efficient enough.

Then, in the medical profession there are doctors who say there is no cure, while others confidently promise that they will soon get rid of one complaint. I remember one London specialist who sent me home in high glee. My nose had been treated surgically and rendered, he said, insensitive to pollen. As well, "to be on the safe side," he gave me eight different prescriptions to take by me." Nevertheless, I had hay fever that summer in much the same way as before.

Then there are inoculations. Of these I have had many brands and kinds. And there is always the beneficial effect of the sea, they tell me. But even the "ozone laden sea breeze" seems unable to check the fever away. Perhaps the right kind of sea voyage would avail, although living by the sea has failed. But I would have to be the right kind, and include any calls at ports of other hay-infested lands.

I have heard of another remedy lately. But it is one that, like a voyage, would need both money and time. There is to hay grass in Ireland, I am told, and to spend the summer there would inevitably not only cure hay fever, but prevent one from having any hay fever to cure.

So I am going to do my best to spend next summer in Ireland and see what that will do for me. But perhaps, as an extra precaution, I had better have a shot at the Army, too. Then, clad in the armour of a dental plate, I shall have an added chance of warding off all the poisonous effects of the many and varied pollens which seem to abound in hay.

THE BETRAYING LETTER

BY EVELYN M. DAVIS

Doris Coughlin sat fidgeting with a book in her hand. The faces of Donald and Kenneth kept dancing before her eyes, blurring the pages. Try as she might, she could not shake off a feeling of impending disaster. She glanced at the clock, then with a sigh resumed her book. Donald had received her letter by that time!

She was startled by the shrill ringing of the telephone. With a feeling of dread, she took down the receiver. "Is this you, Dot? Did you get my letter ?" she asked, in a voice, more than steady. "What's that? You got Beatrice 'James' letter ? Oh, my God, what have I done !" she cried tremulously, hanging up the receiver.

She thought swiftly, a thousand possibilities tearing at her brain like tormented fingers. She had written those two letters this morning, in her hurry to post them: one to Beatrice, accepting her dinner invitation for Saturday, and the other to Donald Morris, dismissing him for ever from her life. Oh, what a blundering fool she was !

Oh, God, help me this once—" she prayed.

She picked up the telephone and called Bea's house. There was a chance that she would be out, and that Kenneth had not yet called her out of the letter. Her heart was beating like a trip hammer as she waited, but no one answered. There was strange. But—yes,— this was Thursday,— the maid's afternoon out ! She slammed the receiver on its hook, ran out of the house and down the white, dusty road, in breathless haste.

Eut as she rounded a curve, and came in sight of Bea's bungalow, her last hope took flight, for there, parked in front of the gate, was Donald's roadster. Bea hadn't yet read it, and Doris, could get it away from her before she had time to run to the gate and was about to open it when the sound of mingled voices floated on through the open window, put her entertaining guests.

"Too late—too late—" her thoughts hammered, keeping time with her footsteps. Bea's friends would all know before night. And Jack—Doris Coughlin, had contemplated running away with her husband's best friend. It wouldn't matter to them that she had written in the letter, her betrayal—confession of love for Donald Smith, her husband; had seen in time the ghastly mistake that would have wrecked all three lives.

She had married Kenneth, and come here to this outlying district of British Columbia because of him, ago. Everything had seemed so strange and she had felt, at times, terribly alone and outside it all. Then Kenneth's friend, Donald Morris, had been sent down by his company, to prospect for oil.

There had been a strange attraction between them from the first, which they had both fought against. Then, suddenly, Donald had made up his mind to go back to the States— and after a bitter struggle with his conscience, had flung honor and loyalty to the winds, and asked her to go with him. He was having his plane conditioned, he would be ready to take off tonight.

Doris had been in turmoil of indecision—a slender reed, swaying between two winds.

She had toned all night, her brain a battleground of conflicting desires. Then, when she awoke at the morning when she turned on the light, and saw Kenneth lying there with a firm hand across his head, in attitude of boyish abandonment, that she realised, with a sudden rush of tenderness, that she loved him—inescapably. She had snuggled close to his side, humble and full of remorse. She knew then that Donald was only a wild dream, that would leave her presently.

Had she learned then, too late, what Kenneth really meant to her? She had a fleeting vision of his face, white and drawn, when he would have learned of the duplicity—and she put her hand across her eyes, as though to shut out the image.

When she reached home, she found Kenneth and Donald in the kitchen, eating high tea.

"A fine hostess, you are !" Kenneth called, putting her around the waist and swinging her off the floor. "Why don't you stay home and greet your guests ?"

"Oh, I just thought I'd take a walk," she looked miserably at Donald, trying hard to keep her head above the slow tide of defeat that was washing over her.

"Don got a telegram, and has to leave tonight, so we thought we'd have a 'night-cap' party," Kenneth said, handing her a high-ball. "Just a minute, and I'll chip some more ice." he went out onto the back porch, whistling.

Donald, studiously avoiding her eyes, took something from his pocket, and walking over to the stove, stuck the match in the gas jet and held it as the flames leapt up. She watched him with mute incredulity. When the last flame had died over a little mound of gray ashes, he turned to her and spoke softly: "You should have known I would get that letter. I found it in her mail box about three minutes after I talked to you."

He raised his glass to hers, and said with a cynical smile, as Kenneth entered: "Here's happy days !"

BASEBALL NEWS

BY O.E.GIBBARD.

In answer to many interested inquirers, we do not know yet whom The A's meet in the next round.

There are only six or seven teams left in the "A" series. At the time the paper is out this may be reduced to three or four. It will be some team from Western Ontario. However, there is no use trying to guess who it will be.

Those who follow O.B.A.A. baseball closely will have noticed that Southampton tied up Strathroy by beating them 4-0 in Southampton, Labour Day. The third game should be a real battle between these two clubs. Strathroy's ace is a big right-hander named Fiddler, while Southampton rely on the famous "Lefty" Goldsmith. Don't be surprised if one of these two clubs play Napanee before the season is over.

The B's go to Picton on Wednesday at 4.30 Standard Time, to play Picton Lake, the return game being played in Napanee on Saturday at 3 o'clock, (Standard Time.

West Lake have McQuade on their line-ups, who played for the Picton Intermediates last year. Their pitcher is young "Shrimp" Phillips, a brother of "Warpy."

The winner of this series meets Coehill in the next round.

CRESTED WHEAT GRASS PLANTING

Although it is an important point that crested wheat grass should be sown in the spring as early as possible, and the next best time is in the fall during the first half of September, seeding tests made every two weeks throughout the season over a period of three years at Saskatoon have shown that good stands have been obtained in every month of the growing season. However, seed sown between June 15 and August 15 frequently failed to produce a crop. Successful results during this time were obtained when the seed was sown right after a rain and the weather remained comparatively cool for some time afterwards. According to the directions based on the experience of the Dominion Division of Forage Plants, the seed should be sown not more than one-half inch deep. Plots sown a little too deep has been responsible for many failures of this crop, and spring planting is most important because spring frosts do not damage young seedlings which, however, are easily injured by heat.

Canadian National Exhibition authorities, in answer to an oft-repeated question, point out that the grand stand seating accommodation is 18,620, but what with standing room in the structure and in the paddock, almost 24,000 spectators have watched the pageant on one night.

HOW WE GOT OUR NAMES

BY "PENPOINT"

The Anglo-Saxon names still survived among the peasantry, the conquest and have lived on as surnames, often much perverted, for example: Addie for Adelbert, Woolley for Wulfwig; but the general tendency, after the conquest was to give children French names. Those were either the Teutonic names introduced into France by the conquering Franks, or Biblical names of Greek or Eastern origin. To the first class belong William, Richard, Roger, Henry and so forth; to the second, John, Peter, Adam, Elias, Elihu and so forth. It is from the favorite names of the middle ages that our patronymic surnames are mostly descended. The prosaic Roman nomenclature had not much influence though a few saints' names of Latin origin, such as Clement, Vincent, Augustine (Austin), were popular. It was not usually the full name that became a surname. Few of us use William in addressing a friend. We call him Will or Willy or Bill and the fourteenth-century Englishman often used the diminutives Willet and Wilkin. Roger was rimed into Hodge and Dodge and gave us the surnames Hodges, Dodgson. Henry was popularly pronounced Harry, whence Harris, Harrison, and it is further shortened into Hal—as Mary was shortened to Mal, Moll, whence Hawkin, (Halkins). The final "s" in such names was the sign of the possessive, thus James-Andrews equal-James Andrews (son). The names ending with son still commonest in Scotland and the north of England were introduced by the Normans.

Of the four classes of surnames the patronymic or (metronymic) is the best claim to be considered a name rather than a description. It is found among all races. The Gaelic "Mac", the Irish "O'" and the Welsh "Ap" correspond in sense to the Hebrew Ben-(Son) as in Benhadad and the Syriac (Bar), as in Simon Bayonu (Matthew XVI, 17) or in Bartimaeus, the son of Timaeus (MarkX, 46). The Welsh have now largely adopted names in "s" and accounts for the modern frequency of Jones, Williams, Roberts, Edwards, Hughes and so forth, but until recent times a Welshman loved to trace his descent for many generations and to be known as "Ap Owen, Ap Owen, Ap Rhys Ap, Evans, Ap Harry Ap, Howel and so on, up to the supposed founder of the family. As the reduction to one name gradually took place, these names gave Bowen, Pritchard, Price, Bevan, Parry and Powell, which were transformed from first names into surnames and became hereditary.

In England it is among the great territorial families that the surname first became a fixed quantity, though even in the 13th century sons sometimes acquired fresh names in the same accidental way as that Richard, whose imaginary ancestral vicissitudes we have indicated. The noble families, mostly of Norman origin, had also a liking for the Norman—French Fitz, instead of the native Son, as in that name of Fitzwilliam, but otherwise the Norman names were not to be regarded, sometimes wrongly, as a sign of aristocratic descent.

All languages have a very large number of surnames descriptive of office or trade. In English, it usually end in "er" and are partly of native origin—Fisher, Thatcher, Brewer) partly from French (Butcher, Taylor, Draper). For the student of languages the most interesting of these names are those that date from the very early period before the Teutonic races had borrowed the Latin "arius" which is the origin of our "er." The two sets of surname names are taken from the essential occupations—in modern parlance the key industries—of primitive man. They are all monosyllables from the verbs, that describe these essential occupations. It will be noticed that they are still much more numerous as surnames than "er" words which replaced some of them at a later period of the language, such as Wright, the worker or craftsman, or the kneader, (from Anglo-Saxon dog, dough) Herd the shepherd; Hunt, the hunter; Smith, the worker in metal, the weaver—names that, for anyone possessed of a little imagination, call up a picture of the daily life of the half-nomad, half settled tribe in one of the longer halts of the migrations. There is a strong suspicion that Fish sometimes belongs to the same class and that it is recorded in the sense of Fished. Some of the late occupative names have been curiously corrupted in Bakshaw is for the arbalist or crossbowman; Scrimshaw, is one of the many variants of skirmisher or fencing player or fencing master. Others are descriptive: Saylor is sailor, Miller, grinder of corn; Amber sometimes represents the ammeler, or enameller; a Wader is a worker in woad or indigo and a Rower was a wheelwright (from French, roue, wheel).

Often a name of that type represents a nickname, rather than a trade name. It is for example, probable that the original Dancer, Hopper, Singer, Whistler, carried a living by the suggested quality and crossbowman; Scrimshaw, is one of the many variants of skirmisher or fencing player or fencing master. Others are descriptive: Saylor is sailor, Miller, grinder of corn; Amber sometimes represents the ammeler, or enameller; a Wader is a worker in woad or indigo and a Rower was a wheelwright (from French, roue, wheel).

Often a name of that type represents a nickname, rather than a trade name. It is for example, probable that the original Dancer, Hopper, Singer, Whistler, carried a living by the suggested quality and when properly graded, box packed, and Government inspected.

In all this work, the Poultry Services of the Dominion Department of Agriculture play a leading part, assisting the farmers in every way in organizing and carrying out the necessary arrangement of pools. These services have just issued a pamphlet on why and how to organize a poultry pool. It is the latest and most and more welcome to the many farmers interested in this matter, as it places the matter in a nutshell. It shows that the assembling and preparing of poultry for shipment is as much the business of producers as the actual growing of the birds, and the overhead expenses of preparing for shipping is largely governed by whether or not every member of the pool does his share of the work. The steps to be taken to form a pool are clearly set forth.

NEWS AND INFORMATION FOR THE BUSY FARMER

(Furnished by the Ontario Department of Agriculture)

Good Apples for Sweet Cider

Tests conducted in the Fruit Products Laboratory at the Central Experimental Farm have shown that Rufus Ribston, Scott, Winter, Baldwin, Mavis, Russet, Nonpareil, and a blend of Ben Davis and Spy are excellent varieties for making sweet cider.

The preliminary estimate of the total production of commercial apples in Canada in 1933 shows an increase of 1,591,840 barrels and 53,456,000 as compared with the finally revised estimate of 1932. The 1933 estimates are 3,329,800 barrels, valued at $1,064,800. The finally revised estimate for 1932 is 4,737,960 barrels valued at $7,007,900.

Cleaning the Hen House

At this time of year hen houses should be thoroughly cleaned, disinfected and whitewashed. At the Poultry Division, Central Experimental Farm, the following whitewash mixture has been used with satisfaction.

Slake half a bushel of lime with boiling water; strain and add one peck of salt, dissolved in warm water. Put three pounds of ground rice in boiling water and boil to a thin paste. Dissolve half a pound of powdered Spanish whiting and one pound of clear glue in warm water. Mix all three well together and let stand for several days. Keep over a portable furnace and apply hot with brushes.

Weaning the Lambs

Lambs should be weaned at around five months of age. The practice of letting the lambs wean themselves is to be discouraged since it prevents the mother getting a well deserved rest before the mating season, which is necessary for her health and vitality.

Young weaned lambs should have the run of some good fresh pasture. A good after-math or a piece or rape that has been sown in the spring will be greatly enjoyed by them. Such a pasture is necessary to avoid a check in their growth as a result of the loss of their mother's milk; it will also help to prevent parasitic infestation so detrimental to growing lambs.

A point interesting to farmers whose fields are crossed by power cables is that lightning voltage caused by the discharge of a single cloud are estimated to cover 1,000 to 3,000 feet of line on long circuits. Generally on the urban circuits the voltages are restricted considerably more by the closely-spaced lightning arresters.

Peat and Muck as Sources Of Soil Organic Matter

When the farm manure supply is not sufficient to maintain the organic matter content of the soil at a satisfactory level, peat or muck may be used to furnish that important constituent. The best way to employ these materials as a source of organic matter is to first compost them with manure for a period of four to six months before application or to use them in the air dried condition as a litter to soak up the liquid manure in and about the stable. An added advantage in these treatments is that the nitrogen of the peat and muck is, to a large degree, rendered available for plant use.

Early Topping of Turnips

The practice of "topping" turnips some weeks before the date of pulling in order to use the leaves while still green in the feeding of livestock, has been common in certain parts of the Dominion, and the question whether it is an economical operation or not has been settled by practical demonstrations. The data of obtained showed that turnips from the non-topped crops had the higher food value. The inquiry also furnished satisfactory evidence of the marked growth of the untopped crop during the latter weeks of the season, the leaves during this period continuing to function as lungs and stomach, resulting in a heavier yield. The practice of topping the crop three weeks or a month prior to the date of pulling has shown to result in a lower yield per acre of nutrients, and is therefore non-economic.

Weekly Crop Report

Fall wheat production is considerably below average due to winter killing and drought. While the yield varies widely, the quality is good. Barley and oats are showing average yields of good grade. Hay is short. Corn is in good condition and shows satisfactory growth. Root crops require more moisture. The apple crop will be light, and the yield considerably below average. The Codling Moth is prevalent in some districts. Grapes are rising well and all varieties are progressing favourably. Early peaches were a fair crop. Ellbertas and other standards will be light. Pastures and aftergrass, while freshened by recent rains, are still in poor condition and require additional moisture to stimulate growth. Tobacco plants have benefitted from recent rains, but the crop is backward due to drought and has suffered considerable damage from hail.

LYDIA E. PINKHAM'S VEGETABLE COMPOUND

Eradicating Perennial Weeds

The roots of perennial weeds such as Canada thistle and field bindweed often penetrate the ground to depths of four or five feet. The roots of these weeds can send up new shoots when they are cut off to depths of eighteen inches. Deep ploughing therefore will not eradicate perennial weeds of this type. One method of eradicating deep rooted perennial weeds is to keep down the top growth by frequent cultivation and exhaust the food stored in the roots. Another is to apply a 10 per cent solution of sodium chlorate at the rate of one gallon per square rod.

Perennial Sow Thistle Now in Every Township

Perennial sow thistle, one of the worst weeds with which farmers have to contend, has spread during the past 25 years until now it is reported in every township in Ontario, according to A. B. G. Smith of New Hamburg, supervisor of weed inspectors of Western Ontario.

This plant does not produce a bloom the same year that it grows from the seed. If you see a single sow thistle in bloom you may know it was in the field the previous year. The plant can be controlled by farm practice. The root of the perennial sow thistle will not stand heat. Experiments by Prof. J. E. Howitt of the O. A. C., Guelph, showed that where the roots were exposed to the sun by a summer fallow, they would die in one day. Oats and barley are the two spring crops which give the perennial sow thistle a chance to mature at seed. Pull wheat, hay and pasture crops, if harvested in time keep the plant from going to seed. Fall cultivation is not so effective as summer cultivation. The autumn is cooler and damper.

Feeding Hogs For Market

At the Dominion Experimental Station, Fredericton, N.B., experiments have been carried on to determine the value when fed to hogs of feeds commonly produced on the farm. Potatoes, skim-milk and oats were the main feeds under consideration, which were fed on a mixture of grains, mill feeds and milk were compared with hogs fed barley on a mixture of crushed oats, mill dlings, potatoes and milk. Two lots were started on cooked potatoes, meal and milk and finished on raw potatoes, meal and milk. Potatoes were fed at the rate of 4 pounds to one pound of meal.

All lots made equally good gains during the first nine weeks of the feeding period. The hogs receiving raw potatoes during the finishing period required twelve days longer to finish than the meal fed lots but a considerable saving in meal was obtained in the potato fed lots. The carcasses were scored similar to those in advanced registry and there was no significant difference in the carcasses of hogs from each group.

In this test, 5.35 pounds of potatoes replaced one pound of meal. Although it was found that the cooked potatoes were worth only two-thirds as much as when fed raw. Cooked potatoes would therefore, have a value of 39 cents per hundred. At the present value of pork, feeds marketed through hogs return a handsome profit and a market is created for feeds which might otherwise be a problem.

Hogs on Advanced Registry at the Dominion Experimental Station, at Fredericton, N.B., are being fed grains and a protein supplement without any skim-milk. It has been demonstrated that hogs may make equally good gains when fed a protein supplement other than skim-milk. This is of particular interest to farmers having a supply of grains and potatoes, but little or no skim-milk.

IF I OWNED A FARM

(P.A.K., in Philadelphia Public Ledger)

I'd read the frayed and badly thumbed back issues of farmers' home and garden magazines in my dentist's office. Then I'd paint the exterior of the farmhouse white and the shutters green.

I'd hang cretonne drapes faced with white at the windows.

"I'd cover all the furniture with cretonne to match. Then

I'd lay a rose border of conventional design in the living room, and a green grass rug in the dining room. Then

"I'd plant a great variety of shrubs around the house, and ramblers over the pergola which I should build to connect the summer kitchen with the workhouse. Then

I'd paint the barn, stables and silo a soft gray, and the roofs a darker tone. Then

I'd build a concrete wash basin through which there would flow water to wallow in coing to and coming from their swill. Then

I'd install some sort of a silencer which could be inserted in a rooster's throat without hurting his dignity. Then

I'd teach the cows better manners generally. Then

I'd provide for the sheep those tortoise-shell spectacles which are doing so much towards making other creatures appear less dumb. Then

I'd require the hired help to purchase handkerchiefs, and to use them for store on Sundays. Then

I'd buy back bank cars of deodorizer. Then

I'd spray the entire place with fly, mosquito and other insect poisons. Then I'd sell it!

POOR LI'L FELLER

Sweetest little feller,
Sleeping there alone,
Don't know what awaits him
When his babyhood has flown;
Mom and Pop will teach him
Bridge the way they play,
Then he'll get in arguments
And yell the same as they,
When he's there a-sleeping
In his little place,
Couldn't tell a psychic
From a desice or ace,
But when he's a little older,
When he starts to learn,
Then he'll hear his partners
Call him names that burn.
Sweetest little feller,
Ignorant is bliss,
What his parents think of
When they give their babe a kiss!
Pledged to be an expert
By their very hugs,
Poor predestined baby
Of a pair of contract bugs.

ANCIENT ARMAMENTS

A curious sidelight on America's indifferent success in bringing criminals to justice, is afforded by a report of Mr. John J. Murphy, the new United States Marshal. The duties of his office include the guarding, and transport of prisoners, and one of his first actions on appointment was to inspect the equipment of his agents. He discovered to his surprise that most of them bought their own weapons and were unarmed now a thistle in bloom you may know it was in the field the previous year. The plant can be controlled by farm practice. The root of the perennial sow thistle will not stand heat. Experiments by Prof. J. E. Howitt of the O. A. C., Guelph, showed that where the roots were exposed to the sun by a summer fallow, they would die in one day. Oats and barley are the two spring crops which give the perennial sow thistle a chance to mature at seed. Pull wheat, hay and pasture crops, if harvested in time keep the plant from going to seed. Fall cultivation is not so effective as summer cultivation. The autumn is cooler and damper. ments arsenal at Boston.

Wonder ceased when he inspected the arsenal and found that the only firearms in stock were revolvers handed over for police use when the Federal troops were disbanded at the close of the Civil War! There was no ammunition under twenty years old, and the latest pattern in handcuffs dated from 1880. He is advocating the transfer of these antiques to a museum and presenting Congress with a demand for complete rearmament.—Miscellany.

A FRIGHTENED BISHOP

Book borrowers have had a bad name for centuries, but it would seem that they do not deserve it to-day for at the opening of the new headquarters of the National Central Library, it was stated that although many thousands of books are lent annually the average loss from all causes is only one volume a year. From the earliest times book-lovers were jealous of their possessions. An MS. book in the Bodleian Library, which was once in the Robertsbridge Sussex, monastic library, contains the inscription: "This book belongs to Saint Mary of Robertsbridge./Whoever shall steal or call it or fix any alienate from this house or mutilate it let him be anathama maranatha."

About 1328 the book came into the possession of John de Grandisno Bishop of Exeter, who was apparently so alarmed by the inscribed monkish threat that he carefully wrote under it: "I John, Bishop of Exeter, know not where the aforesaid house is nor did I steal this book; but acquired it in a lawful way."

THE ENIGMATICAL SCHOOL

It remains to be seen whether the fashion set by Mr. Pu Yi, Emperor of Manchukuo, in sending a poem of his own composition to King George will be followed by other new rulers; it would be cheaper, at least, than the older custom of sending an Embassy to announce an accession. But, for the sake of King George it may be hoped that the poem itself will not conform to one of the older Chinese models. One of the Russels had a tale about Robert Browning, for which, whether true or not, Browning himself seems to have been responsible originally. Some time in the eighteen-seventies Browning was introduced to the Chinese Ambassador at a party in London, and the interpreter, who also acted as interpreter, improved the occasion by remarking that the introduction was a specially happy one since the two were certain to find plenty in common, both being poets.

Browning and the Ambassador began to talk, and presently Browning asked how exactly Chinese poetry differed from English. "Four volumes at present," replied the Ambassador. "And what style of poetry does your Excellency cultivate?" "Chiefly the enigmatical," replied the Ambassador gravely. "Ah!," added Browning in telling the story, "we felt doubly brothers after that."

At the same time it may be admitted that the cultivation of the enigmatical by an Emperor of Manchukuo would seem to have in it a certain propriety.—Miscellany.

NO HERO TO HIS VALET

There have been some very competent diplomatists among Mr. Bullitt's predecessors as American representatives in Russia, and there have been some—well, not so competent. In his autobiography, Mr. Andrew D. White, who himself filled the post with distinction, tells a story of one of them who was sent to Russia as American Minister about the year 1840. Sobriety was not this gentleman's especial virtue, as his valet, an Irishman, soon discovered. One day the valet went to see the American Consulate and said: "O'll not stay wid his Excellency anye longer. O'll tell him so." "What's the trouble now?" asked the Consul.

"Why," said the man, "this morning Oi thought it was time to get his lordship out of bed, for he had been drinking about a week and he had most of the time; and so Oi went to him, and says, Oi, gentlemoike, 'Would your lordship have a cup of coffee?' with he rose up and dhrew me in the face. On that 'Oi took him' by the collar, lifted him out of bed, took him across the room, shoved him his self face in the glass, and Oi said to him, says Oi, 'Is thim the eyes of an invoy extraorr-rdinary and minister plinipotentiary ?'"—Miscellany.

CHOCOLATE CUP CAKES

These little cakes are easy to make. The rule will make ten or twelve, depending on the size of the cups.

One cup flour.
One teaspoon baking powder.
Half a teaspoon salt.
Two tablespoons butter.
Half a cup of sugar.
One egg. Half a teaspoon vanilla.
Two tablespoons milk.
One square of bitter chocolate.

Mix and sift flour, salt and baking powder. Sift three times. Cream butter and gradually beat in sugar, beating until the mixture is very light. Melt chocolate over hot water and beat into butter mixture. Beat egg until light, with milk. Add flavor and alternately with dry ingredients to first mixture, adding dry ingredients first. Stir to keep smooth. Pour into oiled and floured muffin pans or baking cups and bake fifteen minutes in a moderate, 375 degrees F. oven. Cover with icing or not, as you prefer.

STUFFED TOMATO SALAD

Four medium sized tomatoes.
Four hard cooked eggs.
Four tablespoons diced celery.
Four tablespoons cold boiled ham (optional), boiled salad dressing.

Scald and chill tomatoes. Peel and scoop out the seeds. Sprinkle the inside with salt and pepper and turn upside-down to drain. This step is important because it tends to make the tomato firm. Hard cook eggs and chop coarsely. Add celery and ham and enough salad dressing to make quite moist. Fill tomatoes with mixture and put each tomato into a small basking cup lined with lettuce leaves. Chill until ready to serve.

A "boiled" dressing is chosen in place of mayonnaise because the boiled dressing stands up better than mayonnaise which tends to separate if treated too roughly.

Sandwiches of chopped olives and pimentoes are good to serve with this salad. Cream cheese and finely chopped nuts together with lettuce sandwich might complete the assortment.

SIMNEL CAKE

8 ozs. self-raising flour.
6 ozs. each powdered sugar and butter.
10 ozs. currants.
4 ozs. candied peel.
3 Eggs.

Almond Paste
6 ozs. ground almonds.
8 ozs. powdered sugar.
One large egg.
Lemon juice.

First make the almond paste by mixing the ground almonds with the sugar, then adding the egg and sufficient lemon juice to form a paste, and divide the mixture in two. Cream the butter and sugar together, add the eggs, one at a time, and beat well. Sift together the flour and a pinch of salt, then add the currants and chopped candied peel. Add these to the butter, etc and beat well. Line a tin with greased paper and put in half the cake mixture; put in a layer of the almond paste, cover with the remaining cake mixture and bake in a moderate oven for two hours. When cold, put a band of almond paste round the edge of the cake and mark it with a fork. Make little balls of the paste and put them inside the band, then brown slightly under the grill. Decorate.

BIRD'S NEST CAKE

Two eggs.
3 ozs. sugar.
2½ ozs. self-raising flour.
Jam. Browned coconut.

For the Filling
1½ ozs. ground almonds.
3 ozs. powdered sugar.
One small egg (used as required).

Whisk the eggs and sugar until very thick, then lightly fold in the flour. Grease a baking-tin well, then dust with flour and pour in the sponge mixture, baking in a moderate oven for 15 or 20 minutes. Allow to cool, then cut a round from from the top to represent a nest. Brush the sponge with hot jam, then roll it in the browned coconut. For the filling, mix the almonds and sugar to a stiff paste with the egg, then work in a little colouring to part of the paste, and roll into small eggs. Serve on a green doyley, putting the eggs into the nest, and adding a fluffy chicken.

SUMMARY OF NEW REGULATIONS AND LAWS AFFECTING AGRICULTURE

PASSED AT 1934 SESSION OF PARLIAMENT

— BILL 38 —
AN ACT RESPECTING THE DAIRY INDUSTRY

This Act is amended to make it compulsory to place the date of manufacture of cheese on the cheese and also on the cheese box. The date is to be placed on the cheese within 24 hours after manufacture. This legislation is considered essential in order to determine the length of time between manufacture and grading as cheese should have a certain amount of maturity in order to determine accurately its grade and keeping quality. Also, the legislation has the effect of discouraging the boxing and shipping of cheese from the factory in too green a condition, which results in poor rind formation. A standard stipulating the maximum amount of moisture allowable in processed cheese, was also passed as a new regulation.

Of particular interest to the creamery industry are regulations providing for the grading of butter for domestic consumption and the placing of the grade on the wrapper and on the carton. The grading is optional except in provinces which may pass enabling legislation. The regulations also prohibit the making of false, misleading or exaggerated claims with respect of the quality of any dairy product, whether such claims are made by advertisement or on the package.

The grading of butter for domestic use has been brought about with the hope of satisfying improved by consumer preference. In the past, there has been much second grade butter sold under fancy place names that did not convey anything to the consumer as to quality. It is expected that the placing of the grade on the carton or wrapper will mean that the consumer will be encouraged to ask for "First Grade" butter, therby discouraging the manufacture of lower grades. Also, the indication of grade will, it is expected, tend to create a wider differential in price between the grades which will ultimately reflect back in the price received for the cream by the producer.

— BILL 39 —
AN ACT TO AMEND THE DESTRUCTIVE INSECT AND PEST ACT

The amendment to this Act merely consisted of a re-wording of Section 11, without changing the intent or purpose of the section in question. And should be regarded as a clarifying and interpretative section of the Act. The re-wording of the section was regarded as necessary from a legal rather than administrative points of view. The Act, as it now stands, enables a province to deal with the control of any insect, pest or disease, destructive to vegetation within the province, irrespective of whether the said pest or disease is dealt with by Federal regulations provided, however, that the provincial legislation is not in conflict with the Federal legislation. For example, the European corn borer is dealt with by Federal regulation by the strict importation of corn and its products is prohibited from infested areas, and likewise the movement of the said products from infested areas in Canada. On the other hand, two provinces at least have legislation in force dealing with the control of this insect within their respective boundaries. In accordance with the amendment, this provincial legislation is not contrary to the Federal regulations.

ENCOURAGEMTNT TO AUTHORS

There would seem to be new hopes for writers in 1934, since someone has offered prizes of $50 each to a number of authors whose works have given him pleasure in life. This is a little like the beginning of a return to the good old times when authors could expect to receive a "tip" from a patron and a dedication might produce some much-needed dollars. Novelists, outside the pinnacle class are frequently assured by their publishers that it is quite wrong to imagine that the author's work is done when he has finished his book and corrected his proofs. He must help himself: it is the personal touch, he is told, which sells books. And so, in future, we may have the aspiring author touring round as of old, for subscribers and sending copies of his books to rich people in the hope that he may acquire a patron or two.

Fifty dollars may not sound much, but there are cases in which the novelist does not clear much more than $50.00 in a year on a book; and in any case, the advertisement of the publication of such a bequest is worth something. It has been the fate of some authors in recent, as in earlier, times to die unrecognized and to secure posthumous fame through the praises of some public personage; if it is the patron who dies first and leaves his praise and something more substantial to the author, the result must be much more satisfactory.—Miscellany.

THE ART OF MAKING TEA

No beverage in the world is as universally popular as tea. It is used to nearly every household and this delightful drink not only refreshes and invigorates the mind and body, but also serves as a medium by which people meet in a spirit of friendship and understanding, the world over.

If the following directions (which were supplied by Salada Tea) are followed, each cup will yield the full delicious flavour that makes tea so enjoyable:

1. Use a tea of fine quality.
2. Use fresh water always.
3. Use an earthenware tea-pot.

Scald out the pot to make it warm. Allow 2 to 3 level teaspoons of tea for every cup desired, and one for the pot. Add fresh boiling water. Allow to steep for a minimum and stir lightly before serving.

Tea made according to the above rules will be fragrant, delicious and completely satisfying.

Japan Now Using Domestic Wheat

Higher Prices Prohibit Import of Canadian and Australian Grain

Big Japanese flour milling companies have recently turned largely to domestic wheat as a result of lower prices of Canadian and Australian wheat, attributed to the drought in the United States.

Japan's wheat yield has increased remarkably in recent years, due to the fostering of wheat farming by the Minister of Agriculture and Forestry.

The price of the Japanese product has not kept pace with Canadian or even Australian wheat in spite of the low-priced wheat from the latter Dominion.

"Hitherto, large flour mills have used mostly imported wheat due to its superior quality while the small flour mills used domestic wheat. However, have used the domestic wheat as they were close to the source of supply and the quality has satisfied their country customers.

Average wheat flour cut seriously into Manchukuo market this year due to low prices, the business being in the hands of the large firm of Mitsui. During the summer however, the Japanese mills resumed import of the Manchukuo market owing to higher Australian prices.

In view of the greatly increased imports of domestic wheat by the four mills, due to their recovery of the Manchukuo market as well as increased exports to other Far Eastern markets, stocks are rapidly decreasing.

As a result, a brisk demand for imported wheat should develop later.

says MRS. JEANNE MCKENZIE, whose cakes have won First Prize at two Canadian National Expositions, Toronto

MAGIC BAKING POWDER costs so little—and it gives consistently better baking results. Actually less than 1¢ worth of this fine-quality baking powder makes a good big cake. It doesn't pay to take chances with inferior baking powder. Bake with Magic and be sure!
